THE REMEDY

SPEED

If trouble comes, speed is essential.

Most of the 4,000 theatres now equipped can be reached by expert assistance with a supply of parts within an hour.

Over 200 service points — engineers available day and night — $500,000 stock of parts at 38 branch headquarters.

PREVENTION

Routine inspections for sources of trouble by ERPI Service organization of 600 skilled engineers in every Western Electric equipped theatre.

Application of every known scientific method of preventing program interruption.

How Western Electric equipped theatres profit—

1928—One emergency call per theatre per month.

1930 — Less than one emergency call per theatre every six months.

PERMANENCE

Only with this standard of service and quality of Western Electric equipment has talking picture success been made possible.

ERPI will continue these exclusive features during the continuance of its contracts — with an ever increasing effort to improve the standard of talking picture performance.

PROFITS

80% of the theatre profits gained by talking pictures is credited to the 4,000 theatres now equipped with Western Electric and receiving ERPI service — proof positive that the best sound equipment costs less.

Harmony Between Zukor and Schenck To Lead To Paramount-Fox Tie-Up?

Just How Do You Mean That, Mister?

Producers are said to have given up the idea of filming "Elizabeth, the Virgin Queen," in Hollywood, due, as one New York newspaper writer puts it, to difficulties in casting the title role.

Operettas Out At 1st National; Cost Too Much

Hollywood—First National is discontinuing production of musical operettas, according to local report. Company figures this type of picture very expensive to produce, and audience reaction has not been sufficient to justify costs.

One more operetta, "Stolen Dreams," from an original by Jerome Kern and Otto Harbach, remains on the schedule. Others may be made to take care of contract obligations.

It is understood that First National will go in for more musical pictures with comedy predominating and similar to "Hold Everything" and "Going Wild," Joe E. Brown featured filmusical comedies.

Gaynor-Farrell In One; Fox to Save B. O. Drag

The Gaynor-Farrell combination will be saved from the way of all celluloid teams, according to production plans made for them next season.

Winnie Sheehan has the team scheduled for one picture, "Oh, for a Man," to which Dave Butler has been assigned, and that's all. Miss Gaynor will make three other pictures with John Garrick, Kenneth MacKenna and Humphrey Bogart as her leading men. Farrell is down for "The Man Who Came Back," "Devil with Women," "The Princess and the Plumber" and "She's My Girl." Number three will have Maureen O'Sullivan as the femme lead and the last of the Farrell group, Joyce Compton. Both will be pictures of the Gaynor-Farrell type.

Rift Over M-G-M Sale to Fox Healed, Thus Paving Way to Mutual Co-operation

Strained relations engendered between Adolph Zukor and Nicholas M. Schenck by the Fox-Loew deal are declared to have been dispelled and the long friendship between the two company heads renewed.

Whether this personal development has a significance so far as their respective companies is concerned, is not apparent, although there have been repeated reports that a working deal between Fox and Paramount is in the wind.

This arrangement ostensibly covers bookings, but in some quarters, as pointed out by Motion Picture News, it is stated that a theatre acquisition truce between the two firms is being developed.

The Zukor-Schenck controversy dates back to Fox's purchase of Loew stock, when the former was declared to have been offended by the deal Schenck made, taking the position that his long friendship with the late Marcus Loew and the close working arrangement between the companies entitled him to first bid if the stock was up for sale. This operating arrangement had been so close, that for some time it was felt that a pooling of interests of the two firms was a practical certainty.

Since that time, the Zukor favor has gone to Warners. At one time, merging of the companies was regarded as but a matter of ironing out of details. When the hitch developed, relations became strained, culminating at Atlantic City in what is regarded as an open declaration of war against Paramount by Harry M. Warner.

With Warner and R-K-O now seen drifting toward close friendship, by virtue of the DuPont-Raskob holdings in both firms, a Paramount-Fox liaison is being anticipated. Fox is the dominant factor on the Coast and in Wisconsin, in two of the very few sections where Paramount does not occupy a commanding position or one of parity. With Warners expanding at a rapid pace in these territories, a Fox-Paramount coalition is seen in some quarters as particularly advantageous to Paramount, which, in turn, could extend concessions to Fox in other territories.

This may be the purpose of reported dropping of plans for a Fox circuit in Canada, which Paramount dominates, and Paramount's reported decision to stay out of Milwaukee, a Fox stronghold. It also may be the cause of reported delay in getting the Paramount theatre drive under way on the Coast. Paramount was at grips with Fox when William Fox was in the saddle. Any coalition then was declared impossible, because of Fox's desire to play a lone hand. The new president, Harley L. Clarke, is said to have the opposite view about operation, and may be ready to subscribe to a coalition.

News to Laemmle

Hollywood—"There is not a word of truth to these reports and there are no negotiations as far as I know," is Carl Laemmle's statement to Motion Picture News in answer to reports that Universal is about to be sold.

10 Year Contract Protects Junior If "U" Sells Out

Back of the new ten year contract signed by Universal with Carl Laemmle, Jr., as general manager of the studio is reported the desire of Laemmle pere to protect the future of his one and only son regardless of which way the company jumps.

It is now an open secret that Laemmle is willing to dispose of his company and that A. C. Blumenthal, who whipped many deals into shape for William Fox, including the Loew and Gaumont British buys, is acting for the Universal chief.

Several weeks ago, it is understood the Warners looked like possible purchasers of "U," but this deal has now cooled off.

Andy Doffs the Whiskers, And Becomes an Unknown

Educational's billing of Andy Clyde in a new short, "Fat Wives for Thin," developed into somewhat of a mystery, with several exhibs and many fans demanding an apology for what was described as highway robbery in mentioning Andy's name when there wasn't a trace of him in the entire two thousand feet.

Hurry-calls were made to the home office and they screened a print to see what it was all about. They found that the kickers were right. Yep, Andy was among the missing, and so a big squawk was sent to Coast studio powers for their carelessness in forgetting to turn the camera at the proper angle so as to catch Andy and his sloppy makeup.

The return note from Hollywood, however, solved the mystery. Andy is in the picture short, but sans baggy trousers, and without the soup-strainer whiskers. They found him to be a smartly polished "Colman," with white ducks and all that which goes to make a "sheik" out of a "heel."

Vol. XLI NEW YORK CITY, JUNE 14, 1930 No. 24

FOREIGN TROUBLES MEAN DOMESTIC TROUBLES, TOO

THE final chapter of the story that talkers are writing overseas carries all of the suspense of a Van Dine thriller. Nobody quite knows, yet everybody is guessing.

Perhaps the industry went haywire when its business structure took form by depending for thirty to forty per cent of the world gross from foreign markets, but reflection along that line won't help in the face of a revenue that persists in dwindling steadily as the weeks slide by.

What is of the moment is that New York executives are worried to a point far beyond comfort by the unexpected twist imparted to their export trade by the growing popularity of talkers in Europe and South America. The circumstance is boomerang-like in its effect because the language barriers thus thrown up are breaking down the international saleability of motion pictures.

Well-established star values are crumbling overseas, despite the vogue developed for them through years of intensive and widespread distribution, for the appallingly simple reason that few Hollywood celebrities are linguistic enough to talk in any other tongue but their native Americanese.

Those stellar commodities are, consequently, outside the pale for foreign distribution. That, in itself, is threatening enough, but when it is realized further that American producers have nobody with which to replace them, the complexity of the problem becomes easier to grasp.

Quotas, Taxes and Patents

Add to that situation irksome quotas and, where quotas do not exist, high and excessive taxation. Also the involved patent situation centering in Germany and reaching into border states which is further narrowing down the outlet for American talkers. And the entire picture is before you.

Producers eventually may be successful in turning out pictures for overseas consumption. Certainly, they will make the effort. How the costly venture will pan out is something for future events to accurately foretell. The one experience to turn to for a harbinger of what may come is the experience of the past. Not a single major company ever has made a go of foreign production and that applies clear down the line.

It seems to this commentator that it might be far wiser for executive heads now furrowing their brows in New York to make up their minds that the gold-rush days are gone insofar as income from abroad is concerned. The realization will be difficult to reach after so many years of dependence upon foreign business for profits.

That this observation bears the earmarks of the final outcome is conceded to be true by export managers who discuss their worries in private. If they were willing to unlock their lips, these men would tell you that there appears to be no other way out.

What they won't admit is that the antipathy which exists all through Europe, in particular, against American pictures finds its origin and its growth in American methods. Had a semblance of reciprocity been instilled into dealings on the other side, rather than a dominant desire to milk those markets until they ran dry, today there might exist an appreciation of the problem facing this industry and perhaps a desire to help.

Where the Load Belongs

The domestic exhibitor figures in this international complication more deeply than he realizes. This is why: If producers continue to find their foreign markets slipping away from them, the inclination will be to make up differences in rentals by foisting the additional tariff on the backs of the American showman. Exactly what the unorganized exhibitor can do about it but squawk is one tough question to answer.

What the producer must bear in mind, however, is somewhat easier to fathom. He should not make the mistake of switching cargo in the middle of the stream. He should understand that rentals are heavy enough for his native customer to carry without inflicting more freight on a sadly bent back. If he insists, the consequences might easily prove disastrous.

Too many exhibitors are now facing a dubious future. Too many are being forced out of the running by the drift of the small town population to the larger centers.

If the day arrives when this extra burden must be carried, let the producer tax his own theatres. That's where the load properly belongs.

Du Ponts Soon in Control of Warners Through Stock Buys; Raskob on Board?

Does This Explain Caesar's Quick Exit to Hollywood?

"Among the gentlemen we miss along Broadway these days is Arthur Caesar, whom the movies lured to Hollywood some weeks ago," pens Mark Hellinger. "Arthur," states Mark, "is a chap who speaks a great deal about nothing. But he says nothing in such an engaging way that you must grow to like him.

"Arthur owed a great deal of money around New York before he left and never made any bones about it. As a matter of fact, his various loans were always a matter of jest with him. He laughed at his creditors—and most of them laughed with him."

There were some, however, who couldn't see the thing in Caesar's light!

Raw Stock Interests Becoming Dominant in Film Firm; Seeking Others

More aggressive participation in the industry by the DuPont interests is being forecast in financial circles as the result of their steady acquisition of stock in Warners.

This stock acquisition is said to be reaching a point where the DuPonts shortly will have operating control with the Warner Bros. continuing management of the firm, which they have brought in a few years from the verge of bankruptcy to a commanding position in the field.

Recurring reports that John J. Raskob is to be made chairman of the board of directors of Warners are pointed to as supporting the contention that the DuPonts are becoming dominant factors in Warner affairs. Raskob has admitted the heavy purchases in Warners, stating they were made because he and his associates felt the stock was a good investment.

Raw Stock Big Factor

The DuPonts own a 51 per cent interest in Pathe-DuPont, which distributes the DuPont raw stock. A union of the Warner-DuPont interests would provide the necessary link to make the Warner organization entirely self-contained. Recent Warner moves in the music, radio, phonograph and sound film equipment fields were made with this object in view and the raw stock source would round out the cycle.

Plans of the DuPonts involve probable taking over of other companies, it is learned.

A Yes-Man's Holiday!

Leo Heatley, local scribbler, tells the week's best yarn, which has its setting on the Atlantic City boardwalk. Crowded with delegates attending the convention of the radio manufacturers' association, suddenly, from Atlantic avenue, there burst a man wearing white flannels, and all the doo-dads which go with them. His face was flushed and he was taking long strides. And in a loud voice he was shouting:

"NO!! NO!!! NO!!!! NO!!!!!"

At the foot of Tennessee avenue a movie man from Hollywood was strolling with A. Atwater Kent when the boisterous one came along, still yelling "NO! NO! NO!"

"Good Lord!" exclaimed Kent. "What's that, a crazy man?"

"Oh, him?" said the movie man. "That's one of Cecil B. DeMille's assistants—on vacation!"

Fox Wins Out In Milwaukee Theatre Fight

Milwaukee—Just when Milwaukee was sitting back to enjoy a rip-roaring, four-cornered fight in the first-run situation here, through invasion of Paramount-Publix, Fox stepped in and closed a deal for the theatre. And Milwaukee is trying to figure what it is all about.

The "deal" between Paramount and Fox, which will give the latter operation of the $3,000,000 house directly opposite R-K-O's Palace-Orpheum, and diagonally across from Fox's Wisconsin, may mean a number of things, particularly in view of Fox's plan to build a house two blocks west of the site where the Paramount was to go up. It is probable this latter project will be abandoned.

Warners, which now has the former Universal houses, and R-K-O are the other corners of the local triangle. Both are sponsoring new first-run projects.

Summer Trek to Continent Under Way with Bang

They're off for London, Paris, Deauville, Le Touquet and points East.

En route to Europe are Will H. Hays, Joseph I. Schnitzer, Jules Brulatour, Hope Hampton and Ambrose Dowling as the advance guard of picture people who will vacation and conduct business on the other side this summer.

Harry M. Warner cancelled passage on the Bremen due to a sudden heart attack suffered by his father, but it is expected the Warner family will go abroad later.

Joe Schenck will make the trek later, unless plans undergo a last-minute change.

Catchings to Retire as Head of Warner Finances

Retirement of Waddill Catchings as head of the Warner finance committee is being forecast, following his resignation as president of the Goldman-Sachs Trading Corp.

Hands Off Policy By President on Injunction Bill

Washington—Placing the Administration in a somewhat embarrasing position, the Shipstead anti-injunction bill has been referred back to the Senate judiciary committee, with the attorney general's office declining to pass upon its constitutionality as requested.

The bill has the backing of organized labor and is opposed by the National Ass'n. of Manufacturers. It seeks to prohibit the use of the injunction as a weapon in labor fights, and directly affects controversies in the film industry. The measure was the subject of recent cabinet discussion.

Now Clubwomen Would Make the Pace Dizzier

Toledo—Plan to put clubwomen of the nation into the picture business as producers and exhibitors, conceived by Prof. Walter B. Pitkin, head of the school of journalism at Columbia University, New York, was presented to the Toledo M. P. Council by Mrs. C. E. Farnum of Dallas.

The plan calls for the organization of a producing company with studios in New York, financial backing to be supplied by New York capital and women's clubs throughout the country. If groups in 50 towns will subscribe to the stock it is believed by sponsors that New York financiers can be interested in the idea sufficiently to put it into operation.

Civic organizations lining up with the proposition would rent at their expense a local film house for one performance a week, playing films supplied at a low rental price by the production group. If no theatre could be rented, the local club would furnish a selected exhibitor with the film for a weekly program and guarantee receipts up to a certain figure. The organization would handle the ticket sale, keeping any receipts above the guarantee.

As planned by Pitkin, all stock in the venture would be of one class and it is understood that salaries of the producing staff would be considerably under those prevailing in the industry today.

The Toledo organization has taken no definite action on the proposition, pending correspondence with Pitkin and consultation with local exhibitors.

The Insiders' Outlook

HEAP big mystery over future activities of Bill Fox, the former head of the companies bearing his name, is now back in New York following a seven weeks' sojourn in Atlantic City, where he combined a rest with what is described by one close to him as "considerable business."

This spokesman further narrates that Fox has a number of deals on the fire, some of them in the picture business, some of them out of it. "If one move goes through as anticipated, the film business is due for a surprise," he added, cautiously.

In the interim, the advisory board at the Fox offices which Fox was himself to head for five years, continues a phantom. That committee is destined never to meet and was brought into existence on paper merely to give Fox a graceful out when Harley L. Clarke purchased control.

Whether Fox, under the deal, can resume activity in the industry for the next five years has been the subject of considerable speculation, since the new regime stepped in. The preponderance of opinion, as closely as it can be cross-sectioned, is that Fox cannot under provisos of his selling arrangement.

There are those who fail to see how Clarke could have made the buy without assuring himself that competition in the form of another company bearing the same name as the one he had purchased would be eliminated.

That may be that. There are others knowing Fox, who likewise fail to see how the aggressiveness in the man can be battered down sufficiently to keep him out, either as an operator on his own or through agents.

Figures and Headaches

Locale. The Hollywood theatre on Broadway.

Time: Matinee on Tuesday.

Track: Wet.

The Sad Story: At 2:45, a count of the audience ended at 41 occupied seats. As the lights dimmed for the shorts, seven more straggled in. During the shorts, the total jumped three.

One man and two women who purchased balcony seats found themselves escorted into the orchestra, discovered what they thought was a mistake, and so informed the usher.

"Anything wrong, sir?" asked the usher.

"Yes, we bought balcony seats and aren't entitled to sit down here," remarked the honest patron

"Sorry, sir, but you see the balcony is closed today."

To this minute, the dazed individual probably doesn't know what happened.

An extremely attractive theatre, its program blazoned forth in myriads of mazdas, backed up by display advertising in New York dailies and 41 admissions—granting all were paid—to fill it. It was the saddest, and at the same time most significant, spectacle this particular member of The Insiders had seen in some time.

Bad, because of reasons that are most obvious. Significant, because it is the unfortunate reflection of a condition prevalent in many theatres throughout the nation.

It's Getting Hotter

The Warner-Zukor fracas grows in intensity. During the week, two choice Chicago houses, the Avalon and the Capitol, were annexed, thereby projecting the brothers into the most jealously guarded situation in the whole Paramount Publix line-up. And just so that there won't be any mistake, it is well to note that the Avalon and Capitol, acquired from Jimmy Coston, are on the South Side of the Windy City and direct—very direct—competition to B. and K. in the same zone.

But that isn't all. The Warners are after other theatres there and are confident they'll get them. Now. It cost Paramount many millions to acquire B. and K. and it follows, therefore, that additional millions will be spent to safegard the original investment. In other words, Adolph Zukor should not be expected to accept the Warner invasion into territory predominantly Paramount without firing a few guns of his own.

Considerable interest was voiced during the week over Empeenews' exclusive on the rift between Warner and Zukor. The yarn was read avidly and pondered over plentifully in many offices. Particularly when time was—not long ago—that Adolph and Harry exchanged plans and confidences with a freedom that indicated one eventuality: a merger of their interests.

As a matter of fact, one discerning individual inclined toward skepticism and regarded the Warner stand as a camouflage to draw a red herring or two across the trail. That is well within the realm of possibilities, but, in the light of what is taking place, plus many markers which indicate the feeling between the two organizations, hardly probable.

Yes, Mr. Zukor?

Up from the menacing canyons of Wall Street come the confidential tips.

That Zukor is ready to sell Paramount.

That the deal will have to be in cash.

That the Paramount chief is about ready to withdraw from business, feeling confident—and properly so, of course—that he can rest on his record.

The counter-weight to these oft-heard reports is Zukor's latest retort, prompted by the yarn David Sarnoff stood ready to buy on behalf of R-K-O, that there was nothing to it.

And yet, that downtown rumble has a persistent echo.

Looking Ahead

Young man named Clarke hasn't been in the industry long, yet, by his business deeds, he already demonstrates his appreciation for the value of manpower. Let's see. It's only a handful of months since the utilities magnate assumed control of the Fox and this is what he has done to bulwark his personnel:

Five year contracts with Winnie Sheehan, Louis Mayer, Irving Thalberg, Jimmy Grainger and Bob Rubin.

That assures him the services of the man who put the Fox plant on the entertainment map and of the man who backed up the studio by cutting fancy sales capers. Sheehan and Grainger.

The same control that has been turning out M-G-M product for years likewise stays on the job. Mayer and Thalberg. Here in New York, as liason officer between sources of material and the production plant, is Rubin, Mayer's partner and business associate of many years' standing.

It should be said for Clarke that it didn't take him long to find out how essential it was to keep key men functioning in the jobs where they belong. Obvious, you say? Granted, but how many other executives in this business do it?

THE INSIDERS.

Ad Men Come Into Their Own as Swing To Percentage Ushers in Big Campaigns

Unison of Writers Surprising

Hollywood—This burg is "puzzled by the manner in which the press of the country has accepted the new Hays self-imposed censorship code for film producers," if we are to believe Tamar Lane, who, writing in "Film Mercury," says: "The concensus of opinion seems to be that it is an utter impossibility for producers to abide by the Hays code and still turn out entertainment. This is not news to Hollywood, which long ago came to the same conclusion, but scenarists and producers are surprised to find editorial writers agreeing with them."

Blackmailers in Hollywood — —? Ask Con Conrad

Omigosh!!!

A sinister gang of heartless blackmailers operating in Hollywood.

Can it be true?

Well, ask Mark Hellinger, who, writing in the New York Mirror, states that we all "should really visit Hollywood, that dear old town on the West Coast, if you enjoy your blackmail served hot and heavy."

"I knew we had plenty of shyster lawyers in New York," writes Hellinger, "but the phoney attorneys in the movie town make our boys look like pikers.

"There are several lawyers out there, for instance, who actually pay girls by the week in order to dig up blackmail cases. Five of them are hired, let us say, at the rate of $50 each per week. If they each bring in but one case a week and the thing is settled for $500, the lawyer splits with the girl and turns a very neat profit for himself.

"Blackmail is a pretty familiar cry in Hollywood. Even so gallant a gentleman as Mr. Charles Chaplin arose in his wrath some three years ago and charged Lita Grey Chaplin with blackmailing him. That wasn't very nice of Charlie. But he did say it, you know.

"If you have any doubts about the blackmail racket in the movie town you might ask Mr. Con Conrad, expert songwriter and the ex-husband of Francine Larrimore, about it the next time you see him. They took Mr. Conrad last Summer—and they took him beautifully. Here's how it was worked:

"Con was on the Fox lot one afternoon when two girls passed his bungalow. Two pretty girls, too—although that doesn't make such an awful difference to Con. They gave Mr. Conrad the big eye and Con looked at them in surprise. Two pretty girls on the make for him? He should have known right then and there that it wasn't on the level.

"At any rate he invited them into his bungalow. They came. Very willingly. And not more than thirty seconds had elapsed when one of the little ladies requested a drink.

"Not on the lot," said Con cautiously. "That's bad business. However, if you kids want to take a little spin out to my house in the hills——"

Some thirty minutes later the damsels were

Paramount Moves In Canada Eyed By Government

Ottawa—Any widespread replacement of Canadians as a result of the Paramount-Famous Canadian Corp. deal will be followed by action on the part of the Dept. of Labor. The alien labor act, which serves the same purpose in a commercial way as the quota law, would be invoked if Canadian managers are replaced by "aliens." The labor department some time ago launched an investigation of sale of the Canadian firm to Paramount to determine if the combines act was being violated.

Ottawa—The sale of Famous Players Canadian Corp. to Paramount Publix is not a closed incident as far as the Government is concerned. There was an echo of the deal in the Canadian House of Commons when, during the closing hours of the session, W. L. Mackenzie King, Prime Minister, made further announcement that the investigation into the corporation was proceeding and that action would be taken if it were found that the company could be classed as a combine. The inquiry is being conducted by the Department of Labor under Peter Heenan.

Brown Goes to Europe

Clarence Brown, M-G-M director, is en route to Europe for a vacation.

The Chiseling Scotch

London—Sandy, who owned a theatre in Dundee, came to London to get some ideas for advertising, and, to hear Answers tell it, "while walking through the great city, he saw a notice outside a movie to the effect that all persons over eighty years of age would be admitted free.

"'Just the thing,' he told himself.

"The following day Sandy returned to his native town and the first thing he did was to put a notice outside his own theatre which read:

"'All persons over eighty years of age will be admitted free . . . if accompanied by parents.'"

Advertising Appropriations to Be Increased to Boost Theatre Intake

With a general swing to percentage schedule for next season, the advertising man in the industry will "come into his own," projected into a position of new importance as a result of the percentage development.

Distributors will supplement the swing to percentage by greater stress on the advertising appropriated for pictures, made necessary by the sharing arrangements.

Right now, distributors are "going into huddles" on the percentage development, realizing they must play ball with exhibitors on advertising if they are to get their money out of percentage runs. With the rental depending upon intake, distributors will see to it that pictures are presented under the most favorable auspices, so far as advertising is concerned.

National advertising, through magazines and radio, and co-operative newspaper advertising, will be in order next year so distributors can reap the full benefits on percentage runs.

Lord & Thomas and Logan, advertising agency which has been doing considerable work for the Radio-Keith-Orpheum family, is installing a projection room for sound pictures in its New York offices.

Placed on Blacklist for Sun. Shows; House Dark

Grantsburg, Wis.—Sunday shows proved disastrous for Mrs. Jessie I. Whipple, forcing her to close the Burnett. The house, running silent, was declared doing a good business until Sunday operation was started. After that, it is said, church and school authorities attacked the theatre, the former holding evangelist meetings in front of the house Saturday nights, the latter forbidding students and teachers to attend the playhouse.

Fox Lets Page Out, Then Hires Him at More Kale

Hollywood—Paul Page was under contract for some time, but was let out at an option period three months ago. But Page is now back on the Fox lot, this time freelancing on a higher weekly stipend for one of the featured spots in "Soup to Nuts," which Ben Stoloff is directing from an original by Rube Goldberg.

Paramount Deal for N.W. Opposish Houses Dropped

Grand Forks, N. D.—Inability to agree on terms has led to dropping of the deal of Paramount Publix to take over the Bennie Berger circuit of theatres, which has its headquarters here. The firm is opposition to Paramount here, at Sioux Falls, S. D., and Bemidji, Minn.

Kennedy Forces Ready for Court Fight to Protect Pathe-DuPont Raw Stock Plum

Rowland Committee Attack Is Dud at Stockholders' Meet; Administration Okayed

With the Pathe-DuPont raw stock affiliation generally declared the plum, administration and opposition forces of the company are preparing for the second round in the fight for control of the company, which will be court action charges of mismanagement and dissipation of funds.

Joseph P. Kennedy and his administration forces stood by their guns Monday in the first round of the fight, when the threatened heavy artillery of the opposition proved pretty much of a dud at the annual stockholders' meeting. As a result, stockholders gave the administration a vote of confidence and elected its directors, making a love-fest of what had been promised in advance as "a can of dynamite."

Behind it all loomed the shadow of Consolidated Film Industries, alleged Eastman Kodak ally, which was declared sponsoring the fight to obtain control of Pathe. The latter has a 49 per cent interest in DuPont-Pathe. Inroads being made by DuPont-Pathe in the raw stock field are declared causes of the alleged Consolidated move.

Richard A. Rowland, former general manager of First National, led the fight of the opposition, with C. J. Scollard, treasurer, and Lewis Innerarity, secretary and counsel, directing the administration's fight.

Cries of steamroller and gagging characterized the meeting when Scollard shut off discussion of mismanagement charges, and the two slates of directors named. At one point, there was considerable discrepancy between the number of votes claimed by each side and the number of shares of stock outstanding.

With the administration's directors named by overwhelming vote, Sydney S. Cohen, former president of the M. P. T. O. A. and owner of a large block of Pathe stock, called for a vote of confidence in the management, stressing the obstacles overcome by Kennedy and his associates and emphasizing the position occupied by Pathe in the industry, so far as goodwill is concerned.

Kennedy Slate Elected By Pathe Board

Victorious in the fight to retain control of the company, new Pathe directors elected a "Kennedy slate" on Tuesday. E. B. Derr, who has been serving as executive vice-president, was named president of the company. Treasurer C. J. Scollard was elevated to the post of executive vice-president, and Arthur B. Poole, comptroller, succeeded him as treasurer. Lewis Innerarity, for many years secretary and counsel of the company, was named vice-president and secretary. T. S. Delehanty, vice-president and general manager of Pathe International, was named assistant treasurer and assistant secretary. Joseph P. Kennedy continues as chairman of the board of directors.

Rowland Charges "Steam-Roller"; Fight to Courts

Declaring that "stockholders will not permit their rights and interests to be disregarded by the management," and alleging steamroller tactics at the annual meeting, Richard A. Rowland told Motion Picture News that a court fight on the issue is planned. This line of procedure was exclusively forecast in this publication last week.

Following the meeting, Rowland made

$66,431 Net Loss Listed By Pathe for 16 Weeks

Net loss of $66,431 for the 16 weeks ended April 19, 1930, is reported by Pathe. Gross sales for the period were $5,188,688. cost and expenses, $5,181,867. The figure does not take into the profit and loss account a surplus credit of $73,056, representing income on pictures which previously were the subject of charges to surplus.

This compares with a net profit of $334,232 for the corresponding period of 1929, in which quarter $508,547 was charged against special reserve or surplus.

"Holiday" Has Real Merit

Headed your way as one of Pathe's early releases for the new season is "Holiday." We recommend it as a talker distinguished alike by brilliant dialogue, fine performances from a cast headed by capable Ann Harding and a definite appeal for women. It's smart, clever and a delight to listen to as well as watch. Many talkers have made their bid for up front honors. "Holiday" nestles close to the finishing mark as first across the winning line. Warners Will Retain Present Disc System

Chicago—Although the company soon will market sound-on-film pictures, Warner theatres will stick to discs, it was emphasized at the regional meeting held here as an aftermath to the national sales meeting. This is evidence of the company's conviction that disc recording is superior to sound-on-film.

The sound-on-film system to be marketed was developed by Brunswick. Its adoption marks a reversal of the traditional Warner policy, which has favored discs since inception of sound pictures. Managers at the sessions here were told to make an immediate check of reproducing systems in theatres of their respective territories.

200 Theatres in Two Weeks

Since the Atlantic City convention, it was stated here more than 200 theatres have been added to the company's chain for a total in excess of 1,000. By the end of the summer, it was stated unofficially, the number of houses will total 1,500.

In attendance at the meeting, at which policies evolved at the Atlantic City convention were discussed and new product reviewed, were all salesmen and bookers of Mid-West branches and the following branch managers: M. J. Comer, Omaha; M. A. Raymon, Des Moines; L. E. Coldhammer, Minneapolis; R. T. Smith, Milwaukee; N. J. Ayers, Detroit; C. E. Almy, Cleveland; N. H. Moray, Chicago; R. F. Cloud, Cincinnati; D. Williston, Indianapolis; H. F. Neill, Chicago; M. Solomon, St. Louis, and M. C. Sinift, Kansas City.

C. C. Ezell, general sales manager, presided at the meeting. Other executives in attendance included Max Milder, central division sales manager; J. V. Allan, southern and western sales manager, and Albert Howson, scenario editor.

Academy Takes Spurt as Wunder Assumes Charge

Hollywood—The suspicious attitude of members of the Academy of M. P. Arts and Sciences first displayed toward Clinton Wunder has undergone a change in his favor. Impressed by his ability and what they admit to be his sincerity in the conduct of his job as executive manager, activities of the organization have taken a decided spurt forward under Wunder's regime.

Clinton Wunder

Wunder, who was first appointed secretary of public relations by the board of directors, recently was elevated to the post of executive manager of the organization. In his new position, he assumes charge of the business affairs and management of the Academy. This move was made in view of Wunder's past experience in successful direction of business affairs for various associations and firms he was connected with during the past ten years.

Since joining the Academy staff about two months ago, Wunder has delivered a number of addresses on pictures before various civic and welfare organizations in Southern California and there have been many requests for talks by organizations in practically all sections of the country.

Before Wunder assumed the position of executive manager, it was planned to have him make a speaking tour of the East, but this will be delayed indefinitely until various expansion plans of the Academy are launched.

Irving Berlin Story Is To Be Doug's Next Film

Hollywood—Douglas Fairbanks will star in "Reaching for the Moon," an Irving Berlin story, for United Artists. Bebe Daniels is to be featured opposite. John Considine, Jr., is to direct, it is understood. William Anthony McGuire will direct dialogue.

Single Tax Looms for U. S. Firms in France

Paris—Abolition of double taxation is provided for in an agreement soon to be signed by France and the United States. This will afford relief to a number of American firms in France, who have been compelled to pay tax here and in the U. S.

Quotas, Language Barriers and Patent Litigation Cause Plenty of Worry

The American industry's lead in foreign markets is in serious jeopardy. The major companies in New York, appreciating the truth of the situation, have imparted their fears to Will H. Hays with the result that the latter is now en route to Europe to dig in in an attempt to find out what can be done about it.

The situation is complex. Widespread antagonism toward American films is rampant all over Europe and ordinarily takes the form of restrictive legislative quotas.

England has one and is privately discussing an increase to 50 per cent. Germany operates under the so-called "kontingent" system, which is another manner of describing a quota. In Austria and in Hungary such laws are in effect, while Italy and Roumania are discussing similar legislation, and France has sidetracked its quota in favor of a high import tax. But quotas or no quotas, foreign governments are aggressive in their efforts to make the course of the American film increasingly difficult, resorting to taxation when other methods fail.

Riddle Faces Americans

The vogue for talkers, spreading rapidly in foreign language countries, is making the going extremely rough for American companies, which today are groping in an effort to solve what is generally conceded to be a difficult riddle. Paramount has broadcast generously its plans for production in French, German, Spanish, Swedish, Hungarian and Italian, activity to be centered in Paris. Warners, First National and M-G-M are making foreign language talkers on the coast. Fox is following the same procedure, but is feeling its way cautiously.

To date, the reception accorded foreign-language talkers has been very spotty. Berlin critics razzed "The Royal Box," German talker made by the Warners in Brooklyn, without mercy. The Spanish version, Hollywood-made, of "Blaze o' Glory" was pulled after a few days in a big South American city.

The pros and cons of production abroad are regarded as many. So far, Paramount is the only major company set on an overseas schedule. It would, therefore, follow that, numerically, at least, the preponderance of producer opinion leaned toward Hollywood.

A third factor is the patent situation caused by contention of Klangfilm-Tobis that it controls basic rights in Germany and surrounding countries, a stand refuted unsuccessfully so far by Western Electric.

"Peace Conference" Set

The recent affiliation of Warners and the Klangfilm group is regarded as having put an even more twisted slant on the situation than existed before. Warners acted inde-

Warners Gunning for Zukor in Chicago Sector; Battle Raging on Many Fronts

Dirt For a Nickel

The inside track on stars, their personal habits, likes and dislikes, are slated to be hawked along Broadway shortly at a nickel or a dime a throw and in the form of a single sheet broadside. The racket will be similar to the theme song plug which was bandied up and down the main stem until the Music Publishers' Protective Ass'n stopped it, via the legal route.

Paramount Steps Out on Theatre Expansion Plan

Paramount Publix is doing some stepping out on its own in its expansion program. The firm this week completed deals for six New York houses of the Ben Bernstein chain and the Goldstein Brothers' houses in western Massachusetts. The E. M. Loew Massachusetts houses now are being sought, it is said. The Goldstein deal, effective Sept. 3, embraces: Springfield, Greenfield, Westfield, Pittsfield, Northampton, Chicopee, Ware, Holyoke and Palmer, in Massachusetts, and Utica, N. Y.

Warners Buy Five More Houses in Connecticut

Hartford, Conn.—Increasing to ten the number of theatres acquired in Connecticut during the last month, Warners have taken over five suburban houses in and around Hartford from the Schuman-Dolkin chain.

Warners or R-K-O Building?

Hornell, N. Y.—Either Warners or Radio-Keith-Orpheum will operate a proposed theatre here, it is understood. The Shattuck, formerly operated by Reis & Smith, is dark for remodeling and reopens in fall as a Warner house.

Three More Added

Lawrence, Mass.—Warners here purchased the Empire, Palace and Broadway.

Six Equity Houses Dark

Philadelphia—Six houses of the Warner-Equity chain are dark for the summer.

Special Dep't at "U" for Shorts; White in Charge?

Hollywood—Universal will create a separate short subject department under direct guidance of an associate producer to be appointed. The idea of Carl Laemmle, Jr., is that the regular production channels of the company should not be saddled with responsibility for short subjects, but should confine activities entirely to specials to be made for the coming year.

Offensive Campaign on in B. & K. Stronghold; Penetrating South

Offensive of Warners against Paramount in the open warfare declared at the Atlantic City meeting by Harry M. Warner was this week carried to the Chicago front, where Paramount-Balaban & Katz long has been the dominant factor.

Decision of Warners to take over the Coston and Federated circuits in the Illinois city, as a first step in a Middle West drive with the firm's newly-acquired Wisconsin holdings as a base, brings the two organizations to grips in that section. Other deals in Chicago are understood pending, carrying the battle to one of Paramount's most formidable strongholds.

As exclusively reported by Motion Picture News, Harry M. Warner has taken up the gauntlet of battle he said had been thrown down by Adolph Zukor's organization and an offensive campaign on a number of fronts has swung into action.

Comerford Deal Started Row

The two firms had come to grips in negotiations for the Comerford circuit. Warners, figuring it was in the company's own backyard, wanted the Comerford chain, but Paramount stepped in and made the deal. This was an open thrust to the Warner position in Pennsylvania, and the two chiefs, who had nearly come to terms for a merger of their companies, drifted further apart.

This was followed by several skirmishes, notably in Virginia, where the Warner invasion is said to have engendered more bad blood. Now the Warner drive has penetrated as far south as Tennessee and the firm is continuing its southern march with proposed acquisition of the Tony Sudekum and M. A. Lightman chains. This would give Warners a strong foothold in Tennessee, Kentucky, Arkansas and Alabama.

Oklahoma City in Cross-Fire of New Theatre Skirmish

Oklahoma City—Warners will be projected with both feet into new Paramount-Publix territory if the deal for the Midwest Theatres circuit of six local houses is completed July 1 as scheduled. John Sinpoulou, president, and Tom Boland, general manager of the chain, recently returned from New York. The Empress, Folly, Liberty, Orpheum and Palace, and the Midwest, nearing completion, are included in the deal.

Meanwhile, Paramount is entrenching here through its ally, Joe Cooper, who operates the Criterion, Capitol, Victoria and Ritz. Cooper is completing negotiations for a site for a $3,000,000 house, which is to bear his name.

Marking Time

Warner's expansion in Greater New York will be resumed when conditions are better in the realty mortgage market, according to information given Motion Picture News. A number of deals are in prospect in the metropolitan area, it is stated, but these are being held in abeyance, while the expansion is carried out in other sections.

W-B., Paramount Invasion of Cincy Gets Under Way

Cincinnati—This closed situation bids fair to become pretty much of a free-for-all, according to plans of Paramount-Publix and Warners. These firms are preparing to invade this key city, now dominated by Radio-Keith-Orpheum through acquisition of the Libson holdings.

Paramount has acquired a site at Gilbert Ave. and McMicken St., and Warners are understood to be negotiating for a location at Sixth and Vine, a strategic location in the business section, and separated only by an alley from the Erlanger Grand Opera House, where legitimate bookings during the past season have been none too plentiful, and which has been pinch-hitting with pictures. Gossip along the Cincinnati Rialto is that Warners have their lines laid for acquisition of the Erlanger Grand in case the present deal materializes, and that they will build the most pretentious house in the state. They are reported, however, to be considering two other downtown locations, but the report lacks confirmation.

C. C. Ezell to Preside At Regional Meetings

Claude C. Ezell, general sales manager for Warners, will attend both the San Francisco and New Orleans regional conventions, to be held respectively on June 14 and June 21. He will act in the capacity of chairman. J. V. Allan, southern and western sales manager, also will attend.

Warners at Yakima, Wash.

Yakima, Wash.—Warners' expansion activity in Pacific Coast states may result in a house here. A proposed theatre to cost $250,000 is declared under consideration. Business men are dickering with a Seattle financier for erection of the house.

4 Added at Santa Barbara

Santa Barbara, Cal.—Warners have acquired this city's four theatres, in a deal with Santa Barbara Theatres, Ltd., headed by Louis Kaplan.

Automatic Copyright of All Literary Creations Assured by New Vestal Bill

International Protection for Screen Writers Granted in Copyright Act

Enactment of the Vestal bill providing for an automatic copyright looms as a strong probability. The measure, now before the House of Representatives in Washington, is of considerable importance to the writer and is dissected in the accompanying article for the guidance of the industry.

By SAMUEL S. SPRING

Member, New York Bar, and Former General Counsel, First National Pictures, Inc.

The raw product of the entertainment industry, obviously, consists of the creations of authors and composers upon whose ingenuity and creative genius the entire amusement world depends. Despite the recent gigantic advances in the varieties and methods of entertainment, the basic law which controls and establishes the rights in this raw material has remained unaltered in America for over twenty-one years. In 1909 the present inadequate and antiquated copyright law was enacted. Thus, those who create this raw material for entertainment and the industry which flourishes or declines from season to season according to the amount and quality of usable raw material at hand, have been retarded by the necessity of operating under an old and outdated law.

The new proposed copyright act (H. R. 12549), which has been introduced in the House of Representatives by Mr. Vestal, Chairman of the House Committee on Patents, after exhaustive and repeated public hearings during the last five years, seeks to bring the copyright law of America up to date. The European nations, backward though they are in machine technique, have been far more progressive than America in copyright matters. They have constantly been improving their more modern copyright acts. It is high time, therefore, that America do likewise and it is hoped that the new copyright bill will promptly be enacted by Congress.

Naturally, all interested in the entertainment industry will be interested in the most important new features contributed by this modernization of the copyright law. But, at the outset, it must be suggested that the fundamental aspects of copyright law depend more upon court decisions than upon Congressional enactment. The Constitution of the United States grants Congress exclusive power to secure "for limited times to authors and inventors the exclusive rights in their respective writings and designs."

The most difficult phase of the copyright law, however, is to determine just what it is that the author obtains a monopoly of under a Congressional statute. No author can copyright an idea alone. The number of possible plots for stories, according to experts, is limited to around thirty basic plots. The possible musical combinations constituting the elements of melodies are likewise extremely small in number. Much of the musical and literary material available has been used in the past and is, therefore, in the public domain and free to anyone to use as needed. The courts have held that what can be copyrighted is: "A set of intellectual ideas or modes of thinking" or "the order of words . . . . . not the words themselves . . . . nor the ideas expressed in the words."

Just what is included within such a set or combination and where infringement begins and ends always has been, and probably always will be, a matter for the courts to determine. Congress has never attempted to codify the law as to just what constitutes infringement. What Congress does do, by legislation, is to fix the procedure and the methods by which an author can secure his rights, whatever they are, in copyrightable material, leaving to the courts to determine the broader questions. This determination of procedure and methods, however, is, from a practical operating angle, of as vital importance as the judicial definition of what is copyrightable.

Automatic Copyright

One of the most important proposals of the new law is to grant an automatic copyright to the author. Under the existing law an author has what is called a valid common law property in his manuscript so long as he does not publish it. When he does, however, make it public, by way of printing and release to the public or by other forms of publication, unless he complies with certain formalities, he loses all rights in his material. He must scrupulously observe certain formalities. The formalities require, among other things, first, a registration of the material at the Copyright Office in Washington; and second, the attachment of a notice to the copyright material to the effect that it is copyrighted.

This procedure forces most authors to register their work so soon as they create it. Under the new law, an author does not have to comply with any formalities, before or after publication, to retain his copyright and thus the authors are adequately and fully protected. The mere creation of the work automatically gives the author a valid copyright.

International Copyright

The chief reason for making this change in our law, aside from convenience, is that in order to obtain an international copyright it is necessary for American copyright procedure to be brought up to date by providing for automatic copyright. The European nations for many years have all given the author an automatic copyright. International copyright of late has become of tremendous importance, with the rise of international broadcasting and the increased circulation of motion pictures, phonograph records and literary material. One of the main objects in passing a new act is to make it possible for the American author not only to get an automatic American copyright, but an automatic international copyright.

The law of international copyright has been governed by certain physical limitations. No nation can enact a law which is effective beyond its own territorial limitations. Literary material does not stay within territorial limitations of any nation. Like migratory birds, literary material spreads over the entire world. An author of one country is, therefore, dependent upon the laws of other countries for protection beyond the territorial limitations of his own land.

Such a situation, obviously, can be covered legally ony by an international agreement and treaty between the various countries. Since the making of separate treaties between the various nations is cumbersome, all the civilized countries of the world, excepting the United States, got together at Berne, Switzerland in 1887 and entered into the international Convention of Berne.

Under this procedure they agreed to give mutual and reciprocal protection to copyrighted material of every nation signing the treaty. The Treaty of Berne has been subsequently changed by later meetings, the last of which was held at Rome last year. The United States has never been able to get into the Treaty of Berne because of the fact that the present copyright laws do not grant automatic copyright; and also because of certain printing clauses which require foreign books to be printed in this country if they are to receive copyright protection. Under the new proposed copyright law, the United States, for the first time, will be able to enter into the Treaty of Berne, and thus American material will be protected by an international copyright.

In the past, American authors have gotten into the Treaty of Berne "through the back door," that is, by registering their work in one of the nations that adheres to the Treaty of Berne, usually England. This cumbersome and expensive procedure would now be avoided.

Innocent Infringement

To protect the users of copyrighted material the new law provides that although an author can get an automatic copyright without registering his work in the Copyright Office at Washington, nevertheless if he does not do so, an innocent infringer, not knowing that he is using copyrighted material, can be held subject only to limited damages. To get full damages for any infringement, the authors will have to record their work in Washington, so that users of material will know just what is copyrighted and what is not.

Divisible Copyright

Simply because of legal technicalities under the existing law, copyright is legally an undividable right.

As a practical matter literary material has various uses, such as publication in a magazine, publication in novel form, use on the dramatic stage, use in motion pictures, etc. Since the rights in copyrightable material are used in so many forms by different people, the fact that the copyright itself cannot be split into parts has made the legal rights of motion picture producers insecure. Under the new act each copyright can be split into various parts corresponding to the various uses, and thus each user can buy a separate copyright covering the particular use he desires. The old system of cumbersome licenses will, therefore, be abandoned.

Many minor improvements in the law are made. Registration in the Copyright Office at Washington is improved. The conflict between musical publishers and phonograph record makers as to compulsory licensing for phonograph uses is ended. The present difficult provisions as to renewal of copyright is ended by extending the period copyright from twenty-eight to fifty years after the author's death.

With the necessary amendments which will probably have to be added before the law is in final form, the new copyright bill when enacted should give America a thoroughly up to date copyright law as clear and as flexible as that possessed by any European country.

With these improvements the legal aspects of American entertainment industry will be brought up to date and the world's greatest creator of popular entertainment will have a law adequate to its needs.

Governor Leaves Film Reviewing to Censors

Richmond—Virginia censors are empowered to pass upon films submitted for showing in the state, Gov. John Garland Pollard declared in declining to review "All Quiet on the Western Front," as requested by California parties. The objector pointed to parts of the dialogue as calling for a careful scrutiny of the film.

One Mile Protection Radius for Towns Of 3,000 and Up, New Illinois System

Agreement Covers Downstate Situations—Now Working Out Chicago Zone

Chicago — Scrapping of the protection system in this territory, sometimes called the most excessive in the United States, and substitution of a system which, it is promised, will eliminate all major complaints of independents, is provided for in an agreement now being worked out. Final action on the new zoning schedule is expected on Monday. Circuits and independents are meeting with C. C. Pettijohn in drafting the schedules.

Concessions by Jules Rubens, general manager of Publix-Great States, and E. E. Alger of LaSalle paved the way for an agreement on the downstate situation. This agreement, already adopted, provides for—

Elimination of the exclusive sale of pictures in any given county of the state.

Designation of towns of 3,000 and over as key cities, entitled to protection of one mile radius for each 1,000 of population.

Establishment of a scale of playing time which forces an exhibitor to use his specified playdate or forfeit his protection.

Availability of films to ten cent houses, 133 days after first run release. The old agreement kept ten cent houses waiting a year.

The downstate situation, conceded in advance of the meeting to offer the greatest obstacles to solution, was, oddly enough, the first to announce that its representatives were prepared to make the essential concessions necessary to the formation of a new protective system.

Downstaters Get Breaks

Under the new key city plan, a 3,000 town would be entitled to protection within a three-mile radius, a 10,000 town within a ten-mile radius, and so on. The significance of this system to the downstate exhibitor is apparent when it is recalled that, under the old order, it was possible for circuits and large houses to buy "exclusive" rights not only in certain towns but in entire counties as well, which meant that the small exhibitor in those territories waited nine months or more for some pictures, and occasionally found that other pictures were never available to him at all. A 50-mile protection radius was a commonly purchased privilege for downstate circuits.

Serving on the downstate committee, in addition to Rubens and Alger, are Eddie Grossman, United Artists Chicago branch manager; Alex Manta, Whiting, Ind., and John Anderson, Morris, Ill.

The protection situation in Chicago and the metropolitan area, which includes the balance of Cook County and adjacent northern Indiana counties, supposedly offered fewer difficulties than the down-state situation. Fewer complaints from metropolitan exhibitors are on record here, and it was generally felt that few changes would be necessary. For this reason an early revision of the metropolitan protection plan was looked for.

Outlying Situation Complicated

However, complications were afforded by the problems of individual outlying theatres, and as a result it was doubted whether the metropolitan committee would agree on a plan before the end of the week. An example of these complications is afforded in the case of the Capitol and Stratford, south side Federal playhouses, whose representative, James Coston, asked for day and date privileges with B. & K.'s Tivoli. Another example is that of the Biltmore, which heretofore followed the Royal, both northwest side playhouses. B. & K. will purchase the Biltmore in the near future, and representatives of that circuit announced their intention to purchase protection over the Royal for it when it becomes a part of their circuit.

It is doubted whether any significant changes in the metropolitan protection system will be made, though it is regarded as possible that all theatres in the territory may be moved up one week on releases if the distributors agree to a plan that was submitted by representatives of the circuits. This committee, also, is expected to submit its report to the combined meeting on Monday.

Hughes Invests In Color

Hollywood—By the end of the week, announcement is expected of the deal under which Howard Hughes, head of Caddo Prod., will acquire a "substantial holding" in Multicolor. The deal was tipped off two weeks ago by MOTION PICTURE NEWS.

Hughes' advent will be the signal for activity, it is stated, for the multi-millionaire producer and oil man is declared ready to invest plenty of sugar in the color firm.

Sono-Art-British Releasing Tie-up Being Abandoned

Dissolution of the releasing arrangement between Sono-Art-World Wide and British International is understood completed, with the former prepared to handle only American-made talkers next year. Eighteen pictures are called for in the schedule, details of which are to be mapped out on the Coast by George W. Weeks, Samuel Zierler and James Cruze.

Weeks left for the Coast this week to confer on the new program. The company has two pictures completed for the new year, "The First Fight" and "Once a Gentleman." It has been producing at the Metropolitan and Educational studios, but production work has been held up pending the outcome of the Weeks conferences.

Rogers Back From Trip

Budd Rogers, director of sales for Sono Art-World Wide, has returned to New York from a three weeks' trip to exchanges. "Once a Gentleman," the company's second picture, is to have its premiere Friday at the new Pantages, Hollywood.

L. A. Trade Drops; Stage Shows New Policy

Los Angeles—With local theatre trade way off in most of the first runs, it is expected that many of the houses will swing back to policy of stage shows to bolster up the screen attractions. Paramount resumes a stage show policy with its features within the next three weeks, and it is likely that both Warner houses and the Orpheum will follow.

Indications locally point to the fact audiences are tiring of the all-sound programs

Same Old Boloney

"One of the greatest disillusions of talking pictures," believes Life, "is to discover that those mysterious things screen lovers whisper to their sweethearts is the same sort of mush the rest of us dish out."

Eight Jersey, 21 New York Fox Houses Dark

Closing of the Cameo and State, Jersey City, and the Leonia and Bogota houses, brings to eight the number of Jersey Fox Metropolitan houses now dark. Twenty-one others in the Metropolitan area are closed.

A Break for Ed

St. Louis — Mayor Victor J. Miller proclaimed this week "Ed Lowry Happiness Week," which means a big break for Ed, who was honored because of his 4,000th performance on the stage as m. c. at Skouras Bros.' Ambassador.

Bicycling, Print Holdovers, Faking of Returns, Hays Bureau Campaign Targets

Fraternizing

Fraternalism was the keynote of Thursday's meeting of the AMPA which was, to use the words of Secretary Martin J. Starr, "bereft of celebrities," the idea being a get-together to cement relations between members.

past year made it necessary to select a business manager of the association to direct its financial affairs. At the present time, the paid executive staff of the organization includes Wunder as executive manager; Frank Woods as secretary; Lester Cowan as assistant secretary; William Conklin, actor-producer relations; Don Gledhill and Daniel Berman as technical assistants; besides a clerical staff.

Plans National Conference

Lined up in Wunder's program of expansion of the Academy and its activities is a proposed national conference in 1931 on the arts and sciences of motion pictures. If plans for this are finally approved, the conference will be held in Hollywood. The board of directors also has authorized appointment of a special building committee which will consider construction of a proposed building to house the Academy offices, projection rooms, technical research department and meeting rooms. Wunder also will assist this committee in devising a plan of financing the proposed building when and if it is finally decided upon.

Wunder also is meeting regularly with both the board of directors and the executive committee of the Academy, counseling on all matters of policy, business management and future growth.

The growth of the Academy, not only in importance in the industry at large, but among those engaged in production, is shown by the present membership total of over 600. Besides this fact, substantial additions to membership in each of the five branches are being reported at each meeting of the committee in charge.

During the past two weeks, Wunder was contact man with Harry Rapf and Fred Beetson on the program and dinner staged Tuesday night for the visiting foreign publishers. This dinner was given the publishers jointly by the producers association and the Academy.

Exhibitors' "Shady Dealings" Bared; Michigan Site of "Startling Conditions"

Print holdovers, bicycling, filing of false returns on percentage engagements and "side" agreements are on the death list of the Copyright Protection Bureau, Hays-sponsored organization, which is waging a national campaign against exhibitors who go in for these violations of the business code.

Distributors maintain that thousands of dollars in additional revenue are dissipated annually through shady dealings on the part of exhibitors. To stop the practices by invoking laws on the statute books, the Copyright Protection Bureau was originally organized.

Find "Startling Conditions"

A campaign against offenders just completed in Michigan has unearthed conditions which those familiar with the bureau's work in that territory describe as startling. Prints booked for one day have, in some instances, been held two and three. Reports on percentage bookings have been falsified, it is charged, and instances of bicycling have been unearthed.

The Bureau, organized August 10, 1929, blankets the country and employs a nationally-known detective agency to check on contractual activities of every exhibitor in the United States. The system further entails the services of attorneys in every key city.

For the year ending August, 1929, which represents the first twelve-month operating period, the bureau collected over $110,000. In its annual report issued in November, the bureau declared it "has adhered to its policy of promoting a feeling of friendliness and goodwill toward the hundreds of exhibitors it has come into contact with."

Exhibitor organizations, on various occasions, have formally voiced their opposition to the bureau and its tactics.

R-K-O Manager Hails Vaude as Film Mainstay

There is no lack of opportunity for vaudeville, declares Charles J. Freeman, general booking manager for Radio-Keith-Orpheum, who says combination policies have made the burden of the variety portion of the bill more important.

Vaudeville is the companion and contributes the contrasting element to pictures, he declares. Everyone in show business knows, he declares, that a theatre cannot play a drawing picture every week which, he says is why 'a good show' should be the weekly headliner, as support to a drawing picture and a mainstay with a picture that does not draw. The good show, he says, thus becomes the balancer. Vaudeville stands a much better chance of being a good show week in and week out than to rely solely upon the untested picture, Freeman believes.

Narrow Escape

Hollywood—Police here are sifting an alleged plot on the life of William de Mille, M-G-M director. He escaped injury when a 400-pound tractor wheel, set in motion upon a hill above his home, veered to wreck a porch wing of the house, after tearing down trees in its path.

pendently of the Hays office and made its deal at a time when other distributors were staying out of Germany with sound films, due to the litigation over Western Electric equipment. Adolph Zukor recently was in Germany, where he paved the way for a patent peace.

As a result of these varied moves, a "peace conference" has been widely publicized for St. Moritz, Switzerland, which leaders of the American industry are slated to attend, including Hays. The Swiss conference is dependent largely on the deliberations conducted in Berlin by John E. Otterson, president of Electrical Research Products, Inc., with the Germans. The fact that C. J. Ross, executive vice-president of RCA Photophone, is also on the other side lends further significance to the impending confabs.

Berlin—Settlement of the patent controversy between Klangfilm-Tobis and American distributors will not mean the end of the matter, it is pointed out here, for there still remains the fight of German independents against the alleged monopoly of Klangfilm-Tobis. A number of patent suits now are pending.

Marjorie Rambeau Back To Screen as Pathe Star

Hollywood—Returning to motion pictures after a lapse of over ten years, Marjorie Rambeau has been signed by Pathe for a featured role in "Her Man." Pathe carries an option with the player providing for a term contract for featured and starring billing at salary reported starting at $2,500 and ranging up to $5,000 weekly for the final year.

Miss Rambeau, a stage star of many years' standing, was originally starred in pictures by the old Robertson-Cole company about twelve years ago, but upon completion of the starring contract with that organization, returned to the stage.

Holt Signs Exclusive Pact

Hollywood—Jack Holt has signed a long-term exclusive contract with Columbia. His previous arrangement was for a Columbia series, but the agreement allowed him to accept outside engagements.

N.W. Showmen Threaten Copyright Law Action in Minneapolis Protection Jam

Oh! Oh!

Kansas City—Here's one for the book. Recently "The Freiburg Passion Play" played at Convention Hall here and the advance publicity man placed some advertising on the side of the Gayety theatre, now dark for the summer. Most of the advertising paper has been torn down but the following fragment brings a laugh: "Mutual Burlesque" is stenciled on top of the board and under it is "Original Passion Play."

Warner Demand For Protection Extension Fought

Philadelphia—Threatening to invoke Federal aid if Warners carry out reported intention to demand extended protection for their theatres in the state "above and beyond the time accepted as fair business practice," the M. P. T. O. of eastern Pennsylvania, southern New Jersey and Delaware met here Thursday. Counsel has been retained to protect independents' interest, it was stated.

Elimination of score charges and guarantee on percentage contracts, a call for longer features and adjustments in oversold situations were other chief topics of discussion.

Schnitzer Goes Abroad to Launch U. K. Exchanges

Establishment of a system of RKO exchanges in England is the chief purpose of a visit abroad of Joseph I. Schnitzer, president of RKO, who sailed Wednesday for Europe. Ideal Films, which previously handled the product in England, could not agree to RKO's new and "stiffer" terms when Simon Rowson was in New York several weeks ago. Sol Newman, RKO representative in England, returned there recently after conferences with Schnitzer. While abroad, Schnitzer may attend the proposed conference in Germany over sound patents.

Theatre Earphones to Be Used at Legit House

New use for the Western Electric audiphones, which are being employed in about 50 theatres throughout the country to make talking pictures audible for the hard of hearing, will be demonstrated Monday at the Avon, New York. Coincidently with a convention of the hard of hearing in New York at that time, the New York League for the Hard of Hearing is arranging to equip twenty seats at the Avon where a stage play, "Strictly Dishonorable," is being shown, with these audiphones.

15 and 20 Cent Scale at Publix Theatre Brings Suit Against Chain and M-G-M

Minneapolis—Invoking of the copyright law in the protection fight under way here is threatened by the Northwest exhibitor association, which is studying the law to determine upon a line of action. The fight centers around the showing of pictures at 15 and 20 cents admission at the Publix-Palace prior to their showing in other houses of the zone and before expiration of the protection period allegedly granted these houses, which have contracted for the product.

Suit to restrain the showings already has been instituted by Gateway exhibitors, through the Northwest association. It is against the circuit and M-G-M. The exhibitor unit contends the Publix-Palace runs are in violation of the copyright law. W. A. Steffes, general manager of the association, is directing the protection fight.

When the Publix-Palace recently switched to a picture policy, Gateway and suburban exhibitors notified exchanges they would not follow the Palace on pictures, as most of these outlying houses are charging 25 cents admission. The Palace previously was a stock and musical tab house.

Fight Called Unique

The situation is somewhat unique, in that usually independent exhibitors are the ones who squawk on protection, but in this instance, they are protesting against a lower-priced showing on the part of an affiliated chain. The suburbans contend that the Publix-Palace should have its protection and run based upon its zone and classification, rather than upon the fact that it is part of the local Publix chain.

Wisconsin Unit Asks Cutting of Score Charges

Milwaukee—Reduction of film rentals through elimination of score charges is declared essential to rural exhibitors by State Senator Henry A. Staab, secretary of the Wisconsin exhibitor unit. Small theatres are paying more for films than they can gross, he charges. He blames business conditions and a lack of human interest films on the situation. Most current films are suited only for the cities or else feature some star that either has a foreign accent or does not speak the language of the country, he asserts.

Spanish Players Here

Franco Mar, baritone, and Espanolita, musical comedy soubrette, have arrived in New York to enter pictures. A. L. Godoy is managing.

To Seek Damages

Minneapolis — Service of pictures under contract by Gateway houses to the Publix-Palace, ahead of their showing at the former, violates the copyright law, in the opinion of W. A. Steffes, general manager of the Northwest exhibitor association, who is preparing Federal action against M-G-M and other distributors.

Damages under the law will be sought by the association attorneys, Steffes declares, pointing out that minimum damages are $250 for each violation.

Gateway Exhibs Base Fight on Contrast Clause

Minneapolis—Action brought by Gateway exhibitors against Paramount Publix and M-G-M to restrain showings of pictures at 15 and 20 cents top, ahead of Gateway houses, is based on paragraph six of the standard form of exhibition contract. This reads:

"Sixth: During the life of this contract the Distributor agrees not to exhibit or license the exhibition of any such photoplays in conflict with the "run" or "protection period," if any, in the Schedule specified. Unless otherwise provided herein, such "protection period" shall be computed from the last date of exhibition of each photoplay as fixed herein. If 'protection' is granted hereunder against a specified theatre or theatres which 'protection' shall indicate that it was the intention of the Distributor to grant such "protection" against all of the theatres in the immediate neighborhood or vicinity of the Exhibitor's theatre, then, unless otherwise provided in the Schedule, such 'protection' shall be deemed to apply to and include any theatre that may hereafter be opened in such neighborhood or vicinity."

Sono Art Hooks Up to New York Fight Craze

Timing "The Big Fight," James Cruze's latest production, so that it arrived in New York at the time when the public was being made "fight conscious" by the Sharkey-Schmeling encounter, Sono Art-World Wide Pictures gave a fistic atmosphere to its presentation of the picture at the New York Athletic Club Wednesday.

Swenson on "Last Word"

Joel Swenson, formerly attached to Fox Movietone News, has been transferred to the theatre department and will edit "The Last Word," house organ of the eastern division under Gabe Yorke's general supervision.

Rowland Charges "Steamroller"; To Fight in Court

public the statement made at the session by Sen. Elwood M. Rabenold, representing the protective committee, and pointed out that the statement was not permitted to be made until after the election of directors. The senator said in part:

"In 1921 Pathe Exchange, Inc., was one of the largest and oldest concerns in the United States engaged in the motion picture industry. In four years, from 1923 to 1926 inclusive, the net profits of the company exceeded $4,500,000. In 1927, the present interests took over the Pathe company The management was at once changed. Before the end of the year 1927 dividends which had been previously paid on preferred and common stock were discontinued. In the first year of its management the present control of the company lost $2,151,882.29. The results were announced as 'very disappointing,' but the company was stated to have 'turned the corner' and anticipated a satisfactory year. The loss in the second year, 1928, increased to $2,354,692.43. In two years all the profits made by the company from 1923 to 1926, amounting to $4,500,000, were lost. In 1929, the banner year of the moving picture industry, the company suffered a loss of $487,476.68.

Cites Surplus Reduction

"In April, 1927, the consolidated balance sheet showed a surplus of $4,175,105.82. In one year, 1927, under the present control of the company, this surplus was reduced from over $4,000,000 to $902,873.90. In 1928, it suffered a further reduction to $805,446.94. in 1929 the surplus was increased by about $1,000,000 in that year.

"In 1925 the gross sales of the company were $18,151,827.12. The cost of sales were $16,614,945.85, showing a profit of more than $1,400,000. In 1929, under Mr. Kennedy's management, the gross sales were practically identical, namely, $18,166,877.07. The difference is about $15,000; but the cost of sales in 1929 was $1,976,242.44 in excess of the cost of doing the same volume of business in the year 1925.

"In the year 1928 the gross sales amounted to $17,265,321.46. It cost the company $19,548,710.04 to transact this business. In the year 1927, just prior to Mr. Kennedy's connection with the company, the gross sales were $17,553,528.18, or about $300,000 more than 1928. The cost, however, in 1927 was over $1,400,000 less than the cost for transacting the same business in 1928. In other words, comparing the same volume of business under the present control of the company, we find an increase of cost in one year of over $1,400,000.

"The years under discussion, 1927, 1928 and 1929, were unusual ones in the motion picture industry. Paramount, Warner Bros., Fox Film and Loew's shows an increase of profits in 1929 over 1927 of from 40 to 80 per cent. In that same period the management of Pathe Exchange, Inc., had succeeded in wiping out practically the entire surplus accumulated by the corporation."

Invite M.P.T.O.A.

Myrtle Beach, S. C.—Invitation to the M.P.T.O.A. to hold its next annual convention at Pinehurst, N. C., was extended at the convention here of North Carolina and South Carolina exhibitors. The resolution cited the fact that only one convention has been held on southern soil. Charles W. Piquet of Pinehurst has received assurance that the Carolina Hotel, Pinehurst, will open a week in advance of the regular season, for exclusive use of delegates during the convention.

Copyright Union, Music Tax Pact Action Speeded

Washington—Final action upon the Vestal copyright bill is seen as assured at the next session of Congress, as a result of consent of the rules committee of the House to issuance of a rule to bring up the measure before adjournment.

This will enable bringing up of the measure in the Senate at the next session, when final disposition can be made. Were it not for the House rule, the bill would have little chance for action at the three months' session starting in December, for there would not be time for consideration of it by both houses.

Representative Vestal, author of the measure, and other members of the patent committee had requested early action, pointing out that the time for adherence of the United States to the International Copyright Union will expire August 1, 1931, so that only by having the matter disposed of by the House at this session would it be possible to secure enactment in time to permit the United States to join.

The bill contains the divisibility of copyright and compulsory music license clauses, which have been the subject of great controversy.

Clarke Off for London; Utilities, Not Films, Aim

Harley L. Clarke, president and controlling factor of the Fox enterprises, sailed for London Thursday on business pertaining to his public utilities interests.

Reported purchase by Fox of the remaining interest in Gaumont British is declared by a Clarke spokesman to have nothing to do with the trip. "As a matter of fact," said this informant, "Clarke's trip to England has no bearing on motion pictures."

See page 59, this issue, for a comprehensive analysis of the copyright situation, written by Samuel Spring.

Coincidence?

It may have been just coincidence, but the statement of Richard A. Rowland, made following the Pathe stockholders' meeting, was issued by the Menken advertising agency, which also handles the Consolidated Film Industries account.

[illegible] drank nothing. The other poured three straight [illegible]. And [illegible]

[illegible] was [illegible], she began to [illegible] and knock over a chair or two. Conrad began to worry.

"Look, honey," he cried. "Take it easy. Take it easy. Calm down a bit."

"The girl glared at him.

"Who are you calling dirty names?" she screamed as she knocked over a lamp for good measure. "I want you to know I'm a lady!"

"This was bad business. Conrad promptly apologized for nothing and asked the girls to leave. Another five minutes and they were on their way. And Conrad heaved a great big sigh of relief.

"In the morning came a letter from an attorney. It notified the songwriter that he had committed every crime on the calendar upon the person of the gal who had been in his home the previous afternoon. Furthermore, the letter said, the client was under eighteen. (That's an old story. Every woman in Hollywood is under eighteen, even if they're grandmothers.)

"Did Conrad want to settle? If he did, it could be arranged. Otherwise, there would be a suit for $100,000.

"Could Conrad fight this rat attorney and his client? Not much. One such story in the papers and Conrad would be off the Fox lot before he knew what had happened.

"So he paid the blackmail toll and charged it up to experience. Now, if a young lady passes his bungalow on the lot and gives him the eye, Conrad jumps into his piano and yanks down the lid."

General Register Corp. Opens Service Stations

The General Register Corp., headed by J. C. Enslen, formerly president of the World Ticket & Supply Co. for many years, is establishing service stations throughout the United States in connection with the distribution of Automatic Gold Seal Registers and Simplex Ticket Registers.

Sales offices have been opened in the Paramount Building with J. C. Enslen in the capacity of general sales manager. The offices will be open to the trade beginning Monday, June 16, and the General Register Corp. extends an invitation to all exhibitors to visit the new headquarters. The corporation will specialize in mechanical devices and all types of ticket registers.

Warners Get Lancaster Site

Lancaster, Pa.—Announcement is made of the sale to Warners of the old railroad station here, which was abandoned when the new $1,000,000 depot opened. A large theatre will be erected on the site. Under an old contract, formal transfer of the property was made by the railroad company to the city, represented by D. Bernard Heffernan, who in turn will transfer the property to Warners.

Ordered to Rest

Hollywood—Bradley King is to take a four months' vacation from writing activities, upon order of her physician.

Mary Signs New Talent for Fresh Start on Film

Hollywood—Calling in Edgar Selwyn to rewrite the script and dialogue for necessary changes, Mary Pickford is slated to re-start production on "Forever Yours" within the next two weeks. When the picture gets under way, Sam Taylor will be found in the director's chair.

The production was originally launched with Benjamin Glazer as supervisor and Marshall Neilan directing. After three sequences were finished, Miss Pickford decided to abandon production entirely in order to have the story revised. At that time, the entire staff and cast were dismissed, with the exception of Kenneth McKenna, leading man, who was borrowed from Fox for the role. McKenna stays in the new cast, with majority of other players being replaced.

Buckley Gets Real Slant On Thing Called Overhead

Albany, N. Y.—Chris Buckley of the Harmanus-Bleecker Hall has a different slant now. He has just returned from Hollywood where he attended the Fox convention and visited the company's studio as guest of James R. Grainger.

"Every exhibitor ought to go to California and see the time, trouble and money spent in the production of pictures," Buckley opines. "It's a revelation."

Eight pictures were just about getting under way when Buckley arrived. He had had an idea that running theatres ran up the nut, but now that his jaunt west is over, Buckley reflects in his cooler moments that the exhibitor's life isn't so bad.

Kalmar and Ruby to Write "Amos 'n' Andy" Music

Bert Kalmar and Harry Ruby, authors of more than 100 musical songs, including the scores for such hits as "The Ramblers," "Animal Crackers," "Five O'Clock Girl" and "The Cuckoos," have been signed to write the book, lyrics and music for the forthcoming Amos 'n' Andy musical production.

Kalmar and Ruby are now in New York conferring on material and specialties with Amos and Andy, Schnitzer, William Le Baron, Lee Marcus and Director Mel Brown.

Jumps to Featured Spot

Hollywood—With only two pictures to her credit, Maureen O'Sullivan, Irish ingenue imported by Fox, will play one of the leads in "Just Imagine." The part is considered a plum on the Fox lot.

A "K.O." Sock

Ted Cook, commenting in the N. Y. American on Edwin Carewe's new contract to collect garbage in Dallas, finds "it certainly must be irritating to scenario writers to see a director go over their heads for source material."

More Rogues

"The Big House," prison yarn produced by M-G-M, will follow "The Rogue Song" at the Astor, New York.

Panning Better Than Praise, Is De Mille Idea

Hollywood—Take it from Cecil B. De Mille, head of the Ass'n. of M. P. Producers and producer-director for M-G-M, criticism, rather than praise, is what this industry doesn't need nothing else but. Furthermore, when a patron praises a picture, it starts a "vicious cycle" which results in the game of "follow the leader," which producers are wont to play.

Cecil B. DeMille

'Tis better, far better, he wants you to know, for a patron to severely pan a picture, so that out of the bulk of such criticisms on a single picture or star can come "very valuable central comments as to what the public doesn't want."

Accordingly, when your patrons come out of your show shop and roundly applaud, asking for more pictures of the kind they've just seen, have a care and cup your hands over your ears; otherwise you'll be a contributing factor to that dangerous element of repetition, which often has caused producers to be referred to as sheep, and other kindred uncomplimentary remarks. But let De Mille give you his slant:

New Fields Profitable

"To strike out into new fields is a hard and dangerous thing to do, but in the end it is more profitable. A star or a director with a reputation for doing 'new' things may not always make a success; but when he does, his satisfaction and that of the public is greater than if he had followed the safer route of riding along under the banner of some one else's initial thought."

That "Vicious Cycle"

Consider a moment the danger of praise, as De Mille sees it. First, he says, the patron raves about a picture.

"The theatre manager, flushed with a big night's business, passes on to the exchange this message, 'Why can't you fellows give me more pictures like so-and-so?' And the exchange in its turn wires to the home office for relay to the studio: 'So-and-so smashed all box office records in this territory. Can we have more like it on the new program?' And a competitor, seeing this activity, wires in turn to his studio. 'Blatz Company's 'So and So' tremendous money maker stop suggest we make 'This and That,' which is a similar story.'

"And in just two or three moves you have started what always turns out to be one of those much talked about 'vicious circles.'

"No one person in such a circle is to blame for the situation, except that it is succumbing to the universal human tendency to 'take the easiest way.'

"It seems to be simplest to cash in on a proven success, by presenting more of the same, but is it?

"Certainly one can't blame a pleased patron for saying to his local theatre manager, 'Give us more like that one!' but in the end he is the first to resent too many repetitions of the idea that so pleased him when it originally came along."

De Mille cites the wisdom of striking out along new lines, pointing to his various pictures as proof the public will respond to new themes and treatment. He also calls attention to other directors' pictures to emphasize the wisdom of avoiding the pitfalls presented by the "follow the leader" game.

Johnston Lists 16 Syndicate Films For New Season

Sixteen talkers will be produced for 1930-31 by Syndicate Pictures, one of the units of W. Ray Johnston attractions.

Three producing units will combine to produce the group, George Durlam being supervising director on eight and Charles A. Post supervising director on the other eight. Duke Worne, J. P. McGowan and J. J. McCarthy are the three directors who have joined the directorial staff and will each direct a group of the new Syndicate talkers.

Charles Delaney has been borrowed to star in the first picture. Virginia Brown Faire, Louise Lorraine, Tom Tyler, Buzz Barton, Bob Custer and Al St. John are other stars signed for various pictures.

A musical tie-up has been made between Mr. Johnson, Shapiro, Bernstein & Co. and the Brunswick Phonograph Co.

The series will be sold on a special franchise through independent exchanges. The first release goes into production June 15 for Aug. 1 delivery and subsequent releases will follow one every three weeks.

Pictures which will comprise the line-up are: "Under Texas Skies," "The Lonesome Trail," "West of Cheyenne," "Beyond the Law," "Riders of the North," "Song of the Plains," "Westward Bound," "Rose of the Rio Grande," "Frontier Days," "Phantom of the Desert," "Last of the Pawnees," "Red Coats of Canada," "A Boy of the Plains," "The Texas Ranger," "God's Country and the Man" and "The Code of Honor."

Eight from Continental; Gaumont in Deal for Series

Continental Pictures, headed by W. Ray Johnston, will produce and distribute eight talkers in 1930-31 on the State Rights market. "The Fourth Alarm" starts the group, to be followed by "Air Eagles," "Defenders of the Law," "Streets of Shadows," "Rose of Chinatown," "The Hellion's Last Cruise," "Sea Devils" and "The Mystery Train." Phil Rosen will direct the initial release at the Darmour studios on the Coast.

Johnston has sold United Kingdom rights on the new Continental eight to Gaumont, London.

Gets Syndicate Franchise

Melvin Hirsh and Bert Kulick of Bell Pictures, Inc., this week concluded negotiations with W. Ray Johnston for the release of the sixteen Syndicate melodramas in Greater New York and northern New Jersey. Charles Delaney will be starred in the first release.

Tee! Hee!

Washington—George Richardson, advertising manager of the Paramount exchange, was laid up for several days at his home recently due to a sprained ankle he suffered while practicing golf in his yard at home.

"Girl of Golden West"

Hollywood — Old-fashioned cattle opera with sound. Players, headed by Ann Harding, are all excellent but miscast. The plot is cut, dried and old, and the appeal of this First National release depends on whether or not your audiences like westerns.

Warners Install Booking Office For All Units

A talent bureau to handle bookings for all Vitaphone pictures, vaudeville, stage presentations, radio broadcasts, electrical transcriptions and musical comedies produced by Warners has just been instituted by J. L. Warner, vice-president in charge of production.

The new booking office, under the supervision of Walter Myers, will act for all the affiliated companies of Warner Bros. and will facilitate the placing of talent for every form of stage and picture production in which Warners engage. A comprehensive system of booking, devised by J. L. Warner, will be in operation, so that at short notice stars may be recruited for either stage, screen or broadcasting engagements.

Fox Cut Prices to Go Unchallenged in St. Louis

St. Louis—Ambassador, Missouri and Grand Central, important Warner first runs in this town, will not reduce their prices to conform to the new cut sale inaugurated by Fox at the Washington Blvd. theatre.

Seek Sunday Shows

Forest City, Ia.—Petition has been circulated asking for a special election on Sunday shows. The last vote was taken March, 1927, and resulted in a victory for opponents of Sunday shows. Since then, however, there has been a considerable change of sentiment and proponents believe that they will be able to carry the day easily.

"Journey's End" Put on Cold and Lasts Only Week

Minneapolis—Paramount Publix put "Journey's End" on cold at the Century here, it is claimed, with result that the picture did but one week. Only three days' of advance advertising was used.

Business conditions here are ascribed as a contributing factor, although business at the firm's houses in the Northwest is said to be but nine per cent below normal. The circuit's business is declared off 30 per cent nationally.

"Toplitzky of Notre Dame" Out of Game

Hollywood—"Toplitzky of Notre Dame" is not going to vie with "Brown of Harvard" for a niche in the cinema hall of fame.

"Toplitzky" has been yanked out of the game by Paramount, having been ruled ineligible by the scholastic authorities of the institution of learning noted for its football heroes. George Marion, Jr., had written the story and Paramount had spent a considerable sum in filming the Army-Notre Dame and other football epics in preparation, but production officials bumped up against a stone wall when they asked permission to shoot scenes on the Notre Dame campus. They were informed that Notre Dame does not desire itself celebrated for football prowess; that it prefers recognition for its—ahem! erudition, instead. So Paramount has cancelled the picture.

It may be merely a coincidence, but Knute Rockne, coach at Notre Dame, is tied up with Pathe for a series of football shorts.

There is also a suspicion that the Notre Dame players, who glory in the appellation of "The Fighting Irish," even if they include Germans, Swedes, Poles and a number of other nationalities, didn't think so much of the title selected for the picture.

Warners Sign Up Ben Lyon for Feature Roles

Hollywood—After appearing in "The Queen of Main Street" for First National, Ben Lyon has been placed under a term contract by Warners for featured spots in both Warner and First National productions. Lyon's first assignment under the new agreement will be a featured role in "The Hot Heiress," which Clarence Badger will direct.

Lyon was under term contract to First National up to two years ago, when his contract option expired. He had been with the company about five years previously, during which time he rose from a contract player to feature billing.

Charles Kurtzman Aide To Harry C. Arthur

Personal representative to Harry C. Arthur, general manager of Fox Theatres, is title of Charles E. Kurtzman, brought to New York from the Coast, where he was associated with Publix. Another appointment is that of Harry Woodin, formerly on the Coast, to division manager of Fox houses in the Bronx.

Frisco Showman Ill

San Francisco—Max Weiss, veteran San Francisco exhibitor, is ill at a local sanitarium.

Seeks Slogan

Paramount Publix this week was rounding out a drive for a slogan for its theatres, among members of the staff. Short, snappy slogans, employing the full name, "Paramount Publix," were sought.

But Let's Keep the Alky

The United States has sued the Radio Corp., General Electric, Westinghouse, A. T. & T., General Motors and General Motor Radio Corp., and if it wins, the New York Sun expects us "to go back to the magic lantern, the horse and buggy and the vaudeville ventriloquist for diversion."

Western Electric Plant in Cicero To Fire 10,000

Chicago—It is reliably reported here that Western Electric will lay off between 10,000 and 14,000 employees at its large Hawthorne plant in Cicero, where the company's new type, small-sized sound equipment is in production. Normally, the plant employs about 32,000 persons.

Another measure, already officially announced by the company, will be the early designation of two mid-summer weeks for a complete shut-down of the mammoth Hawthorne plant. At that time, probably either in late July or early August, all employees will take vacations simultaneously. Those qualified to receive the regular vacation period will be paid for the two weeks, but employees not eligible for vacation will receive no pay during the lay-off.

Tiffany Lease on Gaiety Ends June 29; Off B'way

"Journey's End" closes its run at the Gaiety on June 29 and with it Tiffany's lease on its Broadway show window likewise terminates. The company will be off the main stem until pictures for the new season that rate a $2 run, in the opinion of the company, come along.

12 Pacent Equipments Operating in Europe

There are now 12 Pacent reproducers operating in European theatres, the company states. Tore Lundahl, chief engineer for the company, has been abroad since March of last year, overseeing installations.

Showmen Debate Summer Closing In Twin Cities

Minneapolis—Except for some curb discussions, no steps have been taken on the proposal to close Twin City independent theatres for the summer unless concessions are forthcoming in the way of reduced film rentals and operators' wages.

Opinion is divided on the proposed plan, some declaring it would make residents "picture hungry," others declaring it presents great danger in alienating patronage, which might not be won back in the fall.

Not Clean, But New

There's the silly yarn about the well-known movie ham who had just been married, and, to hear Walter Winchell tell it, craved a honeymoon. "He had just returned from a vacation, however, and his studio boss couldn't see things that way. They were all set to start shooting a new flicker, so the argument was plenty loud.

"'All right,' he was sarcastically told, 'go on your damned old honeymoon. We'll use your double until you see fit to return!'

"At which the hambo reflected: 'Ah, well. Art is Art. . . .'

"So he sent his double on the honeymoon."

Germany Plans To Send Expert To W. C. Studios

Hollywood—Deciding that the manner and customs of Germany should be correctly depicted in motion pictures, the German government is considering the appointment of a special representative to be stationed in Hollywood for the express purpose of advising producers on technical matters for pictures that might present sequences with a German background.

Through its Hollywood representative, the German government will offer film producers the fullest cooperation in the matter of correct details of manners and customs; and the government itself will assist the producers by obtaining special photographs of any location in Germany for duplication in the local studios.

Services of the German representative will be offered to producers gratis, with salary being provided by Germany. The special representative of the Berlin government will not interfere in the slightest with either plot or story construction as provided for by the script. His duties will be solely those of an expert technical advisor for proper settings depicting German habits, customs and locations.

It is hoped that this method will eliminate all difficulty in production of pictures with either German background or sequences where customs or locations are misrepresented through lack of sufficient information by the producers.

Stage Shows Brought Back to Houston Publix

Houston, Tex.—Stage shows are being resumed at the Metropolitan de luxe Publix house, Friday, after a lull of three months. Reasons for returning to the stage and picture policy, after trying out an all-sound schedule for three months, were given by City Manager E. E. Collins as "in response to public demand, and to provide light entertainment for the summer months."

Two More Paramounts

Paramount Thursday was slated to open the Paramount, Middletown, N. Y. The Paramount at Peekskill is to open June 26.

Rehearse Talkers To Avoid Kicks, Says Sydney Abel

Rehearsals of sound picture programs are insurance against inferior reproduction, poor changeovers, interruptions caused by defective film, improper volume levels and losses of synchronization particularly as regards disc prints, in the opinion of Sydney E. Abel, general sales manager of RCA Photophone. He strongly urges rehearsals as a "wise investment" for any exhibitor.

Sydney E. Abel

"The advisability of rehearsing each show can not be over-emphasized," he declares. More now than ever before the projectionist is a very busy man. He must, in addition to running the show, check his entire equipment frequently. Arc lamps, projectors, sound head attachments, turntables, amplifier and auxiliary devices such as batteries, charging equipment, etc., must receive attention.

Film must be rewound and inspected after each run. Being in the booth during the presentation of a picture the projectionist is not in a position to judge the volume of reproduction in the auditorium. Rehearsals permit the theatre manager to determine the proper volume levels for each subject and even for each scene, as is sometimes necessary.

Scientific tests have shown that definite fatigue is suffered by listening to sound that is either too soft or too loud. To obtain the desired effect it is necessary to maintain volume at a normal level.

Cites Volume Changes

"In this case normal denotes that particular level which sounds most natural for each subject. A close-up should be somewhat louder than a long-shot, etc. Too frequently in movie theatres the shouts of a mob or the roar of a cannon are barely audible, while the voice of a little girl booms forth with terrific intensity. Conditions like these cause much unfavorable comment and the impressions given are that the management is slip-shod and very much at fault.

"At rehearsals the projectionists are able to cue their change-overs properly. In many cases, change-overs must be made at the proper instant to avoid cutting part of the dialogue. Inspection by screening and listening at a preview is far better business than trusting to fate that the print and sound track or records will be in good condition."

Dividend Is Passed by American Seating Co.

Regular 50 cents a share dividend on the common has been passed by directors of American Seating. The firm reported loss of $108,460 after charges for the March quarter, compared with net of $41,645 in the same period last year.

It's June

Hollywood—Cupid is working overtime these days on the Tiffany lot, four couples having announced wedding plans within a week. They are Edna May and Arthur Hagerman, studio publicity man; Rex Lease and Betty Pierce; Harry Mancke, assistant director, and Hazel Lee of the music department; Buddy Myers, sound engineer, and Theresa Allen, dance instructress.

Exhibitors of Carolinas Join At Convention

Myrtle Beach, N. C.—Combination of North and South Carolina exhibitors into a single organization was completed at the midsummer meeting of the two state groups here. Theatre Owners of North and South Carolina, capitalized at $20,000, is the name of the new unit. Twenty thousand shares, priced at $1 each, not more than one of which is to be issued each theatre member, will be issued. President Charles W. Picquet presided at the sessions.

Willard L. Dowell of Raleigh, executive secretary of the North Carolina Merchants' Ass'n., high-lighted the meetings with an outline of existing and proposed taxes in his state and explained the general sales tax being advocated, which is expected to be an issue at the next legislative meeting. "Community Co-operation and Goodwill" was the subject of an address by Anna Aiken Patterson, former publisher of "The Weekly Film Review," who stressed the importance of well-planned, consistent effort to raise the exhibitor's standing in his community. Col. Willard C. Patterson was toastmaster at the banquet.

List of Delegates

Among the South Carolina exhibitors participating in the convention were: Albert Sottile and J. C. Sherrill, both of the Pastime Amusement Co., Charleston; J. N. O'Dowd, O'Dowd, Florence; M. F. Schnibben, Colonial, Florence; H. R. Berry, Hartsville; T. S. Rogers, Marion; H. W. Anderson, Dillon; and George Parr, of Lancaster,

The exhibitor group from North Carolina included: Charles W. Picquet, Pinehurst; Warren Irvin, Charlotte; U. K. Rice, Winston-Salem; E. W. Street, Greensboro; H. E. Buchanan, Sylva; H. F. Kincey, Greensboro; Mr. and Mrs. A. B. Thompson, Graham; E. L. Hearne, Albemarle; Montgomery Hill, Greensboro; Frank Stough, Davidson; George Hughes, Albemarle; C. A. Matthews, Charlotte; Don Nichols, High Point; J. U. McCormick, Charlotte, and W. G. Enloe, of Raleigh.

Other exhibitors in attendance included Robert B. Wilby of Atlanta, who is interested both as a chain affiliation and an independent theatre owner; J. A. Koerpel, New York, divisional director for Publix in the Carolinas; and Willard C. Patterson, district manager for Publix in Atlanta and Birmingham.

Wisconsin Republican Party Demands Curtailment and Regulation of Chains

Dubinsky Romance Revealed

Kansas City—Kansas City's film row was surprised when it read in "Liberty" that the late Jeanne Eagles had been married to the late Maurice Dubinsky. The five Dubinsky brothers have long been identified with the show business in Kansas City and Middle West, but very few seemed to have been aware that Maurice had married the famous star when she was a member of the Dubinsky tent show many years ago.

Music Business At "Lowest Ebb," Paine Declares

The music business is "at the lowest ebb in music history," declared John G. Paine, chairman of the board of Music Publishers' Protective Ass'n., at an open meeting this week at the Astor and attended by more than 100, representing both members and non-members of the M. P. P. A., music jobbers and retail dealers.

Several factors concerning the present slump in music business were discussed, including questions of over-production, high cost of sheet music and lack of musical interest in the home, although no definite conclusion was arrived at.

Louis Bernstein of Shapiro-Bernstein & Co., Inc., and president of the M. P. P. A., in his speech favored a general reduction in the price of sheet music to 25 cents per copy as a direct aid to sales promotion, but was opposed by others, who maintained that the smaller dealer could not possibly find it profitable to sell at that price.

Paine admitted that, since the meeting was originally called merely to openly discuss various ways and means of increasing music sales and not to adopt any measures, it was a success in that various problems confronting music men were brought to the fore which would be taken into closer consideration in the near future.

Hit by Curtain, Sues

Fort Wayne, Ind.—Because, it was claimed, a curtain at the rear of a theatre conducted by the defendant firm, in some manner happened to descend on him while he was sitting beneath it last April 26, and struck him on the head, John W. Lewis has filed suit against the Riley Amusement Corp. here for $2,000 damages. The curtain, which it was said had been rolled up and was hanging a few feet above Lewis, had an iron bar approximately one-half inch thick extending along the bottom, according to the complaint.

Original Title Retained

Louisiana Taxes May Kill Off Small Houses

New Orleans—Many small theatres in Louisiana are threatened with extinction if the proposed 15 per cent amusement tax becomes law. The measure was introduced last week in the legislature and is one of three bills affecting the industry. The other two call for a tax of 3 cents per square foot on billboards and a tax of from $1 to $5 on each billboard.

Addison Goes to Pittsburgh

Rochester—H. M. Addison, former manager of Loew's Rochester, biggest film house in Rochester, left for Pittsburgh last week with a new diamond Shrine pin sparkling from his lapel, the gift of the Rochester Shrine Club at a fete in his honor. Addison, who will become managing director of Loew's Penn in Pittsburgh, has been here two years. David Nolan of Akron, O., is his successor.

Bancroft's Next Set

Hollywood—"Rolling Down to Rio" will be George Bancroft's next picture for Paramount.

Ha-Ha-Ha!!

Speaking of Hollywood and ridiculous sums of money, a motion picture fan publication in India tells us that "it's no secret that Harold Lloyd is pretty well fed up on his grand Benedict Canyon estate, with its lagoons, lakes, water-falls and golf-course." And here's why, according to the publication:

"When Harold got the place completed—as much as such a vast demesne can ever be finished—he discovered that it would require, day in and day out, a staff of 16 gardeners and 19 house servants, exclusive of his four chauffeurs and his personal and studio staff. The upkeep is about Dollars 3,000 weekly. Which only leaves Harold a measly Dollars 37,000 a week for cigarettes and pocket money."

Yes, and Harold would be satisfied with 50 per cent of that press agent's fairy story figure of 40 grand.

Plank Curbing Activities of Circuits in Platform Adopted in Oshkosh

Oshkosh, Wis.—Chain theatre operation may be drawn into the campaign role of state "administration" Republicans, whose platform contains a stinging attack on chain theatre operation, it was indicated at the party's convention here. Strengthening of laws licensing out of state or state corporations to permit revocation for untair trade practices is demanded in the platform.

The Republicans want chain operators "amenable to state regulation" and existing handicaps to independents removed. They also ask imposition of license fees "to pay for maintenance of regulation, and prompt investigation of practicability of tax amendments to equalize present tax burdens."

The rival La Follette progressive Republican group has put forth chain stores as a chief issue in the campaign.

Chain operation was the subject of a heated controversy in Racine last year, when independent operators threatened to close their houses, alleging they were prevented from obtaining quality product due to chain competition.

At the time, the mayor of Racine made a trip to Washington to confer with Wisconsin senators, the Federal Trade Commission and Abram F. Myers, president of Allied States Ass'n. With a heavy tax on chain-operated theatres in Racine threatened, concessions were made by distributors, so threatened closing of the independent houses was averted, as well as any proposed probe of chain activities in the state.

Levee Robbed of Jewels

Hollywood—M. C. Levee, executive manager of Paramount Studios, was the victim of a jewel robbery last week when thieves entered his home and walked off with gems valued at $25,000. Insurance covered about half of the loss. This is Levee's second loss via thieves. Several years ago the producer and his party were held up when returning from a hotel banquet, and lost about $10,000 worth of valuables at that time.

Jack Grant Resigns

Hollywood—With Fawcett Publications taking over control of "Hollywood Magazine," Jack Grant, editor of the latter fan magazine, tendered his resignation. Ruth Biery will represent "Hollywood Magazine" with the other Fawcett fan publications on the Coast.

"U" Buys "Big Four"

Hollywood—Carl Laemmle, Jr., has purchased film rights to "The Big Four," novel by Fainder Dalleng, which is a current best seller in England. The story is a railroad melodrama.

M-G-M Rushing New Pictures; 12 Under Way

Hollywood—M-G-M is further ahead on its advance production activities for the coming year than in similar periods in other years. Twelve pictures are under way at the Culver City studio, most of them in final stages of production. All of these are new season films, and it is expected that at least ten other new season productions will be completed during the summer.

Between June 14 and August 9 the following nine remaining productions on the 1929-30 schedule will be released: "The Big House," "One Embarrassing Night," "The Richest Man in the World," "The Sea Bat," "The Unholy Three," "Way Out West," "Romance," "Our Blushing Brides" and "Let Us Be Gay."

Pictures now being completed by M-G-M are:

"Madame Satan," Cecil B. De Mille's second M-G-M production with cast headed by Kay Johnson, Roland Young, Reginald Denny and Lillian Roth.

"Good News" is being co-directed by Edgar MacGregor and Nick Grinde with a cast headed by Bessie Love, Mary Lawlor, Stanley Smith, Cliff Edwards and Gus Shy. This is an adaptation of the Broadway musical.

King Vidor is on the last lap of his new production, "Billy the Kid," with John Mack Brown, Lucille Powers, Wallace Beery and Karl Dane.

Buster Keaton's new film is tentatively called "Forward March." Sally Eilers plays opposite and Edward Sedgwick is directing.

Reisner Working on Two

Charles Reisner is putting final touches on "The March of Time," revue starring Weber & Fields, De Wolf Hopper and othe roldtimers, along with a host of present-day celebrities. Reisner also has commenced work on a new comedy with music titled, "Like Kelly Can." This is an adaptation of the stage show, "Spring Fever," and its cast includes Robert Montgomery, Dorothy Jordan, Benny Rubin and Catherine Moylan.

Hal Roach is completing "Monsieur Le Fox," which was produced simultaneously in five languages: English, French, Spanish, German and Italian.

Malcolm St. Clair is directing William Haines in "Remote Control." This is an adaptation of the Broadway stage show. Mary Doran has the chief feminine role.

"Trader Horn," which has been in preparation and production for the better part of two years, is near completion. W. S. VanDyke is the director and Harry Carey, Duncan Renaldo and Edwin Booth head the cast.

John Gilbert is working in "Way for a Sailor," which Sam Wood is directing from Albert Wetjen's book. Jim Tully has a featured part.

Grace Moore is starting work in her first M-G-M talking film. This has not yet been titled, but the story was suggested by the career of Jenny Lind.

Joan Crawford is beginning work in "Great Day." Harry Pollard is the director and the story has a musical score by Vincent Youmans.

50 in New Line-Up

M-G-M's new season schedule calls for the release of feature productions, which are listed below:

Marion Davies in "Rosalie," "The Five O'Clock Girl" and one other picture; Greta Garbo in "Red Dust" and two other pictures; John Gilbert in "Way for a Sailor" and one other; Ramon Novarro in "The Singer of Seville," "Song of India" and one other; Lon Chaney in "The Bugle Sounds"; William Haines in "Remote Control" and three others; Norma Shearer in two pictures, as yet untitled; Joan Crawford in "Great Day," "Her Fortune" and two others; Lawrence Tibbett in "New Moon" and one other; Grace Moore in "Jenny Lind" and three others.

"Madame Satan," directed by Cecil B. De Mille; "Razzle-Dazzle," co-starring Marie Dressler and Polly Moran; "Billy the Kid," directed by King Vidor; "Trader Horn," "The World's Illusion," Jacob Wasserman's novel; "Dixie," "War Nurse."

"Ballyhoo," Beth Brown's novel; "Dance, Fools, Dance," an adaptation of Martin Flavin's stage play, "Cross Roads"; "The Great Meadow," Elizabeth Madox Roberts' story of the days of Daniel Boone; "Doing That Thing," with lyrics and music by Jimmy McHugh and Dorothy Fields; "Tampico," Joseph Hergesheimer's story; "The March of Time."

"The Crisis," Winston Churchill's novel of Civil War days; "The Passion Flower," by Kathleen Norris; "Monsieur Le Fox"; "The Dark Star," by Lorna Moon, with Marie Dressler in the central role; and "Those Three French Girls."

New Color Work Halted

Technicolor has served notice on producer-distributors pointing out the inability of the company's Hollywood and Eastern plants to handle new contracts on color work, because of expanded plans of companies now under contract to Technicolor.

Companies planning a number of elaborate all-Technicolor films have postponed production until later in the season, the company claims. The congestion is in the relief print department, where, it is said, 1,100 are now working day and night to keep pace with a 700 per cent increase in plant capacity in one year.

Warners Using Blimps In Eastern Studios

The camera blimps which have replaced the booths at the Brooklyn Vitaphone Studios are expected to speed up production, give more leeway for difficult camera angles and make the shooting of exterior shots comparatively simple. This apparatus, designed by Vitaphone experimenters, consists of a fireproof composition hood which fits over the camera mounted on a tripod and is said to be better than the booths in eliminatnig grind noises.

It is rumored that Warner Bros. will manufacture and market this type of blimp.

Leos Vacationing, Joe to Report Back to Fox Aug. 1

Jack G. Leo, former vice president of Fox, and Joe Leo, head of Fox Metropolitan Playhouses, are setting their vacations. Jack is aboard the Bremen bound for Europe, and will return in October. Joe's going to Wisconsin for his rest, but reports back to the home office Aug. 1.

Pantages Wins Release On Bail of $100,000

Los Angeles—His contention that jail confinement was endangering his life has won release on bail for Alexander Pantages, who has been in custody since last October for an alleged attack on Eunice Pringle, youthful dancer. Pantages is appealing his conviction. Bail was set at $100,000.

176 Shorts for M-G-M in New Season; Up 30%

Hollywood—Addition of 12 "Flip the Frog" cartoon subjects to M-G-M's short feature line-up for next season brings to 176 the total of shorts for 1930-31, an expansion of about 30 per cent. in this company's short product activities over last year.

The new season group of 176 releases includes 22 Laurel-Hardy, "Our Gang" and Charley Chase comedies; 12 Burton Holmes travelogues; 12 colortone revues and other two reel novelty subjects; eight Hal Roach "Boy Friends" comedies; six dog comedies; and 104 issues of Hearst Metrotone News.

Among the group additions to the short feature program for next season are 12 Burton Holmes travel subjects and eight Hal Roach "Boy Friends" comedies. The 12 Holmes subjects will be titled "Around the World with Burton Holmes."

Roach's New Series

The Hal Roach "Boy Friends" series presents an idea in short feature comedies which Roach has had in mind several years. The average age of the "Boy Friends" players is from 15 to 19. Members of the troupe are Dorothy Granger, Mary Kornman, Gertie Messinger, Grady Sutton, David Sharpe and Mickey Daniels.

Total of the Laurel-Hardy, Charley Chase and "Our Gang" comedies planned for the coming year is the same as the number of last season's releases. These comedies are all-dialogue films, and are to be produced in several foreign languages as well as in English.

Three of M-G-M's talking dog comedies have been completed. They are: "Hot Dog," "College Hounds," and "Who Killed Rover?"—all directed by Jules White and ion Myers. These three and three others will be released during 1930-31.

Eight colortone revues are planned for the new year. No titles have been announced.

In the novelty group of new season shorts are two features with music: "The Song Writers' Revue" and "Gems of M-G-M," together with two sketches, "The Rounder," a comedy with George K. Arthur and Dorothy Sebastian, and "Copy," a short newspaper drama.

Colorcraft Develops New Chemical and Dye Method

New quantitative chemical and dye method for developing color pictures has been developed by Colorcraft Corp., which claims the process converts the silver image to the dye image without any loss of definition, and without bleeding or fuzziness. Black and white definitions may be reproduced in red, orange, yellow, green, blue and violet, using artificially or naturally lighted scenes. Focal depth is said to be the same as in black and white, and the company claims direct lab expense will not exceed one cent per foot over the cost of positive raw stock.

Bryan Foy Signs Long Term F. N. Contract

Hollywood—Bryan Foy has signed a long term contract with First National and will direct feature length pictures. He will direct "The Gorilla" as a talker.

The Naked Truth

"Times Square," according to Judge, "is the most overrated and overpublicized district in the world. Fifty per cent of all movies and newspaper columns deal with it constantly, simply because WRITERS, DIRECTORS AND COLUMNISTS AREN'T FAMILIAR WITH ANY OTHER PART OF THE COUNTRY."

Europeans Would Combine Against U. S. "Invasion"

Brussels—Formation of an international bureau at Geneva to defend European films against the American "invasion" is proposed in a resolution adopted here by an international congress of exhibitors. Elimination of amusement taxes in all countries was called for in another resolution adopted. Ways and means for the carrying out of the anti-U.S. resolution were not divulged.

No Suspended Payments From W. E. This Summer

A contract is just that at "Erpi." Which means that all requests from exhibitors to suspend payments on reproducers during the summer will be turned down by the company.

W. E. declares, via Fred B. Warren, eastern district sales manager, that only three such requests have been received, any way, and adds that reports published by Motion Picture News that exhibitors were clamoring for the suspensions à la wholesale are completely and thoroughly wet.

That covers the East. The company says the western division has not reported.

Four-Serial Program Is Confirmed by Universal

Universal this week confirmed the exclusive Motion Picture News announcement of May 10 that the company is to have four talker serials for release in 1930-31. Only the title of the first, "The Indians Are Coming," which Henry McRae is directing, was announced. Tim McCoy and Allene Ray are co-featured. It will be in 12 episodes. The others slated are "Big Circus," ten episodes; "Fingerprints," by Arthur B. Reeve, ten episodes; "Mutiny," a sea serial, 12 episodes. Pathe is to produce five talker serials and Mascot Pictures about the same number.

Wiring of Shubert House Puts St. L. in Tough Spot

St. Louis—Downtown first run stands, already troubled with unhealthy economic conditions and the normal summer depression, now have a new competitor in the nature of Shubert's Rialto, which has been wired for sound. Initial screen show in the legit stand is set for Sunday, when the house starts a local run of "All Quiet on the Western Front." Stage attractions will not be wholly discontinued, however.

Ind'p'ts Panned For Exhibitors' Lack of Faith

Exhibitors, exchanges and the trade in general look upon independent producers as being a brother-under-the-skin to the old "con" men of the shell and pea game era, in the opinion of Charles A. Stimson, of Big 4 Corp., an independent production-distribution unit releasing a series of Wseterns, and others, who charges that "lack of confidence in the independent producers may be traced directly to these producers themselves."

"Time has shown that almost without exception, the independent has blown a loud horn about his new product, only to fall down badly in delivering." "The result of each procedure," states Stimson, "is keen disappointment to the exhib" who counted on the product, and large losses to exchanges which had contracted for the releases.

"As a consequence of this procedure the theatres hesitated to do business with the independent producers and the exchanges which represented them. Yet it has been admitted even by some of the largest producers that the independent man is essential to the industry.

"This matter of keeping faith with the exchanges and exhibitors is of the utmost importance to the independent man who wishes to build up the good will of his organization. I know for a fact that there is a definite place in the motion picture industry for the independent and I feel that it is up to him to make that position secure by never pledging his word unless he can see his way clear to keep it," advises Stimson.

"Merry Go Round" to Be Made as Big "U" Talker

Universal has obtained dialogue rights to "Merry Go Round," which Eric von Stroheim wrote and directed for the company as a silent with Norman Kerry and Mary Philbin featured. The talker version will feature John Boles and Jeanette Loff. No director has been selected. Handman, Goodman & Kent are working on musical settings.

Salesmanship

Credit Emanuel Cohen and his Paramount Publix short subject department with putting over a real piece of selling copy. It is the trailer made by Floyd Gibbons, noted war correspondent and "headline hunter," to announce "With Byrd at the South Pole." Gibbons, who has a large radio following throughout the nation, makes his picture debut in the trailer, and certainly puts over a vivid yarn about his friend, Rear Admiral Byrd, and the South Pole conquest. The running description has been so successful that Cohen has announced that Gibbons will describe the flight in the picture.

HYNES

A Body Blow

Los Angeles—This city has lost its bid for position as America's fourth city, incomplete census tabulations show. Sufficient of the returns have been tabulated to insure Detroit's retention of fourth position, with 1,330,000 persons already counted and an estimated 200,000 additional still to be tabulated.

Mayer, 15 Others Freed in Julian Stock Usury Case

Los Angeles—Louis B. Mayer and 15 co-defendants were exonerated in Superior Court of conspiracy to commit usury in the Julian Petroleum case. The defense rested its case without introducing a word of testimony, after the special prosecutor admitted the impossibility of proving a case of conspiracy. "Not guilty for lack of evidence" was the formal verdict.

Group Advertising for Boston Publix Houses

Boston—Publix downtown theatres this week tried out grouping all of their theatres in one double column spread advertisement instead of bidding for attractive positions for each of the theatres. Each theatre was given its customary design and heading within that space. In the group adv. were included the Metropolitan, Scollay Square, Olympia and Uptown which play day and date, Fenway and Modern which also are now playing day and date, and the Beacon and Globe on another day and date schedule. This is a new arrangement on the day and date booking, for heretofore Modern and Beacon have played day and date for years while the Fenway has been grouped with either the Uptown, Olympia or both.

No Successor for Stein Planned by "U" in Paris

Resignation of Alex Stein as managing director for Universal in France and Belgium on August 1 will leave that post vacant unless the company changes present plans.

Stein was in charge for "U" in Belgium for two years before elevation to his present job, which he has occupied four years. Universal figures French and Belgium business can be handled by supervision from New York with Al Szekler, general European representative, keeping an eye on activities in both countries from Berlin.

Paramount Would Buy 20 Montreal Chain Houses

Montreal—Paramount Publix is seeking to take over United Amusements, Ltd., which operates 20 local theatres. The firm owns a block of common stock of United, officials of which have intimated that control would not be sold. The deal is being sought by J. J. Fitzgibbons of Paramount, and Arthur Cohen, managing director of Famous Players Canadian Corp.

Will Laemmle Buck Consolidated with New Developer? Is Question on Coast

Deal Between Firms Seen Likely Due to Finance Aid to "U"

Hollywood—Initial demonstration of Universal's new developing machine for negative and positive film presents a situation which may develop into a battle between Consolidated Film Industries, captained by H. J. Yates on the one side, and Carl Laemmle and his "U" contingent on the other.

Marketing plans of Laemmle probably will be the deciding factor. If the Universal chief disposes of rights, wholly or in part, to Consolidated, threat of a battle will have been eliminated. However, if Laemmle decides to market independently to companies whose laboratory work Yates has been fighting for over a long period of years, a stiff tilt is likely to follow, say the wiseacres. It is believed, however, that in view of Consolidated's friendly financial gestures to Universal in recent months, Laemmle will give serious consideration before assuming the lone-eagle role.

Universal's machine is said to be fully patented and, it is claimed, does not infringe on any patents owned or controlled by Consolidated or anyone else.

Inspection of the machine by a MOTION PICTURE NEWS reporter disclosed the fact that the apparatus first unwinds the positive from reels, the film then going through a developing bath trough at a slow rate, passing over a couple of rollers to another trough below which contains the hypo. The bottom trough has the water solution for cleansing chemicals off the film. From the bottom trough the film passes up to the top of the machine, where it goes through a drying cabinet.

Can Carry 12 Film Strands

The Spoor-Thompson (Consolidated's device) can only accommodate one roll of film at a time and the film passes through various chemicals vertically. In comparison, the Universal outfit can carry 12 strands of film at one time, passing through the chemicals in a horizontal manner. If the film should break in the Spoor-Thompson machine there is said to be much delay in fixing it and re-threading, while Universal's device permits the film to be tied together without stopping its movement for a second. The slower developing of prints allowed by the new machine is said to result in a better quality of sound track because the chemicals and silver are more thoroughly washed off the positive.

The "U" machine is adjustable to wide film within a few moments through the interchange of rollers. Instead of handling 12 rolls of standard size film at one time, the wide film change-over, of course, would cut to four or six rolls of 65 or 70 mm. In addition, the machine can be split so wide film and 35 mm. may be accommodated at the same time in one machine.

Universal claims clarity of sound is one of the machine's most important factors. It is the invention of C. Roy Hunter, director of sound and head of the photographic division of Universal City, and Robert Pierce, superintendent of the "U" lab. Each machine has a capacity of 1,000,000 feet per week.

Laemmle Silent on Marketing Plans

Carl Laemmle told MOTION PICTURE NEWS that "the new developing machine is still in the demonstration stage, and until we can determine from present demonstrations and from those we are still to make, how far the new machine will supersede present processes, it is impossible to announce any selling or leasing plans. Everything will be determined by these demonstrations," he said.

Curtis Asks Patriotic Week

Co-operation of the industry in the campaign to prolong the observance of the Fourth of July to a full Patriotic Week has been asked by Vice-President Curtis in a letter to Hiram S. Brown, Radio-Keith-Orpheum president.

Brown has pledged his company's support for the plan, and is forwarding the Curtis letter to other circuit heads, explaining that only the limited time available prevents the entire amusement industry from organizing a national committee to put over the campaign.

Yates Priming For War on Lab 'Patent Stealers'

H. J. Yates, head of Consolidated Film Industries, is understood by insiders to be training guns of his Cinema Patents Co. for a stiff tilt against important lab and production-distribution interests over alleged patent violations.

Columbia and its William Horsley Lab, Hollywood, are the first two organizations to be "put on the spot" with injunction actions to prevent the use of alleged infringed developing machines. The initial legal steps were taken by Yates in Federal court on the Coast.

Yates, so the insiders say, has been concentrating on the acquisition of numerous patents over a period of many months, for the purpose of "sewing up" the lab field by controlling the rights to developing machines. He was successful in purchasing five U. S. patents covering Erbograph, and two applications for Erbograph patents; two others on the Leon Gaumont apparatus, and 12 U. S. and foreign patents on Spoor-Thompson, besides six patent applications for the latter.

Having amassed this group of rights, Yates, it is said, organized Cinema Patents Co., Inc., headquartering in New York, to operate independently of other Yates interests in the handling of legal actions against various alleged violators, many of which are doing their own lab work.

Sound Improved By Universal's New Developer?

By WALTER R. GREENE
West Coast Representative, MOTION PICTURE NEWS

Hollywood—Sound seems destined for improvement by development of the sound track via Universal's new developing machine. Smaller lines can be developed than heretofore, due to slower processing and the fact that the retarded movement of the film through various baths eliminates the slipping of the emulsion of the film, which moves at the rate of ten feet per minute thus permitting the development of frequencies as high as 12,000 per second. Thirty minutes from the time a frame of action goes into the machine it is out completely developed and dried and on a reel ready for projection.

The machine itself is 50 feet long, three feet wide and eight feet high, exclusive of the air drying system on top. This space is divided into four compartments. There are three trays, 50 feet long by three feet wide. The top tray contains developing fluid, the center tray contains hypo or hardener and the bottom tray contains distilled water for rinsing.

The film is run through this as a continuous ribbon, being taken off reels at one end, passing over metal rollers and into the baths in the order named. After the washing, it is led over rollers to the fourth compartment which is on top and which is dust proof. Here the film is drawn back and forth through filtered air kept in motion by a vacuum ventilating system, the air passing over the film being alternately warm and cold.

Handles Film Up to 100 Mm.

The film is led from this compartment and automatically wound on 2000 ft. reels. When a reel is nearly full, the operator cuts the film at the end of a scene and starts a new reel.

The motive power for the movement of the film is furnished through a single sprocketed roller just ahead of the final reels. The machine is so finely calibrated that very little pressure is needed for the movement. Twelve strands are run through the baths at one time giving each machine a capacity of 7,200 ft. of film per hour. Universal is now building two more of these machines which will be housed in a new laboratory building.

The Hunter-Pierce machine is built largely of white pine with very few parts and a minimum of metallic parts. The machine handles all widths of film from 16 mm to 100 mm; it developes either negative or positive; is claimed to be less expensive than present apparatus; can be run with one-third the man power.

High Taxes and Shortage of Silents To Sound Deathknell of French Exhibs

All Small Houses Must Wire Now or Close Down, U. S. Gov't Report States

Washington—Morale of the French industry is so low because of burdensome taxation that it is difficult to raise money enough to keep pace with sound film developments. As a result, France is falling by the wayide in the free-for-all-fight for supremacy of the European field. This revelation is contained in the official Government report of conditions in Europe, compiled by the Dept. of Commerce, Motion Picture Division.

The majority of French theatres seat less than 500 each, and, because of the tax problem, it is questionable whether hundreds of them will ever be in a position to wire. If they don't wire there is a more serious problem to face, that of a radical shortage of silent product in 1930-31, a situation with which American exhibitors must contend this year.

Great Britain, on the other hand, is reported to be far ahead of all other European countries in film activities, although news of the rapid development of wide film and color has been sufficient to disrupt plans for the future. It is argued that difficulties to financing installations for sound is considerable and that the possibility of additional outlays for wide screen so disquieting that the consensus of opinion has it concerted action is necessary to bring about a postponement until the industry has recovered from disruption brought about by talkers.

In this second installment of the government report to. appear in MOTION PICTURE NEWS, conditions in both Great Britain and France are discussed in detail.

Great Britain

By Martin H. Kennedy, American Trade Commissioner, London

The British film industry during 1929 suffered from several industrial reverses, and it is confronted at the threshold of 1930 by many momentous problems.

Prior to 1927, owing to the inroads of foreign films, the film industry of Great Britain reached a crisis which was met by Parliamentary intervention in the form of the quota act. Under the stimulus of this act the beginning of 1929 found confidence in the future of the film industry restored, and it was claimed that a market for British films was assured.

As a result of this protective measure, numerous British film companies were organized and public subscriptions to their flotations reached huge totals (figures placed by some at £35,000,000 and £40,000,000). Many new studios were erected, and numerous silent films were produced. So great were the activities in the industry, however, that it was generally predicted that large quantities of silent films beyond the requirements of the quota act would result. At that tme several thouact would result. At that time several thouwere doing good business.

In the meantime the British industry did not realize the rapidity of the progress being made by the sound film and was not fully prepared for its invasion of the British market. As anticipated, 1929 closed with a large surplus stock of silent films and a demand for sound pictures which the British industry was not prepared to supply.

A large number of companies whose activities were devoted to the production of silent films were not financially able to change over to sound production and were forced into liquidation. Several thousand cinemas in Great Britain which find their receipts diminishing because of the demand for sound pictures are confronted with the necessity of installing sound equipment.

In face of this, the news of the rapid development of wide screen and color has been sufficient to disrupt plans for the future, and the consensus of the cinema press and industry is that concerted action is necessary to bring about a postponement of the introduction of the wide screen until such time as the industry has recovered from its disruption resulting from the invasion of sound, and that a powerful governing body to control, advise, and direct the industry under the direction of a competent leader should be organized in the meantime.

It is estimated that 171 theatres were constructed in England during 1929. An average of about 1,200 new seats was installed in the new theatres erected during the year, making a total added seating capacity of approximately 200,000. This compares with approximately 70 new theatres in 1928 with an added seating capacity of about 90,000.

It has been roughly estimated that about 250 theatres were reconstructed during the year in Great Britain. In considering this question, however, it has been found difficult to determine the meaning or limit of the term "reconstruction." Reconstruction is so general and varied and between such wide limits that no accurate idea can be given of the actual number of theatres in which the changes can be dignified as reconstruction. There are, furthermore, no records now available by which it can be determined how many new seats were added by reconstruction.

During the past year about 980 cinemas were supplied with sound equipment. Of this number 693 have American equipment, 177 British Talking Pictures, 21 Edibell, 20 Electrocord, 18 Melotone, 14 Filmophone, 13 Syntok, 4 each New Era and Celebritone, 3 each Klangfilm (German) and Classitone, 2 each Naturetone and Syncro, and 1 each Brooks, Clarion, Coronel, Majestone, Marshalls, and Own Make.

Production Takes Slump

Approximately 40 feature films were actually started during the year. Silent versions were made of all of these and, in addition, about 35 of them were eventually synchronized in one manner or another. This compares with a 1928 production of 95 films.

The best opinion seems to indicate that the cost of the average silent film ranges between £5,000 and £12,000 (roughly $25,000 and $60,000). This is somewhat below the cost of the sound films, as it is figured that the average setting for the silent film, cost of artists, etc., are less than the cost connected with the sound film.

In view of the fact that sound films are produced on a more elaborate scale than the silent films, the average cost of a sound film is considered to be from £12,000 to £20,000 ($60,000 to $100,000). It has been estimated that such sound pictures as "Blackmail," "High Treason" and "Atlantic" cost £24,000, £30,000 and £40,000 ($120,000, $150,000 and $200,000), respectively.

Statistics collected from English studios and published in an English film trade magazine show that when a picture costs £15,000 the amounts paid are approximately as follows:

To actors, supers, and staff	£3,000 ($15,000)
To director	1,500 ($7,500)
To his assistants	1,750 ($8,750)
To the scenarist	1,000 ($5,000)
To the photographers and operators	1,500 ($7,500)

The 40 films referred to were produced by the following companies:

British International Pictures (Ltd.)	21
Gaumont Co.	5
Gainsborough Pictures	6
New Era Pictures	1
British Instructional Pictures	1
British and Dominion Films Corp.	4
Welsh Pearson-Elder Films	2

There is little evidence of great progress being made in short sound subjects. The British International Pictures is said to be making one a week, while Gaumont is accredited with two per week. The former, however has plans to make about 12 pictures, while the latter has plans to make about eight. Gainsborough and British Sound Films are contributing to the number of short sound films at irregular intervals, but no definite report as to their production is at present available.

The cinema press is authority for the statement that at the present time there is little real competition in the sound short field being encountered from the Continent, but that the foreign market has been increased by American short comedies some 300 per cent, and that the volume is increasing rapidly. It is believed that the possibility of further business is brighter than it has been, particularly as shorts seem to lend themselves much more readily than lengthy productions to the multilingual plans and to the employment of foreign talent.

Ten studios thus far have been equipped for sound-film production. Five of the studios are equipped with American recording apparatus.

American Films Gain

According to the Kinematograph Year Book, there were actually released in the United Kingdom during 1929, 663 feature films, of which 495 were American, 87 English, 60 German, and 16 French. Of the American films released, 53 were sound films, of which 36 also had silent versions. The following table contains an analysis of this situation:

According to these figures, the American share of the market for 1929 was 74.66 per cent as against 71.72 per cent in 1928, when 558 out of a total of 778 films distributed in the United Kingdom were American. The British share of the market also rose, from 12.21 per cent in 1928 to 13.13 per cent in 1929, while the other foreign participation declined from 16.07 per cent to 12.21 per cent.

The opinion of the local press and writers on cinema subjects, as expressed by one of their number, is in substance as follows:

Owing to the advent of the sound films, there was more or less of an upheaval in the British film industry, and, as was the case in America when talking pictures arrived, chaos ensued; but after the first few months, when it became evident that the public was taking to this new form of entertainment, there gradually came about a more organized state of affairs.

British film companies suffered by reason of the fact that they were almost unprepared and had a number of silent films, upon which a great deal of money had been spent, relegated practically to their shelves. Those exhibitors who were fortunate enough to get their houses wired immediately showed an increase in revenues.

The British public's reaction to sound films was exactly the same as that observed in America. They probably were not exactly tired of the silent film, but interest was undoubtedly waning.

The new type of entertainment has acted as a tonic, and there is not the slightest shadow of doubt that it is "going strong," not so much on the novelty value but on general entertainment value.

That American prestige held up remarkably well is evidenced by the fact that, with the exception of some half dozen British sound pictures, the majority of the pictures shown were American, and it is generally conceded that the type of American pictures shown has added greatly to the prestige of the American film producer.

Exhibitors are definitely impressed with the necessity of making sound installation and believe that sooner or later they must provide for sound films. This situation confronts about 3,000 exhibitors whose theatres are not yet wired, but it is thought that within a year or so almost all cinemas will have some sort of sound apparatus.

Plans for production in 1930 are still somewhat indefinite, but companies like the British International Pictures, Gainsborough, Gaumont, British and Dominion Film Corporation, Welsh Pearson Elder Films, New Era, Associated Sound Films, and one or two small concerns all have a number of pictures scheduled for production, and although no accurate estimate can be made, production plans for 1930 provide for about 75 pictures.

The only legislation inimical to the interests of American films in prospect is that which has been suggested in several quarters which has to do with a possible amendment to the film quota act, to provide for a 25 per cent quota of British films distributed. It is claimed by those who are sponsoring the amendment that the quota act, which was designed to foster and stimulate British production, in reality has the opposite effect. It is argued that the minimum cost of a picture should be £15,000, and that this would have the effect of compelling the superior product, on the theory that distributing concerns would find it a profitless task to attempt to carry 25 per cent of inferior films and would insist upon the higher grade of production. There is a growing feeling, however, that the quota act is an artificial protection to the industry and therefore uneconomic, and that any amendment to the act will not aid the industry but accentuate the difficulties it is now experiencing, and that the chances of any amendments to the act are remote.

Extra!

From the United Artists' publicity department comes the following announcement:

"The title of the Arthur Hammerstein picture has been changed from 'Lottery Bride' to 'The Lottery Bride'."

Will some statistical hound please figure out how much the change will cost in electric current for marquee signs?

France

By George R. Canty, American Trade Commissioner, Paris

During 1929, depression in the French film industry reached the lowest level in a decade. Chief factors underlying this state of affairs were the abrupt change from silent to sound-films and the protracted film-quota controversy which kept American films out of France for six months. Domestic production of feature films slumped 44.6 per cent under 1928 figures, total motion-picture consumption fell 25 per cent, the American supply of feature films dropped 32.6 per cent, while German films continued their steady increase since 1924 with a 6.5 per cent jump.

The supply of feature films censored for the French market since 1924, by countries of origin, is shown in the following table.

*Pictures taken on French territory and under French direction, but with not less than 50 per cent or more than 75 per cent of the leading roles filled by French artists.

The table shows a market consumption decline of 145 features, or 25 per cent, from 1928, a condition which was due chiefly to fewer exhibition dates being available on account of longer runs of sound films. The total market supply for the year, however, is the lowest since 1919.

The decline was absorbed fully by French and American producers, since other gains or losses were relatively insignificant. French production declined 44.6 per cent, and the American supply decreased 32.6 per cent. German producers continued their progress since 1924, with an increase of 6.5 per cent. The British supply held its 1928 prestige, despite the lowered consumption of feature films.

The share of the French feature-film market supplied by the leading contributers in 1929 as compared with 1928 is shown in the following table.

Share of French Feature-Film Market Acquired by Leading Suppliers
[In per cent]

Country	1928	1929 Share	1929 Change from 1928
United States	53.7	48.3	—5.4
Germany	20.9	29.7	+8.8
France	16.1	11.9	—4.2
England	4	5.3	+1.3
Other Countries	5.3	4.8	—0.5

The French loss is ascribed to difficulties encountered in readjusting production to sound-film output and to caution in silent-film output in view of uncertain demand. The American loss is due entirely to nonparticipation in the French market from March 30 to September 25, when the quota controversy was being discussed. The German and British gains were due to unexpected demands for feature films while American features were off the market and not to any material improvement in quality or popularity.

No production costs are available, but it is generally estimated that the average was $40,000 a picture. Many productions, to be sure, cost considerably less than this amount, but a few so-called "supers," on the other hand, attained very high amounts. This would indicate a total production cost of slightly more than $2,000,000, as compared with $3,750,000 during 1928.

Although 211 American features were distributed during 1929 as compared with 313 during the previous year, only 133 were handled by American companies maintaining their own, subsidiary organizations in France. This latter figure compares with 231 for 1928, a loss of 42.4 per cent, which resulted from American inactivity during the quota negotiations. The remaining 78 American films distributed in France during 1929, as compared with 82 during 1928, were handled by independent agencies. Incidentally, American exchanges in France distributed but three foreign films during 1929 as against 17 during 1928.

Much is being published concerning new recording processes in France, but very few of the equipments have actually been manufactured.

The Gaumont company has equipped two of its three Paris studios with Gaumont-Peterson-Paulsen sound recorders. The Tobis studio, at Epernay, has three Klangfilm installations. The former Cineromans studios at Joinville, now controlled by Pathé Natan, have installed seven American apparatus and one Klangfilm. The Haik studio at Courbevoie has three Cinevox Haik installations. The Natan studio, rue Francoeur, Paris, has two American truck recorders.

Sound Still Speculative

It is evident that it will take many months before France will be able to produce even satisfactory dialogue films beyond the Gaumont, Tobis, and Pathé-Natan studios (Joinville and Paris). Therefore, the majority of the sound versions of French feature films will undoubtedly have to be produced in Germany and England in order to meet exhibitor demand during 1930. It should be borne in mind that but four "talkies" were turned out by French companies during 1929, and three of these were produced outside of France.

Many different types of reproduction apparatus are said to be available in France; 17 distinct types are announced as on the market exclusive of American makes. It is quite probable that this number includes several on which prompt delivery of orders can not be made.

The installation of reproducing equipment in French cinemas during 1929 was rather slow, partly because of the scarcity of sound films, already mentioned, and partly because of a general tightness of money and the great predominance of small houses that have been unable to shoulder the expenses of available reproducing equipment. It is this predominance September 19 sanctioned, with the approval of the Undersecretary of State for Fine Arts, an agreement between the president of the Chambre Syndicale and the representative of the American organized industry to maintain a status quo of seven to one until October 1, 1930, or, if necessary, until October 1, 1931, if an accord had not been reached between the two parties involved by May 1, 1930. During this extended period the Chambre Syndicale plans to evolve, with the cooperation of the Government, some new system of protection to the native industry which does not savor of the present contingent system.

The morale of the French film industry is low on account of the continuation of burdensome entertainment taxes. Naturally, with this handicap, it is difficult to obtain funds to initiate a concerted movement to keep pace with world sound film developments. The vast majority of the French motion picture theatres have a capacity of less than 500 seats each, and it is a serious question whether most of them will ever be in position to reproduce sound films. On the other hand, just where they will find, after next year, sufficient silent films to fill their play dates profitably is also a serious question.

The leading motion picture theatres, however, are rapidly being wired with substantial reproducing equipment. Actually, the progress made in 1929 in this direction was not good, as explained previously, but already there are indications that the country's film leaders are generally "sold" on sound films.

Taxation a Heavy Burden

During the latter part of 1929 the French industry came closest to an alleviation of the entertainment taxes. This is an indication that the forces favorable to this movement are getting stronger, and that the Government gradually is seeing the situation from the viewpoint of the exhibitor. Trade magazines are continuing their energetic efforts for a general reduction of taxes.

During 1929 there was a general tendency toward much-needed consolidation of leading companies. The potent Cineromans production company of Jean Sapene, heretofore the recognized leader of the French industry, was absorbed by the new Pathé-Natan concern, which will confine its production activities to the Cineromans studios at Joinville and the Natan studio on the rue Francoeur, Paris. In addition, this company has developed the strongest chain in France by securing control over the cinemas of the O. P. C. L. circuit, the Omnia theatres, and the Marivaux first-run houses on the Paris boulevards. The Pathe Natan company now controls some 60 houses. The second largest chain in France is the Aubert-Franco film group. This concern is composed of about 40 houses that include the Aubert chain, the Franco Film chain, and the Gaumont houses. A smaller chain is a group of nine motion picture theatres throughout France controlled by an American company. There are several small chains in France, but these do not include more than eight or nine cinemas at the most. In the aggregate, however, they will play a prominent part in distribution if and when their houses become wired for sound. Obviously, the purpose of these cinema chains is exhibitor-buying power.

As time passes, it is expected that there will develop many joint production companies for the turning out of dialogue films in different languages. Already signs plant to the formation of Franco-German companies to supply the French and German markets with different versions of the same film, and it is generally accepted that this type of production will soon involve Spanish versions to supply the very wide market for Spanish dialogue films. Italian versions also offer some possibilities to the French producers, it is claimed.

With such an unsettled state of affairs, it is difficult to forecast accurately 1930 results. As previously stated, substantial progress should be made in the wiring of theatres, and those houses wired with adequate equipment should enjoy unprecedented success. Available silent films will command considerably higher rentals than heretofore, owing to the probable small supply of this type of film and the great number of unwired houses requiring it. On the other hand, unwired-cinema owners face a situation that should induce them to wire their theatres or to withdraw from the trade, that causes the general feeling among reliable sources that the French film situation will continue unsettled during 1930, but it is felt generally that the larger wired theatres will enjoy a successful year.

As of Dec. 31, 1929, 166 theatres were wired for the reproduction of sound films. American equipment is used in 92 of them, Ideal Sonore, Gaumont, in 10, Tobis-Klangfilm in 1, Melovox in 18, and Sonovision (Gerardot) in 45. In addition, it is understood that 11 American reproducers are installed in studios, exchanges, etc.

These figures do not take into account the small theatres which have been equipped with so-called "bootleg" installations, since they are really noncompetitive with American equipment and will very probably be scrapped if and when the houses involved can afford adequate equipment.

Theatre Construction Slumps

During 1929 new construction in France lagged considerably as compared with former years. It is estimated that 20 new houses made their appearance, adding nearly 20,000 seats to the country's capacity. The following list shows their names, location, and seating capacity:

The Eldorada, at Lyon, is a conversion to motion pictures; and the Capitole, at Algiers, had not been opened at the end of 1929.

During the early part of 1929 it became quite apparent that the French quota restrictions were inefficacious, and that the domestic market was overflooded with censor licenses. In other words, licenses had little or no market value because of the excess of supply over demand. The Chambre Syndicale de la Cinematographie Française, the organized French film trade, therefore recommended to the governmental Film Control Commission that the quota for the following film release year, commencing October 1, 1929, be tightened from the award of seven of these licenses for each domestic feature film produced to three to one. This obviously would have the effect of cutting down the number of available licenses to be used against the importation of foreign features and should increase their worth to French owners.

These recommendations were made just at the time when American exchange managers were preparing their plans for the coming re-

Future of Sound In French Trade Hangs in Balance

THERE'S a certain young actor in the film colony who, if it weren't for his powerful family influences, would not be tolerated in that community. He was once a good actor, but his excesses and riotous living took up so much of his time he didn't give his career much attention and he hasn't been on the screen for a long period. Latest report on his condition is that what he actually needs now is an alienist. His health is gone, his nerves are shot to pieces and recently there have been intervals when his mind was not functioning properly. The loyalty of one of his relatives is all that keeps him out of some kind of an institution.

He and one sister have been sorry problems to the family, but he has made life miserable for so many girls there is little sympathy to be wasted on him. He has more than one ruined career on his conscience, but he has such a fascinating manner that even the so-called wise stars of Hollywood have fallen for his line. He drinks himself into a stupor and when under the influence of drugs has done terrible things.

But there's one member of his family who has stuck by him and the movie colony is waiting to see just how long her influence is going to last or how much good it will do.—N. Y. Graphic.

THE AMERICANS have proved themselves singularly inept and clumsy in handling the vocal film. The reason is not far to seek. A young and ardent people, they were at once at their ease in front of the camera, and able to exteriorize by gesture their simple and ingenuous mentality. But they are ill at ease when compelled to give up gesticulating and to use articulate language to express their thoughts and feelings. America is not a country of dramatic authors and lecturers. Their fine athletic young men and pretty girls, with their pure lines and graceful figures, lose all their assurance when called upon to make a speech. Then, again, these charming girls are often endowed with characteristically nasal and raucous voices. We have seen and heard some amusing specimens on the music-hall boards. Camera for Both 35 and 70mm Is Declared Ready

Syracuse—Development of a new self-contained camera, which is in two styles, both for 35 mm. and 75 mm. film has been completed by J. M. Wall, head of the J. M. Wall Machine Co., which has in production 40 Grandeur cameras, using the 70 mm. width film. This new camera has as yet not been turned over to producers.

The motor of the new camera is built in the case, and there are said to be refinements in focusing, in automatic film tension, automatic fadeout, which may be set at any required distance, in the vignetting device and in the intermittent unit. Vibration is declared eliminated in the camera said to be practically noiseless in operation.

Wall began making cameras about four years ago when Fox-Case was seeking a means of overcoming the noisy camera. He solved the problem and in succeeding years developed some 15 different models of cameras. Today 55 of one model are said to be in use, 32 of a second, eight of a third and four of a fourth.

THE

Projectionists' Round Table

By John F. Rider

THERE are batteries of types other than the primary and the secondary discussed in the previous lesson. Such batteries are, however, supplementary and need not be considered at this time. Our interest may be devoted to items of greater import.

If we consider the battery as a unit, we have a definite item whereby we can produce an electric force. In other words, we have a source of emf or voltage, a source which may be utilized to cause the flow of electric current and to do work in various forms. As such, it is necessary to rate such sources of emf. This is done with voltage specifications supplemented by another term, "ampere-hour" which will be dealt with a little later in this lesson.

If a complete battery, as stated, consists of a number of cells and a complete battery bears a certain voltage rating, it stands to reason that each of the cells in the battery, likewise bear a voltage rating. This happens to be the case. If a complete battery consists of three cells connected in a certain manner, which detail will be considered in a subsequent paragraph, each one of the cells is in itself a source of voltage, and its exact value depends upon the design of the cell.

Use Standard Voltage

It is customary, however, to construct cells with a standard voltage. It might be well, however, to state at this time, that whatever data is applicable to a complete battery as a structure of a number of cells is applicable to a single cell employed as a battery. While the latter arrangement does not find universal application in sound work, the types of batteries to be mentioned find utility at various times. We are referring to the primary type of battery known as the No. 6 dry cell. This unit is a single cell of the "dry" or "non-rechargeable" type, and, in physical structure, is about three inches in diameter and about six inches tall. The voltage rating of this cell is about 1.5 volts. Hence a single cell is a battery, in this instance, of 1.5 volts rating.

Such single cells as batteries are to be found in the storage or "wet" type of battery, utilized in innumerable sound systems. As we stated in the preceding lesson, such cells are employed in tandem with others and, when interconnected in one container, are classified as batteries. A number of batteries utilized as a unit would be classified as a "bank." Thus, we have cells, batteries and banks of batteries.

At this time one is apt to wonder about the application of a number of cells to form a battery. Is there but one method of connecting such cells or are various systems available? The answer to the question is to the affirmative, relative to the latter half. Cells may be connected in sundry fashion, the exact system depending upon the proposed utility of the complete battery. Despite this leeway, one system of connection is standard. This is known as the series. We shall repeat this statement because it is apt to confuse the reader when a subsequent statement is made.

The cells in a battery are usually connected in series fashion. This brings up the question of series connection. Just what is meant by a series connection? Before we answer the quoted question we take this opportunity to remind the reader that we are speaking about cells employed to constitute a single battery. This does not mean a single cell, but instead a number of cells which are arranged to form a single battery. This differs from a number of batteries arranged to form a "bank."

Lesson Six

In this lesson, Mr. Rider discusses the functions of batteries, how to hook them up and defines what is meant by the coulomb, the ampere, connections in series.

Each cell by virtue of its structure and the conversion of chemical action within the cell into a source of electric potential is a unit wherein is existent a difference of potential between its terminals. Let us say that this "wet" cell is rated at two volts. This means that the negative terminal is two volts negative with respect to the positive terminal and, conversely, the positive terminal is two volts positive with respect to the negative terminal. At this time we wish to remind the reader of what was said in lesson 5 and to refer to Figure 8 and the associated explanation of relative polarity. A certain magnitude of electric pressure is present between the two terminals of the single cell shown in Figure 12. This is the cell referred to earlier in this paragraph. This pressure is two volts. If we now arrange another cell capable of producing a like value of electric pressure in such fashion that the electric pressure available from one cell aids that in the other cell, the electric pressure available from the two cells will be equal to twice that available from one cell. Expressed in another manner, we connect the cells in such fashion that the two cells function as one and that the chemical action taking place within the two cells aid each other and the two cells function as one. This is accomplished by connecting the positive terminal of one cell to the negative terminal of the other or by connecting the negative terminal of one cell to the positive terminal of the other. Either of these connections, as shown in Figures 12A and 12B will result in two open terminals. The positive of one and the negative of the other, or vice-versa.

How Series Work

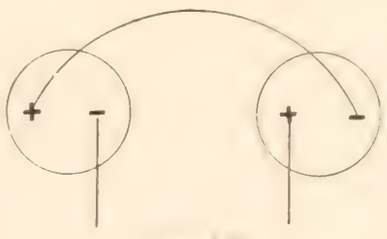
If we now refer to Figure 12A, the positive terminal 2 of cell X bears a certain relation to the negative terminal of that same cell. It is obviously positive. At the same time, because of its connection with the negative terminal 3 of cell X1, this last mentioned terminal (3) although it is negative with respect to the positive terminal 4 of cell X1, is positive with respect to the negative terminal 1 of cell X. Thus the flow of charges in these two cells is such as if they were one and the difference of potential present between the terminals 5 and 6 is the sum of the difference of potential across 1 and 2 and across 3 and 4. This is a series connection of batteries. If we recognize for the present that two open terminals must be had in all battery circuits and the remaining terminals are connected as shown, that is terminals of opposite polarity are interconnected, the system is series connected.

It is evident from the foregoing, that a series connection always increases the voltage or electric pressure available from a number of cells and the total voltage in a series system is equal to the sum of the voltages available from the individual sources of potential.

Under the circumstances it is possible to form several conclusions. First, that like magnitudes of voltage sources are not necessary in order to arrange a series system. While the structure of a battery is such that a number of like emf producing cells are connected in series, say three cells of two volts each to produce a battery of six volts, it is possible to connect a cell of two volts in series with a cell of four volts in order to produce the required six volts. This, of course, is not carried out in commercial battery construction, but the data is nevertheless of interest because it is applicable in another form. The second conclusion we may develop, is that the failure of any one cell or source of voltage in a battery will naturally reduce the total voltage available from that cell. These two conclusions should be remembered for future use.

It is possible to summarize a series connection of such cells or battery sources of voltage with a mathematical expression as follows:

E = E1 + E2 + E3 + E4. . . . where



E is the total voltage

E1 is the voltage of one cell in the series system

E2 is the voltage of another cell in the series system, etc.

Now if the above is true in the case of cells, and a number of cells constitute a battery, it must be true in the case of batteries. The total voltage of a bank of batteries connected in series is the sum of the voltage output of the batteries in that bank. If each battery in the bank consists of three cells of two volts each connected in series, the voltage output of each battery is six volts and, if five such batteries are connected in series, the total voltage output of the bank is 30 volts.

As a point of information, all storage batteries are not designed in such fashion that three cells constitute the complete battery. In many instances ten or twelve cells may be connected in series to constitute a battery rated at 24 volts. Such are the units classified as the storage "B" or "plate" batteries in a system. In addition to storage batteries, dry cells smaller than the No. 6 cells mentioned earlier in the text are arranged in series to form "dry" plate or "B" batteries of 45 volts. Such batteries are frequently employed to supply the voltage required for the photoelectric cells.

The time is perhaps right for the discussion of another important item associated with the connection of cells and batteries, but we shall forego this discussion until we have completed the statements about the various connecting systems used to provide various voltage ratings.

Parallel Connection

The increase in voltage output of a number of cells connected in series is due to the effect of the connection upon the motion of the electric charges during the chemical action within the cell. It is possible to so arrange cells that the flow of charges in each cell is independent of the flow of charges in another cell.

This is accomplished by arranging the polarity of the cells in such fashion that the flow of charges is not continuous through all the cells. In other words, the difference of potential between two points in one cell is not additive to the difference of potential between two points in another cell. This is arranged by placing several points at the same difference of potential, so as to preclude a flow of charges between these points. Such an arrangement is improvised by connecting the positive terminal of one cell to the positive terminal of the other and the negative terminal of one cell to the negative terminal of the other.

This is shown in Figure 13 and is known as Parallel connection of cells. It is evident that terminal 4 of cell X1 bears the same relation to terminal 1 of cell X as terminal 2 of cell X bears to terminal 1 of cell X. Therefore, the voltage or potential difference between leads 5 and 6 is the same as the potential difference between 1 and 2 and between 3 and 4. Thus, in a Parallel connected system, the sum voltage or total voltage is the same as the voltage of any one of the cells in the system.

As in the case of the series system, if the voltage relations stated in connection with cells is true, the same relation holds if the cells are complete batteries. Thus, ten 30-volt batteries connected in parallel, that is the positive terminals of all the batteries connected together and the negative terminals of all the cells connected together, will constitute a voltage source of only 30 volts. If these same ten batteries were connected in series the total voltage would be 300 volts instead of the 30 volts available in parallel fashion.

At this stage one cannot help but wonder about the reasons for such connections, particularly the parallel arrangement. One can readily appreciate the series system when a voltage higher than that available from one cell or battery is required. But why the parallel system?

A difference of potential between any two points represents, as has been stated, a flow of electric charges. That is, the tendency of these charges to flow from one point to another. If either the parallel or the series sequence of batteries is connected to an electric circuit, there would be a flow of charges around that circuit. This is illustrated in Figures 14A and B. If the structure of the electric circuit were the same in both cases, the tendency of electric charges to move would be greater in Figure 14A, assuming that the voltage of the individual batteries illustrated is the same. The greater rate of electronic flow in Figure 14A would be due to the greater difference of potential established between points 1 and 2.

Coulombs and Amperes

Now we stated that electric current is an electron in motion. Furthermore, the flow of charges is the flow of electric current. Thus, each electron represents a certain quantity of electricity or a certain electric charge. If 6.4 x 10^{18} electrons move past a certain point in a circuit, a Coulomb of electricity has been conveyed past that point. The unit of the quantity of electric current is the Coulomb. This should not be confused with the rate of electronic flow. There is, of course, a definite association between the quantity of electricity and the rate of flow. If the rate of flow is increased the quantity of electricity is increased.

If the rate of flow is decreased the quantity of electricity is decreased. Normal practice dictates the use of terms descriptive of the rate of flow rather than the quantity of electricity. This rate of flow is, therefore, the quantity of electricity which moves past a certain point in a given period of time. If we state a definite rate of flow, it may be interpreted in quantity of electricity, since there is a definite relation between the two. A term is applied to denote rate of flow and it is the Ampere. Thus, if one coulomb of electricity is conveyed past a certain point in one second, the rate of electronic flow past that point is one ampere.

The term ampere is generally applied in connection with electric current rather than electronic flow, although both are one and the same. All future reference to the ampere will, therefore, be in connection with electric current. Now before we progress further, this discussion of the coulomb and the ampere is not intended as a detailed discussion of current, but is made in order to explain a certain point allied with the rating and utility of batteries. Unfortunately such an explanation is necessary in order to expedite comprehension of the details which shall follow.

Referring once again to the coulomb, it is possible to express electric current as coulombs per second. The letter representative of the term coulomb is a capital Q. Thus

$$I = \frac{Q}{t} \text{ - where}$$

I is the current in amperes
Q is the coulomb
t is the time in seconds.

and the expression for the number of coulombs would then be

$$Q = I \times t$$

Ampere-Hours

Now let us go back to the batteries for a continued discussion. Referring to Figure 14A, one continuous path is provided for the flow of charges or current in that circuit. The same flow must traverse both batteries and since the tendency of the charge to flow is a matter allied with the total potential difference between the points 1 and 2, the chemical decomposition is the same within both cells. Considering the two cells as one, it is obvious that the total amount of electronic activity takes place in both cells.

Now the amount of chemical action which may take place in a cell is naturally limited. In the "non-rechargeable" cell, the unit must be discarded after it is discharged. In the "storage" cell, the unit may be restored after discharged. In either case, however, a period of total discharge is reached. This period of discharge is a flow of charges within the cell in the form of chemical decomposition. There must, therefore, be some relation between the action flow of charges and the time. Expressed in another manner, there must be some specification relative to just how long the battery will provide the correct voltage difference. This term is quoted as Ampere-hours, signifying the rate of discharge or the quantity of electricity which may be secured during the discharge period. This ability on the part of the cell is known as the "capacity" of the cell and is quoted as Ampere-hours.

The "capacity" of a cell in Ampere-hours is a matter of design, and represents for what period of time the cell will discharge in amperes, or how many amperes of current may be available in a specified period of time. A cell rated 120 Ampere-hours means that it will discharge at a rate of one ampere for 120 hours or supposedly at 120 amperes for one hour. The latter relation is not absolutely true, but may be quoted for explanation purposes. If we now convert the rate of flow into quantity of electricity, we can state that a battery rated at 120 ampere-hours and discharging at a rate of 10 amperes, supplies 36,000 coulombs of electricity, and will supposedly continue to do so for a period of 12 hours. The value of 36,000 coulombs is secured as follows:

1 ampere for a minute = 60 coulombs
1 ampere for an hour = 3,600 coulombs
10 amperes for an hour = 36,000 coulombs

Now if each of the cells in Figure 14A is rated at a certain number of ampere-hours and the use of the series connection causes the flow of one ampere, the same rate of flow takes place in both cells. If, however, the parallel connection shown in Figure 14B is used, the current divides between the two cells and, if the total current is one ampere, each cell provides only .5 ampere or half of the total. If three such cells were used in parallel, each cell would discharge at only one-third of the total rate; viz.: with a total current flow of 3,600 coulombs, each cell would provide only 1,200 coulombs per hour.

Thus, parallel connections are used to increase the ampere-hour capacity of a battery or of a bank. Since the discharge rate represents in the case of the non-rechargeable batteries, normal operating life, parallel connection is used to provide longer operating life. In the case of rechargeable batteries, it means longer operation prior to total discharge.

Pantages Opens And Grosses in L. A. Tumble

Los Angeles—A big local run on the bromo bottles gave only little relief to exhibs here when they piped the books and saw figures in a heavy, deep red. 'Twas a hectic week, mates, with what the new Pantages taking 30 grand of what usually goes into the old stands, and ideal weather for the beaches drawing like a heavy magnet from theatres.

Grauman's Chinese was one of the few exceptions, clicking another high figure with its take of $33,200, rating 208%.

"All Quiet" could not get higher than par. Clara Bow was away off at the Paramount, in comparison with expectations. Her opus drew $27,000, which rates only 108%.

They passed right by John Gilbert and his "Redemption," which flopped with an 86% rating on $23,200. Even "Divorcee," big money-maker heretofore, was far from natural. This grossed $12,200, meaning 122%.

"Cuckoos" took the week's low, turning in $9,800 for its fourth week. Very weak at 61%.

"HELL'S ANGELS" (Caddo)
HOLLYWOOD—Grauman's Chinese—(2,023), 75c-$1.50, 2nd week, 7 days, twice daily. Other attractions: Sid Grauman prologue. Gross: $33,200. Rating: 208%.

$8,000 and 120% To 'Cuckoos' and 'Devil's Holiday'

Des Moines—Bad weather affected business here—rain and more rain.

"Cuckoos" at the Orpheum and "Devil's Holiday" at the Paramount held the best records, each rating of 120%. "True to the Navy" did 100% for a nine-day run when "Mammy" was taken off after a week, having itself been set in ahead because of a weak sister in the week before. Business at the Strand was fair with the split pictures rating 90%.

Drinking Scenes in Films Are Hit by Ministers

Des Moines—Drinking scenes in films showing the use of intoxicants as "attractive, adventurous and fashionable" were protested by ministers attending the seventy-second general assembly of the United Presbyterian Church of North America. The protests were incorporated in a report of a committee on reform, headed by F. Scott McBride, general superintendent of the Anti-Saloon League of America.

J. C. Enslen has been named general sales manager of the General Register Corp., New York, manufacturer of ticket registers. He is a veteran of the equipment field.

'All Quiet' Still Leads New York's Long Run Films

A rainmaker [illegible] "All Quiet" and fairly healthy grosses by the Capitol, with "Florodora Girl," the Paramount playing "Safety in Numbers," and Roxy's Will Rogers film, "So This Is London," were the highlights of theatre activities along New York's main stem.

The Universal war story brought 24 grand, maintaining its house record figures of seven weeks. At the Paramount and Capitol there was a difference of only four hundred bucks, with the latter taking $70,628. Other houses experienced about an average week.

"ROGUE SONG" (M-G-M)
ASTOR—(1,12[illegible]), [illegible] week. Other attractions: Newsreel, overture. Gross: $7,000, which is terrible; M-G-M pulling this run on the 22nd, opening "The Big House" [illegible]

"FLORODORA GIRL" (M-G-M)
CAPITOL—(4,700), 35c-50c-75c-$1.50, 7 days. Other attractions—Overture, Hearst Metrotone news, M-G-M comedy ("Hay Wire"), Capital news presentation ("Russian Echoes"), Mrs. Crawford at the organ. Gross: $70,628; started the week with a bang, then dropping heavily.

"ALL QUIET ON THE WESTERN FRONT" (U.)
CENTRAL—(922), 50c-75c-$1-$1.50-$2.50, 7 days, 7th week. Other attractions: None. Gross: About $24,000; great for the 7th week, and a healthy figure for any.

"SILENT ENEMY" (Paramount)
CRITERION—(850), 75c-$1-$1.50-$2.50, 7 days, 3rd week. Other attractions: Short ("Harvest Reverie"), cartoon ("Wise Fly"). Gross: $7,100; not so hot; five grand under previous week.

EMBASSY—NEWSREELS
EMBASSY—(598), 25c, 7 days. Straight newsreel show, running continuously. Gross: $7,875; fair, but [illegible]

"JOURNEY'S END" (Tiffany)
GAIETY—(808), $1-$1.50-$2-$2.50, 7 days, 10th week. Other attractions: Short ("Voice from Hollywood"). Gross: $8,500; run closes on the 29th.

"BRIDE OF THE REGIMENT" (Warners)
HOLLYWOOD—(1,600), 50c-75c-$1-$1.50, 7 days, 2nd week. Other attractions: Shorts: "The Trade Mark," "Japanese Bow," "Matinee Idol," "The Naggers." Newsreel. Gross: $11,788; pretty good for the house, but a decline of about $3,000 under last week.

"SAFETY IN NUMBERS" (Paramount)
PARAMOUNT—(3,700), 40c-50c-65c-85c-$1, 7 days. Other attractions: Comedy ("Fit to Be Tied"), newsreel, vaudeville ("Horace Heidt and His Californians"). Gross: $70,200; okay; betters last week by more than two thousand.

"BIG POND" (Paramount)
RIALTO—(1,904), 40c-50c-65c-85c-$1, 7 days, 3rd week. Other attractions: Golf Short ("Match Play"), Floyd Gibbons, "Come Take a Trip in My Airship." Gross: $35,100; wow! what a figure as compared with the [illegible] grand take on the first week.

"ONE ROMANTIC NIGHT" (U. A.)
RIVOLI—(2,103), 35c-50c,65c-$1, 7 days. Other attractions: Comedy ("Revolution"), song cartoon ("In the Good Old Summer Time"), over ("The Wizard's Apprentice"), newsreel. Gross: $39,500; house needed this after the $23,000 gross last week by "Ladies Love Brutes."

SO THIS IS LONDON (Fox)
ROXY—(6,200), 50c-75c-$1-$1.50, 7 days, 2nd week. Other attractions: Newsreel, vaudeville (Condensed version of "Carmen" in seven scenes). Gross: $92,750; okay here, but a drop of $7,500 under previous week.

"BACK PAY" (F. N.)
STRAND—(3,000), 35c-50c-60c-85c-$1, 7 days. Other attractions: Shorts, "Anchors Away," "Wedding of Jack and Jill," "Reno or Bust," "Noah Knew His Ark," Horace Heidt and his "Californians." Gross: $28,100; only so-so; off three grand from last week.

"SONG OF THE FLAME" (Warners)
WARNERS—(1,500), 50c-75c-$1-$1.50-$2.50, 7 days, 3rd week. Other attractions: Comedy ("Looney Tunes"), Eddie Buzzell in "The Royal Fourflusher," "The Standup," comedy ("Ill Winds or No Mother to Guide Her"). Gross: $10,598; just fair; dropped four thousand from previous week's intake.

"COURAGE" (Warners)
WINTER GARDEN—(1,493), 35c-50c-65c-85c-$1, 7 days, 2nd week. Other attractions: Monologue by J. McWilliams; "Grand Uproar," "Contrary Mary," technicolor musical comedy; Ona Munson in "Nile Green"; Helen Broderick in "Collegiate Model" and "The Sultan's Jester," technicolor comedy. Gross: $20,886; fine figure here, better first week's run by two grand.

Remodeling at Winnipeg

Winnipeg—Alterations at the RKO Capitol are to cost an estimated $200,000.

Boston Has Nice Flopless Week; 3 in Tie for Top

Boston—Apparently folks flocked into refrigerated theatres to escape extreme heat, for the past week, despite hot weather, saw grosses boosted at almost every theatre, plugging receipts at all stands over par.

Universal's "All Quiet on the Western Front" opened at the Majestic as the city's only road show and it went to $6,500, or 115%.

"Caught Short" at Loew's State was the brightest light of the week for a $24,000 gross, or 125%, while "Born Reckless" at Keith-Albee also netted 125% for $27,400. "New Adventures of Dr. Fu Manchu" at the Scollay Square, to which house it was moved from the Metropolitan, came pretty near equalling the percentage it showed at the latter, with $15,000 gross. Metropolitan's "True to the Navy" with an unusually good surrounding show, kept the gross at $26,000 for 125%.

Weather: Warm, fair.
Opposition: "True to the Navy," stage show, Metropolitan; "Such Men Are Dangerous," Keith-Albee; "Born Reckless," Keith Memorial; "Caught Short," Loew's State; "Hell Harbor," Loew's Orpheum; "Fu Manchu," Scollay Square; "What a Man," Park; "All Quiet on the Western Front," Majestic.

"Judge" Vause in Tough Spot Over Theatre Suit

W. Bernard Vause, who resigned county judgeship in New York under fire for alleged questionable business practices, is plunged into further difficulties by a foreclosure suit against his Brooklyn theatre venture, which was organized to operate the Fort Hamilton Parkway theatre. The house was later leased to Fox.

Vause and his associates borrowed $580,000 to build the house, and, it is claimed, financial entanglements which followed while under operation have resulted in a mortgage foreclosure suit. The company may come under scrutiny of civic authorities who are involved in the ex-judge's prosecution.

Novel Gag

Hollywood—Xavier Cugat, portrait artist, has been retained by Fox West Coast Theatres to paint 80 facial portraits in full colors which shall become part of a curtain which Harold B. Franklin has ordered for the Chinese. The portraits will be of screen players and will supply the audience with the diversion of identifying the stars while awaiting the performance.

F. N. Sales Policies Up At Regional Chicago Meet

Chicago—New sales policies and a review of the forthcoming First National product occupied the business sessions of First National's regional sales meeting here. Ned E. Depinet, sales manager, and G. L. Sears, western sales manager, presided at the meeting. In attendance were salesmen and bookers from the company's Middle West offices and the following branch managers: Floyd Brown, Indianapolis; F. E. North, Detroit; E. J. Tilton, Des Moines; C. K. Olson, Milwaukee; W. C. Brimmer, Minneapolis; George W. Taif, Omaha; D. P. Rathbone, St. Louis; William Warner, Kansas City; Carl Leserman, Chicago, and Tom Gilliam, Chicago.

"U" After Milestone for a Series; One Is Scheduled

Hollywood—Lewis Milestone will direct at least one more production for Universal this year. Verbal agreement was made between the director and Carl Laemmle, Jr., for the single picture upon completion of "All Quiet on the Western Front." It is understood Universal is negotiating to tie Milestone up for a series of at least three, with the deal now under consideration.

N. Y. Attorney General's Aide Joining Sheehan

Albany—To take over an executive position with Winfield R. Sheehan, vice-president and general manager of Fox, Vincent G. Hart of Buffalo, confidential assistant to Attorney General Ward, was scheduled to leave Monday for Hollywood.

Nixon Suite Up This Month

Philadelphia—Fred G. Nixon-Nirdlinger's suit against the Stanley Co., in connection with the operation of the Nixon under an old contract, is expected to come up for trial in Common Pleas Court soon. It is one of a score of suits which Nirdlinger has instituted against the old Stanley organization, alleging breach of contract. One of the suits already has been settled out of court and, it is said, involved payment of more than $150,000.

Mastbaum Estate Appraised

Philadelphia—The personal estate of Jay J. Mastbaum, pioneer in the industry in Philadelphia, who died May 3, has been appraised at $190,714. Mastbaum was associated with the Stanley Co. until his retirement about a year ago.

Vote Sunday Shows

Humeston, Ia.—Voters here approved Sunday shows in overwhelming fashion when they cast 248 votes in favor of Sunday shows and only 101 against them. G. L. Wellemyer operates the local theatre.

$19,000 Take of "Caught Short" in K. C. Rates High

Kansas City—M-G-M's "Caught Short" went over in a big way at the Midland, with the assistance of Little Jack Little on the stage, grossing approximately $19,000. The Mainstreet, with First National's "Wedding Rings," had a good week, taking in $18,000 or 120%. The Newman dropped to 80% with Warners' "Mammy," which grossed only $8,000. Paramount's "Young Man of Manhattan," at the Royal, had a $5,000 take. The second week of "Ingagi" at the Pantages dropped down to $13,300 from last week's high mark. At the Uptown, where M-G-M's "They Learned About Women" played, the rating was 100% and the gross $6,000.

Weather: Good.
Opposition: "Caught Short," five acts vaude, Midland; "Wedding Rings," five acts vaude, Mainstreet; "Mammy," Newman; "Young Man of Manhattan," Royal; "Ingagi," Pantages; "They Learned About Women," Uptown.

Fox Theatres' plan to rotate masters of ceremonies has been launched. Fox will switch each m.c. after four weeks in a key house.

Top Place in "Chi" to "Quiet" With 35 Grand

Chicago—A week that opened meely in all Loop houses was ruined by three days of scorching heat, closely followed by a cold rain finale.

"All Quiet on the Western Front" appeared to be least affected by the weather, despite a $6,000 drop from the preceding week's gross. The picture was still strong at $35,600 (170%), and given a good weather break it may build. "The Divorcee" (M-G-M) had a satisfactory week at the Oriental, taking $38,200 (90%) after seven days of knockout business at the Chicago the preceding week. This was the second consecutive M-G-M picture to get a second Loop week after leaving the Chicago, a rare procedure in the routine of B. & K. houses here. "Caught Short" was given a second week at the Roosevelt after its seven days at the Chicago. Pictures usually go from the Chicago to the neighborhoods.

"The Cuckoos" (Radio) closed a three weeks' run with $4,900 (100%) for the last three days. "White Hell of Pitz Palu" (Univ.) replaced it at the Woods in mid-week, received the best of notices and triumphed over the heat with $10,000 for its first four days (150%). The State-Lake took the skids with the Palace starting on a vaude-film policy. The house took only $18,500 (70%), its lowest figure in months, largely as a result of the new vaude-film competition, though the heat undoubtedly helped the decline. "Born Reckless" (Fox) was the feature.

"The Bad One" (U.A.) dropped off badly in the last five days of a twelve-day run at the United Artists, taking only $11,200 (40%). "Paramount on Parade" replaced in mid-week with advance radio broadcasting of a portion of the sound score from B. & K.'s projection room. "Parade" got fine notices and $10,600 (105%) in its first three days. Favorable weather may help this one to build during the week. "Mammy" (W.B.) was okay in its first week at the Roosevelt, taking $23,600 (115%) and was held over. "True to the Navy" (Para.) only so-so at the Chicago with $45,500 (85%). The Palace was satisfactory in its first week on vaude-film policy, considering the weather and competition. "On the Level" (Fox) was the feature.

"White Cargo" (state rights) dropped $5,000 in its seventh week at the Castle and left. Replaced by Martin Johnson picture, "Across the World." "Unguarded Girls" (Indie) was sour at the Majestic on a "women only" policy. $5,900 (35%) for the week, but held over, regardless. "Ingagi" (state rights) dropped a little at the Garrick in its eighth week of an interrupted run, but still good at $6,400 (90%).

[illegible] "All Quiet on the Western Front" (3rd week), McVicker's; "Light of Western Stars," Monroe; [illegible] "Under a Texas Moon" (2nd time in Loop), Orpheum; "Mammy," Roosevelt; "On the Level," vaudeville, Palace; "Born Reckless," vaudeville, State-Lake; "Paramount on Parade," United Artists; "White Hell of Pitz Palu," Woods.

"WHITE CARGO" (State Rights)
CASTLE (600), 60c, 7th and final week. Other attractions: Univ. newsreel. Dropped $5,000 and out. Replaced by Martin Johnson picture, "Across the World." Picture was sensational, the average gross for the seven weeks being 280%. Final week. Gross: $4,600. Rating: 150%.

"TRUE TO THE NAVY" (Para.)
CHICAGO (3,940), 35c-85c, 7 days. Other attractions: Stage show, orchestra, newsreel, comedy, novelty short. Gross: $45,500. Rating: 85%.

"INGAGI" (State Rights)
GARRICK (1,250), 50c-75c, 8th week. Down a little, but still good for this house. Gross: $6,400. Rating: 90%.

"ALL QUIET ON THE WESTERN FRONT" (Univ.)
McVICKER'S—(2,284), 35c-85c, 3rd week. Other attractions: Comedy, newsreel, novelty short. Down $6,000 in the heat, but still strong and good weather may build it again. Beginning to get a play from the women. Gross: $35,600. Rating: 170%. (Percentage rating is based on 45 shows per week, as compared with this house's usual 50.)

"UNGUARDED GIRLS" (Indie)
MAJESTIC—(1,900), 50c first week. "Women Only" rushes. Lecture with bathing girl models accompanies picture. Gross: $5,900. Rating: 35%.

"LIGHT OF WESTERN STARS" (Fox)
MONROE—(962), 50c-75c, 7 days. Other attractions: 30 minutes of newsreel. Up a little over recent weeks. Gross: $4,500. Rating: 90%.

"DIVORCEE" (M-G-M)
ORIENTAL—(3,900), 35c-85c, 2nd Loop week. Other attractions: Stage show, organ, comedy, newsreel, novelty short. Picture moved here after a big business week at the Chicago. Gross: $38,200. Rating: 90%.

"UNDER A TEXAS MOON" (W.B.)
(2nd time in Loop)
ORPHEUM—(2,562), 50c-75c, 7 days. Other attractions: 3 Vitaphone acts, Univ. newsreel. Gross: $5,300. Rating: 85%.

"MAMMY" (W.B.)
ROOSEVELT—(1,591), 35c-85c, first week. Other attractions: Comedy, newsreel, novelty short. Gross: Only fair at $23,600. Rating: 115%.

"ON THE LEVEL" (Fox)
PALACE—(2,509), 35c-85c, 7 days. Other attractions: 5 acts RKO vaude, comedy, musical short. First week for this house on a vaude-film policy. Gross: $31,800. Rating: 125%.

STATE-LAKE—(2,776), 35c-75c, 7 days. Other attractions: 5 acts RKO vaude, cartoon, novelty short. Palace competition felt a little. Gross: $18,500. Rating: 70%.

"PARAMOUNT ON PARADE" (Para.)
UNITED ARTISTS—(1,700), 35c-85c, first 3 days. Good notices. Decent weather may improve this one. Gross: $10,600. Rating: 105%. Picture in mid-week. "The Bad One" (U.A.), last 5 days of 12-day run. Gross: $11,200. Rating: 40%.

"WHITE HELL OF PITZ PALU" (Univ.)
WOODS—(1,166), 35c-75c, first 4 days. Other attractions: Comedy, newsreel, cartoon. Splendid notices. May build with good weather. Gross: $9,900. Rating: 150%. Replaced "The Cuckoos" (Radio) in mid-week. Last 4 days of three-week run for "Cuckoos." Gross: $6,500. Rating: 100%.

What About Vallee, Boys?

The doom of the hey-hey girl is sounded when the collegians hand her the raspberry, reports the N. Y. Telegraph. Over in Princeton, Greta Garbo and Ruth Chatterton led the seniors' annual pool this year, with such prime examples of flaming youth as Clara Bow and Alice White not even in the running!

Looks like curtains for the red hot mamas.

Dog Fight Developing in Indiana Over Dog Races

Jeffersonville, Ind.—While state and county officials, exhibitors and ministers in this section are busy with the dog racing problem here, racing continues, backed by the American Legion. Following up the offer of the county prosecutor to prosecute any charge filed by opponents of the track, the ministers countered with a letter to a local newspaper urging the sheriff to raid the race track, arrest the operators and confiscate the equipment. The prosecutor has returned from Indianapolis where he conferred with the attorney general of the state. A delegation of more than 200 Legionnaires and citizens, headed by William (Navy Bill) Ingram, navy football coach, went to Indianapolis to protest against the closing of the track.

'Florodora' Jumps Portland Biz to $12,200 at Bway

Portland, Ore.—Marion Davies in "The Florodora Girl," Fanchon & Marco's "Milky Way Idea" and return of the popular Georgie Stoll, master of ceremonies, for one week, brought $12,220 and a percentage of 152%, to Fox's Broadway.

The week marked the return of the full stage show at Portland Paramount, and Manager McKeown also provided a miniature golf course on the mezzanine to offset the Tom Thumb golf courses. These attractions, plus "The New Adventure of Dr. Fu Manchu," brought the gross to $11,765, rating 131%.

Weather: Fair and warmer, slightly lowered grosses. Opposition: "New Adventure of Dr. Fu Manchu," "High Treason," "Midnight Mystery," "All Quiet on the Western Front," "Ingagi."

Note.—Fox Alder Theatre, 1,000 seats, showing subsequent runs, closed May 31st for the summer months and reopens in September.

Wire Hanna for 'All Quiet' Now First Run Opposition

Cleveland—First-run theatres in this city are slated to encounter stiffer competition hereafter owing to the wiring of the Hanna, local Shubert house, for the showing of "All Quiet on the Western Front," in accordance with the Shubert deal with Universal. The war picture opens on June 15 for an indefinite run at roadshow prices, and while it will be the only film to be exhibited at the Hanna this season, the house, being wired, will show other pictures in the future, furnishing more opposish to the present first runs. Ansley Whittendale is manager of the Hanna.

"Ingagi," reputedly barred from producer-owned theatres by Hays edict, opened June 1 at the Cinema, the front of the house being transformed into a jungle to exploit the gorilla picture.

Blystone Heads Unit

Hollywood—John Blystone headed the "Men On Call" Fox unit to first location at Monterey. The cast making the trip includes Edmund Lowe, Mae Clarke, William Harrigan, Warren Hymer, George Corcoran, Marie Saxon and Althea Henley.

Plop! Go Balto Grosses When Circus Clicks

Baltimore—Two beautiful sunshiny days for the Ringling-Barnum-Bailey circus and clear but hot weather throughout the week gave an awful wallop to picture business here.

Not one of the large theatres registered 100% and the highest gross and rating was obtained at Loew's Stanley where they had "Paramount on Parade," gross being figured at $16,500, giving it a rating of 94%.

The low for the week was done at the Auditorium with the last four days of "All Quiet on the Western Front" in its fourth week. This house now starts its program Fridays. The gross was estimated at $2,135, while the rating was 40%.

Even though Richey Craig, Jr., was master of ceremonies in "Varieties," with "A Notorious Affair," at Loew's Century, the rating only came to 77% and the gross was figured at $16,100. Craig is a favorite in Baltimore.

The Hippodrome dropped considerably following the release of the Bert Smith Players and with other obstacles to business. The gross was estimated as $5,000, meaning a 50% rating. This house is running comedies after the New and Keith's, which may have some effect on the fall-off.

"The Man from Blankley's," with John Barrymore, proved a distinct flop at both the Rivoli and the Metropolitan where it was shown simultaneously. Besides it being hard to understand the dialogue, the comedy was greatly overdone, according to the consensus of opinion.

Weather: Clear and hot throughout the week except Saturday which was cloudy and cooler.

Opposition: "All Quiet on the Western Front," four days of its fourth week, Auditorium; "Notorious Affair," with Varieties starring Richey Craig, Jr., Loew's Century; "Hide Out," with vaudeville in tab show, Hippodrome; "He Knew Women," Keith's; "Men Without Women," Little after being shown at numerous residential houses; "Man from Blankley's," Metropolitan and Rivoli simultaneously; "On the Level," New; "Paramount on Parade," Loew's Stanley; "Spring Is Here," Loew's Valencia; "Return of Dr. Fu Manchu," at the Parkway after one week at at Loew's Century. Stage: Jerri McCauley in burlesque at Gayety and Jewish play one evening at the Palace.

Providence Slow; Clara Takes High Grossing $12,800

Providence—Having the opposition of a heat wave that left them gasping on the pavement and shattered temperature records, Providence houses had a fair week, nevertheless. Beaches drew a big percentage of matinee crowds the last three days.

Film men here, however, say that with cooling systems working perfectly, biz will soon be on the up-grade.

Loew's State hit around $18,500, 90%, with "In Gay Madrid." "The Benson Murder Case" at the RKO Victory was fair, and Clara Bow in "True to the Navy," Majestic, proved strong.

Weather: Clear, boiling.

Opposition: Carlton stock, cycle races, beach openings. Films: "In Old Madrid," Loew's State; "Benson Murder Case," RKO Victory; "True to the Navy," Majestic; "Alias French Gertie," RKO Albee.

"IN OLD MADRID" (M-G-M)

Rebuilding at Fort Wayne

Fort Wayne, Ind.—General contract for rebuilding the Grand Theatre building at Bluffton, Ind., near here, has been awarded to the B. & B. Construction Co. of Berne, Ind., by Everitt I. Brown, local architect, who drew plans. The old building was burned several weeks ago. The new house will have a capacity of 800, larger than the old building, and will be modernistic in design.

Bow Takes Mpls. High Spot with $33,580 Intake

Minneapolis—Clara Bow was not only "True to the Navy," but she was "ok" with the box office at the Minnesota. The film brought in a gross of $33,580 to give the house a rating of 80%. "Under a Texas Moon," the State picture, ran second, high, bringing in $21,200, but rating 90%.

The Orpheum, featuring "Double Cross Roads," grossed $17,890 to register 80%. Pantages rated 90% and a gross of $9,000 on "What a Man."

"King of Jazz," Century picture, did not go so good. It grossed $7,200 to a rating of 70%. The Seventh Street took it on the nose plenty by showing "Ten Days That Shook the World." There was not much change shaking into the box office. The picture grossed $5,500 to rate 60%. The Lyric, presenting "This Mad World," grossed $3,542 to ring the bell on a 100% rating. The Aster tied the rating and grossed $3,000 on "Why Leave Home?"

Weather: Fair two days; chilly rest of week.

Opposition: "True to the Navy," "Ace High" (Publix stage show), stage, Minnesota; "Under a Texas Moon," State; "Double Cross Roads, "Honorable Mr. Wu with "Chinese Showboat," heading variety bill, Orpheum; "What a Man," 5 acts vaude., Pantages; "King of Jazz," Century; "This Mad World," Lyric; "Ten Days That Shook the World," Seventh Street; "Why Leave Home," Aster.

U. S. Films Rapped by New Zealand Leader

London—American films were attacked in a speech by Sir James Parr, high commissioner for New Zealand, at a meeting of the British Empire Film Institute in the House of Commons.

"It is horrible," he said, "to think of the British Empire receiving its education from the place called Hollywood. A child once asked me if England had been in the war, such is the preponderance of American war pictures."

"U" Starts Another

Hollywood—Universal started this week on "Outside the Law," with Mary Nolan, starred and Edward G. Robinson, featured. Tod Browning is directing.

THE

Projectionists' Round Table

One must now face the situation of greater operating life with parallel connected batteries and higher voltage with series connected batteries for the same number of unit. In the case of the former, the operating life is longer but the available potential is lower. In the case of the series connected batteries the voltage is greater but the operating life is shorter. What is to be done when both are necessary, that is, long operating life and high voltage are necessary? This requisite calls for a different form of connection, Series-parallel, wherein the fact that the batteries are connected in series provides the high voltage and the parallel connection provides the increased ampere-hour rating.

This means that additional batteries must be used. To be exact, twice the normal amount if the high voltage is to be obtained and the ampere-hour capacity is to be doubled. Assuming the correct number of batteries to provide the correct voltage, the rate of multiplication of the capacity of the cell determines the increase in the number of batteries. That is, in the number of unit series connected. Thus, in Figure 15, we show a number of batteries connected in Series-parallel. The series bank provides the required voltage and the fact that two such banks are connected in parallel increases the ampere-hour capacity of the entire structure.

In connection with this increase in capacity, one must remember that this increase is relative to time. Only a change in design would increase the actual rating of each cell or battery. The increase in capacity is secured because two such series combinations contribute to the total flow and each discharges at half the rate, thus doubling the life of the complete unit. The series parallel arrangement is nothing but a combination of the series and the Parallel systems.

Voltage Uniformly Important

It is now possible to make certain statements relative to parallel connection of cells or batteries. Whereas a defective cell in a series combination will reduce the total voltage, a similar defective cell in a parallel combination will have very little if any effect upon the voltage, but will reduce the ampere-hour capacity of the parallel combination because that cell will not supply the required amount of current. Expressed in another manner, the other cells will be subjected to heavier loads.

Furthermore, uniformity of voltage rating is important when cells or batteries are connected in parallel. This is in contrast to the requirement for series connection. The flow of charges between the batteries themselves in a parallel connected system is due to the like potential difference and polarity of the batteries. If, however, one battery has a greater voltage output than another, a difference of potential will be present between the batteries and current will flow between the batteries. Thus, current is wasted and is of no utility and defective batteries are harmful in either series or parallel structures.

More data relative to batteries will follow. A certain portion of the course must be completed to comprehend the significance of charts and curves associated with the rate of discharge and the actual action of the batteries in work.

QUESTIONS LESSON 6

1. What is the effect of a series connection of batteries?

2. How must batteries be connected in order to be classified as in series?

3. What is the total voltage of three 4-volt batteries connected in series with a 3 volt and an 18-volt unit?

4. Is the series connection of batteries limited to batteries of like potential?

5. Is the parallel connection of batteries limited to batteries of like potential?

6. How is it possible to increase the capacity of a bank of batteries of any one value of potential?

7. What is the effect of a defective battery in a series cobination? In a parellel combination?

After "Skippy"

Hollywood—Paramount is scouting the country in an effort to find an eight-year old lad to play the title role in "Skippy" a talker to be based on the Percy Crosby cartoons.

"All Quiet" Only Draw at 'Frisco; Clips 38 Grand

San Francisco — San Francisco theatres, with but two exceptions, did poor business. Loew's Warfield, with its third week of "All Quiet on the Western Front," did another big week's business, the largest ever reported for a third week here, taking $38,000 with a rating of 150%. The Fox reported good business with "In Gay Madrid," where it grossed $24,000 and rated 105%.

California Theatre, which played "Bride of the Regiment," clicked at a fairly good rating of 80% and $12,000.

Weather: Good, but windy.

Opposition: "Bride of the Regiment," California; "True to the Navy," Paramount; "Across the World," state street; St. Francis "He Knew Women," Golden Gate; "In Gay Madrid," stage show, Fox; "All Quiet on the Western Front," Warfield; "Man from Blankley's," Embassy; "Those Who Dance," Davies; "Lord Byron of Broadway, Casino; "Swing High," Orpheum.

It's mostly water and mud for Buster Keaton these days. In his army comedy, "Forward March," at the M-G-M studios, he has to march in mud, fall in it, wallow in it, and almost eat it. "The funny part," comments Sally Eilers, his leading lady, "is that the fellow seems to actually like it!"

Just a Critical Cuss

Wallace Kimball, writing in the "Voice of the People" column of the New York World, gives his interpretation of motion pictures in this manner:

If we were to undertake a serious criticism of movies it would be directed against their unnaturalness, their infidelity to the fundamental impulses and unchangeable sequences of real life, and the false education of audiences resulting therefrom. Too often rascality and crime, lust and lack of integrity are rewarded with happiness after a superficial and obviously impossible repentance in the last act. The convict turns into a hero, the libertine becomes a moral model, the vampire acquires amazing virtue, the wicked husband or wife has a saintly finish.

Such things do not often happen in life; they occur so frequently in the movies that young men and girls are in danger of receiving and accepting wholly false ideas of human relations with irrevocable and inescapable moral laws. Too many utterly bad things are condoned on the screen. The result, so far as immature minds and even adult minds are concerned, can be only a distorted and untrue conception of the values of life and conduct.

Bombay—Get a load of this from a local fan magazine.

They have titles on pictures in Japan just as in America. And when a made-in-Japan film was recently exported to New York, it arrived with the Nipponese titles politely translated into the Jap idea of English, like this:

"At Kyoto is many studyo which are like Hollywood of Japan."

"Many star is to make feature here and vice-versa."

"Scene like this cost million yen—like is accustom in Hollywood."

"All latest trick photographer defects is found in Kyoto."

"Great star called by name which are Rudy Valenshima."

"Lady star are much fond of by publics and director."

"Kyoto studyo hope very sudden to make honorable screechie picture."

WILLIAM BANKER, famous half-back of Tulane University and a member of the All-American, has been signed to a term contract by Warners. Banker, together with the other ten members of the All-American team, appears in "Maybe It's Love." He is the only one of the group, however, to win a contract.

The Working-Boys' Pal

Blame Sid Skolsky for this yarn:

Some one, who has observed the Universal bookkeeping department at work, has dubbed the "King of Jazz"—"The Rhapsody in Red." That wasn't what we started out to write. When Universal first started to make this picture they searched high and low (and medium) to find a story suitable for Paul Whiteman. Everybody who ever wrote a line submitted a story. In the end, you know, they decided to do a revue.

One day, however, a dope fiend entered the studio and said he had a great idea for a story for Whiteman. A conference was called immediately and the dope fiend was ushered into Junior Laemmle's office.

"Now my idea is this," he said with great enthusiasm. "The farmer's daughter is fighting for her honor with the hired man when there is a knock on the door. The farmer's daughter asks: 'Who is it?'

"'It's me, Paul Whiteman.'

"Well," continued the dope fiend, "after this nothing much happens. The girl fights for her honor and Whiteman knocks on the door for eight reels and they don't let him in."

They didn't use the story, but they thought the dope fiend had talent. They decided to let him learn the motion picture business from the bottom—so they made him a supervisor.

American Talkers Stirring Europe, Declares Hyman

Hollywood—American made foreign language pictures are bringing about a swift upheaval in Europe's entertainment field, according to Bernard Hyman, M-G-M producer, on his return from a three-month visit abroad.

Hyman, who studied the talking picture situation in England, France, Germany and Italy, said that dialogue features have greatly increased film theatre attendance in all nations and that silent pictures have almost entirely vanished from the screen.

"The wiring of houses for sound throughout Europe has been slow in comparison with the expansion witnessed almost overnight in the United States," he said. "Theatre owners have discovered, however, that sound equipment means immediate box-office increases and are acting accordingly. No silent pictures are being shown profitably in large cities, with the possible exception of Italy, where no English-speaking films are permitted.

"Theatres of legitimate policies are greatly harrassed by the general trend toward the talking pictures. As in this country, the foreign talkies are rapidly taking starring material from the stage. Many foreign stars are now in Hollywood or soon will be on the way. While in Germany I signed Theodore Shall, Berlin stage favorite, who speaks both German and French. Shall returned to Hollywood with me."

University for Picture Training Is Forecast

Hollywood—A university, teaching the art and science of pictures, is a development of the not far distant future, predicts Roy Del Ruth, Warner director. Del Ruth finds the speed with which the industry is conducted too rapid to allow for training people properly for the profession; and he sees such a demand for trained workers that a specialized college, devoting itself to all the branches of the work, is inevitable.

"The technical field is so large and so complex, and is becoming so peculiarly a part of film production that some means must be provided for supplying experts in the future," said Del Ruth. "The studios themselves are doing this to an extent, but the pace is becoming so fast that the student will be shoved aside.

"There is also the artistic side—acting, writing and directing—which requires diligent and painstaking study. Therefore just as civil engineers, physicians, geologists and business men are trained in universities, so should the man or woman ambitious to succeed in the motion picture industry be specially equipped in a school devoted solely to its various branches," concluded Del Ruth, who has devoted years of study to film production and is now regarded as one of the most successful megaphonists in the industry.

Warners Enter Row Over Building at Mansfield

Mansfield, O.—When local taxpayers recently instituted a friendly suit to restrain Memorial Building trustees from rebuilding the fire-razed Madison, Common Pleas Judge P. E. Wilkin ruled in favor of defendants, who have since planned to proceed with construction work. The suit was to test the validity of contract under which builders had authority to finance the project with funds secured through pre-rental arrangement with Sacred Amusement Co., lessees.

However, another plaintiff has come into the pictures, acting on behalf of Warner Brothers Theatre Co., requesting authority from Judge Wilkin to carry the case to the Court of Appeals. Judge Wilkin overruled the motion, but attorneys for Warners Co. assert that the case will be appealed regardless, and that the Court of Appeals will be asked to reverse decision of the lower court. Meanwhile all proposed work on the building has been indefinitely postponed.

Foreign Talker Tax Boosted in Buenos Ayres

Buenos Ayres—Although it has no domestic industry worth the name, the city council here proposes to create a monopoly for Argentine film producers by taxing foreign pictures out of existence. The move is directed principally at American films, with both talkers and silents hit by the proposed measure.

The measure would increase by 200 per cent the tax on theatres showing foreign pictures exclusively. Theatres showing sound films, synchronization for which is produced in Argentina, would be subjected to an increased tax of but 50 per cent.

Theatres which show Argentine-made films exclusively would be exempt from tax. Houses which show two Argentine-made films a month would be subjected to an increase of but five per cent. These must be of not less than 45 minutes' duration and must have been taken on Argentine soil with Argentine effects and be made entirely in domestic studios. At least 50 per cent of the cast, including one star and 75 per cent of the extras, must be native-born.

Argentine Cinematograph Ass'n., unknown among leading distributors here, is backing the measure. The association advances a long series of arguments to support its contention, including the untrue statement that American films have been barred in Great Britain.

Writ Against Title Causes Booking Jam

Los Angeles—When Superior Judge Walter Hanby granted an injunction last week restraining Fox from using the title, "The Arizona Kid," on a picture, his decision upset the booking plans of Fox West Coast Theatres. The picture had just completed a week's run at Loew's State and was slated to move over to the Boulevard for another week. But the court's decision made it necessary for the circuit to rush in "Rough Romance" to replace "The Arizona Kid" at the second run house.

Application for injunction was brought by Attorney William Bronsten on behalf of J. Charles Davis II, who produced a silent Western starring Art Acord about a year ago. For this reason, he claimed he was entitled to the exclusive use of the title for a motion picture.

It is understood that Fox will appeal the decision, as it was pointed out that the stories of the two pictures are entirely different, and hold no relation or similarity to each other.

Series of Shorts with McIntyre & Heath Set

Frank McCoy, former stage manager for E. Ray Comstock and Morris Gest and now stage director of the Greenwich theatre, New York, plans to produce independently a series of shorts starring McIntyre & Heath. The first will be "Waiting at the Church," followed by "The Man from Montana," "Flying to Jail" and "The Outlaw."

View Show All Day, Ask Refund, New Chi Racket

RKO theatres here have solved the toughest angle of the effect of unemployment on the b. o. Managers were aware that many of the job hunters parked in the theatres all day, but the situation, they felt, presented no serious problem—that is, until demands for admission refunds began to grow alarmingly, with most of the demands coming toward the end of the afternoon. Seeking a solution, patrons were requested to retain their ticket stubs, on which the serial number of the ticket appeared. Their suspicions were justified. Most of the stubs presented for refunds in the late afternoon had been sold that morning. Now the racket has been practically eliminated and once more cashiers' lives go on in their quiet, well-ordered way.

RKO Salesmen and Bookers Get the Dope

RKO's Midwest salesmen and bookers received their first official line-up of the company's new product when home office executives, returning from the national convention at Los Angeles, stopped off here for the RKO regional sales meeting at the Congress Hotel. Lee Marcus, vice-president, and Charles Rosenzweig, general sales manager, presided at the meeting, outlining to the branch office men sales policies and distribution plans affecting the new product as they were presented at the company's national convention. Cleve Adams, Midwest sales manager, and Jerome Safron, eastern sales manager, also addressed the branch office men at the Chicago regional.

Seek Film Impostor

A man representing himself as a salesman for National Screen Service has been cashing worthless checks with various film and business men of Milwaukee whose confidence he has gained through promises of various favors. Hal Young, manager of National Screen's Chicago office, has issued a warning against the imposter, who, he says, has no connection with his company.

The man claims numerous friendships among exhibitors and wins the confidence of business men by purchasing theatre tickets which he presents to them as passes. The worthless checks are presented them later.

Coston Circuit Sale to Warners Set for Friday

Next step in the threatened internal dissension in the Coston Booking Circuit was being awaited as the deal for sale of the Coston holdings to Warners neared consummation. Dan Michalove, Warner executive, who handles most of the theatre deals, was to close the Coston deal on Friday. He was expected back at his office in New York on Saturday.

Last week it was reported that between 15 and 20 theatres had cancelled their booking arrangement with Coston, figuring if James Coston sells out to Warners, they will be left out on a limb. There also is said to be instances of dissatisfaction among members of the buying combine. About 68 theatres were banded together for co-operative buying of films through James Coston.

Films and Burlesque

The Haymarket, well known Chicago burlesque house, shut down for two months, will reopen in the Fall with a picture program in the a. m. and straight burlesque p. m.'s, according to report.

Chi Film Board Sales Code Gets National Tryout

Extended test of the Code of Ethics for film salesmen, drafted here by the Film Board, will be made to determine its value from a national standpoint. If the code proves successful here, it probably will be made the basis of a code to be drafted for national use.

Adoption of the code at the board meeting Monday will do much to remove "racket" practices in the territory, in the opinion of exchangemen. Salesmen whose skirts are clean in their dealings with exhibitors have nothing to fear from the code's workings, it is pointed out. The code embodied ten rules of conduct designed to eliminate trade evils and better relations between exhibitors and distributors.

Hits Canceling Gag

One of the conditions which managers hope to remedy by the code is the not infrequent practice of salesmen in inducing exhibitors to cancel or disregard playdates on competing product in favor of their own.

"Instances of this kind have been common in the past," said an exchangeman. "They have helped to place the local film business in the racket classification, from which we hope, by these general rules of conduct, to rescue it. This and other examples of unfair and unethical practices have frequently made it necessary for an exchange to sell an exhibitor twice on the same picture, thereby doubling sales costs. We believe that all irregular tactics can be eliminated by such a code with benefit to the reputation of the industry here and to the business of the exhibitor and the exchange."

He added that not only salesmen but bookers and managers as well would be subject to the new code.

The conduct committee was comprised of Henry Herbel, manager of the Universal exchange, Eddie Grossman, United Artists manager, and Max Stahl, Educational manager.

Tiffany's Convention

Tiffany's national convention will be held at the Congress Hotel here June 23, 24 and 25. Executives of the company are scheduled to arrive here a day in advance of the convention, at which the new Tiffany lineup and sales policies will be announced.

Too Much Beef

The Gem Theatre, a South State street spot in the well populated two blocks, was doing well for years with its burlesque-film policy. Then along came the talkies and business started to drop off. The house was wired and the business came back, but—the sound horns took up so much room on the stage they cramped the girls' style and obstructed the side-seat view of the strip stuff so that patrons complained. House has closed down for interior remodeling, the crux of which will be construction of a stage large enough for both horns and girls.

Tenants Run Theatre

The owner of the Vernon here is also owner of the store building in which it is located. Hot weather came along and the Vernon folded, supposedly for the summer. A few weeks later the theatre was found to be operating on a week-end schedule, reopening Fridays and closing down again on Sunday nights. Inquiry revealed that the tenants of the building, business men, found that the shutting down of the theatre put such a dent in their trade that they, too, would be forced out of business if the show remained closed. Rather than lose his tenants, the owner compromised by reopening the theatre on the week-end schedule, determined to make the best of a tough situation.

Ten More Theatres Closed In Chicago Territory

The Film Board of Trade's monthly report gives the following closings not previously announced by Motion Picture News: the Garden, 1221 W. Taylor St.; Bishop, 1814 Ogden Ave.; the Ogden, 2936 Ogden Ave., and the Grant, Cicero. All closed indefinitely.

The following out-of-town closings are reported: the Majestic, Bluffs, Ill.; Opera House, Camp Point, Ill.; Central, Danville; Delavan, Delavan, Ill.; Peart, Livingston, Ill., and the Opera House, Orion, Ill. The Film Board of Trade reports the Lion at Hammond, Ind., reopened.

The following changes in ownership not previously noted by Motion Picture News are reported: Jack Rubin's Harmony to the Paul-Stone Amusement Co.; W. W. Blue's Langley to the Langley Corp.; Clay Metzger's Rialto, Plymouth, Ind., to George Sottos; W. O. Noble's Ritz, Gary, Ind., to J. Woytinek & Wm. Murphy; Peterson's Cedar, Cedar Lake, Ind., to R. G. Nelson & George F. Klimowicz.

Completion of construction and opening of the Hub Theatre, Rochelle, Ill., is announced by the Community Amusement Co. of Rochelle.

Carson Handling "Inferno"

Joseph F. Carson, Chicago exploitation man, has in preparation here a synchronized version of "Dante's Inferno." A dramatic and explanatory lecture by Charles E. Ellis, Chicago author and lecturer, and musical accompaniment will feature the sound release of the old Italian film. Brunswick disc recording will be employed. Prints will be ready for release by the end of summer, and a press book is now in preparation by Filmack.

Martin Joins Educational

Fred Martin, formerly in charge of De Forest sales in Chicago, has been named city salesman for Educational by Max Stahl, manager, completing the reorganization of Educational's local sales staff. Morrie Salkin, a Chicago exhibitor, replaces Martin at De Forest. The appointment of Milt Krueger and Ed Safier as country salesmen for Educational was previously announced by Motion Picture News.

Way Paved for B. & K. De Luxe 4,000-Seat-House

Difficulties in the way of acquisition of the Englewood site for B. & K.'s 4,000-seat de luxe house appear to be clearing up. C. W. & George L. Rapp have plans in preparation and only minor details of the property transaction have yet to be agreed upon, according to P. T. Barrett, representing the Chicago & Western Indiana railroad, owners of the property.

The site includes a 500-foot block in Sixty-third Street, between Wallace Street and Union Avenue, with a 601-foot frontage on Englewood Avenue. Parking space for 1,500 cars will be provided on this frontage if the re-zoning of Englewood Avenue, a residential thoroughfare, can be secured. Three other smaller lots in the same vicinity are included in the option held by B. & K., it was stated. The site is within one block of the Stratford, a 2,400-seat house recently acquired by Warners from the Federal Theatres Co.

Six weeks ago a B. & K. official denied that new construction was contemplated here by the company.

RKO Sales Changes

The following changes in the sales force of the RKO branch office here were announced by William Benjamin, manager: Eddie Rosecan, transferred from country territory to Chicago sales; Lester Rosenfeld, former RKO St. Louis salesman, on country sales for Chicago office, and Herman Okun, formerly Columbia salesman at St. Louis, on country sales for Chicago office.

Fore-Gone

No official golf tournament for Chicago's film men will be held this summer, the managerial committee, composed of Clyde Eckhardt, Henry Herbel and Carl Lesserman, have announced. Too many summer conventions and sales meetings are on schedule this year to make the event practicable, they explained.

Heads Filmack Sales

Herman Stern, a brother of Emil Stern, general manager of Essaness Theatres, has been named sales manager of Filmack, Chicago trailer house, Irving Mack, president, announces.

The Idea Was Great

The Chicago, an ancient South State street house, was feeling the pressure of hot weather and neighborhood competition (there are nine show houses in two blocks on South State street) and decided a little publicity might help matters. The owner entered suit for damages against Publix-Balaban & Katz, claiming infringement in naming their de luxe house, at the polite end of State street, the "Chicago." Filing of the suit didn't make the papers, but the hot weather continued. The Chicago—the South State street one—folded last week.

Briefly Told News

Sloane to Direct Dix

Hollywood—Paul Sloane will direct Richard Dix in Radio's special production of "Big Brother." Sloane wrote the screen adaptation of the Jack London story when it was produced six years ago in silent form. Before starting "Big Brother," Sloane is directing Bert Wheeler and Robert Woolsey in "Half Shot at Sunrise," a successor to "Cuckoos," the comedy team's first laugh feature.

Stardom for Withers

Hollywood—Grant Withers will be elevated to star rating by Warners and his first picture on that basis will be "Barber John's Boy," from the story by Ben Ames Williams. Archie Mayo has been assigned to direct, with adaptation and dialogue being prepared by Joseph Jackson. Withers started under contract with Warners about two years ago without previous stage experience.

Plans Pittsburgh Office

Third in the national chain of offices planned by the company, a Pittsburgh branch soon is to be opened by Continental Theatre Accessories. The other two offices are at New York and Los Angeles. President Harold Rodner now is completing arrangements for the new office.

Lease Replaces Hunter

Hollywood—Rex Lease has replaced Glen Hunter in "Why Marry?" which Frank Strayer is directing for Tiffany. Illness forced Hunter's withdrawal from the cast, which includes Vera Reynolds, Paul Hurst, Nita Martan, Sam Hardy and Dorothea Wolbert.

Affiliates with Famous

Toronto—Harry Alexander, veteran independent, has affiliated his Park with the Bloom & Fine chain, Famous Players Canadian Corp., subsidiary. Alexander was vice-president of the old M. P. Exhibitors' Protective Ass'n., and later vice-president of the Canadian M. P. T. O., which later became the Exhibitors' Co-operative Society.

Pauline Garon in Tiffany Cast

Tiffany has signed Pauline Garon for "His Last Race," being directed by Richard Thorpe with Wesley Barry and Nancy Dover as leads. Jack Natteford wrote the story.

One for the Census

Hollywood—The stork is getting popular in Hollywood circles these days. Reported to be ready to light at the home of King Vidor and Eleanor Boardman. King hopes it will be a boy!

A $6 Insult

Hollywood—Judge Guy Bush received a rude jolt in traffic court when Vincent Barnett appeared in answer to three traffic violation offenses. Barnett told the court, "You can't tell me what to do, judge—you're not my wife." Before hissoner could sentence Barnett for life, a court attache explained that Barnett was a professional insulter at Hollywood parties. The judge assessed Barnett a total of $6.

Rockdale Goes Liberal

Rockdale, Tex.—This city has joined the larger cities of Texas having Sunday shows. After several years of Sunday closing, city officials issued a decree allowing theatres to open on the Sabbath. The decree was issued by the city fathers on petition of a majority of citizens. Under Texas' "blue laws," nearly a century old, most of the cities and towns are closed Sunday. San Antonio, Dallas, Fort Worth and Houston always have ignored the law without opposition.

Rogers Starting "Lightnin'"

Hollywood—Will Rogers starts work soon on the talker version of John Golden's stage play, "Lightnin'," according to decision of Winfield R. Sheehan, vice-president and general manager. Samuel N. Behrman will adapt the dialogue to the screen. Sonya Levien will write the continuity. Henry King will direct.

26 Magnascopes in Ontario

Ottawa—Ambrose Nolan, who controls Magnoscope, has installed the device in 26 Ontario theatres and is preparing a trip through western Canada. The device consists of a lens attachment for the projectors and an installation on the stage which permits full stage effect.

Arnold at Terre Haute

Washington, Ind.—H. J. Arnold, manager of the Indiana here since he came from Crawfordsville a few months ago, has left for Terre Haute, where he will manage the Indiana and Liberty, two of a string of five Terre Haute theatres owned by the Fourth Avenue Amusement Co, Louisville.

Steel Adds Another

Amherst, O.—The Empire, operated by S. B. Chuna, has been taken over by John Steel, who owns the Rex and Apollo at Oberlin, O.

Radio Signs Rita Chevret

Hollywood—Lita Chevret, former stock bit player with RKO, has been given a term contract. RKO intends to develop Miss Chevret as a featured player.

Coppock Goes to N. Y.

Kansas City—Word has just been received that E. S. C. Coppock, for several years manager of the Royal here, has been promoted to the Paramount-Publix home office in New York. Coppock will be a member of the newly organized program construction department, a line of work in which he has been interested for some time. Jerry Zigmond, from Grand Junction, Col., is to be the new manager of the Royal.

Completing Tiffany Film

Hollywood—Roy McNeill is completing direction of Tiffany's "Just Like Heaven," which will be released as "Mimi." In the cast are Anita Louise, David Newall, Gaston Glass and Yola D'Avril. Adele Buffington wrote the story and script. Miss Louise has been cast as lead in "The Third Alarm," which Emory Johnson will direct for Tiffany.

Ruggles Goes to Coast

Charles Ruggles, who recently completed a featured role in "Queen High," left for Hollywood Wednesday. He is scheduled to play in "Honeymoon Hate" with Jeanette MacDonald. Upon completion of this talkie, Ruggles will return to the Paramount New York studio to resume work under a contract recently renewed.

Williams In New York

J. D. Williams is in New York from London in connection with the World Center studios near London. The plant is being developed as a production clearing house for foreign language talkers.

Starts Outside the Law

Hollywood—Production has started at Universal City on "Outside the Law," starring Mary Nolan and featuring Edward G. Robinson. This is the story by Tod Browning which he made as a silent several years ago.

Dancing Sweeties

(Warner—All Talker)

Refreshing Program Fare

(Reviewed by Don Ashbaugh)

SOMETHING true and human hits "Dancing Sweeties" above the ordinary run of program pictures. Woven about unimportant people, in cheap surroundings, the story can never be more than a program picture but there is a reality to the humorous, pathetic, and sturdy tale that quite won the preview audience at which this was caught.

Sue Carol and Grant Withers are cast in the leading roles of two average young people who love dancing. They meet just before a contest in a dance hall, desert the partners with whom they came, dance together and are awarded the cup. When the couple who are to be principals in the free wedding which features the evening's program run out on the proposition, they take their places.

Miss Carol as Molly, older for her years than her young husband, learns the values to be regarded as important for matrimony as well as happiness, but young Bill, played by Withers long considered as the best dancer of them all, has a more difficult period of adjustments. The partners whom the pair deserted add complications to honeymoon, chiefly through Bill's pride in winning cups for his dancing.

There is a refreshing sincerity and humanness about the impersonations of the principals that is very winning. The supporting cast gives satisfactory performances. The other roles are played by Tully Marshall, Edna Murphy, Eddie Phillips, Margaret Seddon, and Sid Silver. The latter deserves credit for especially good work in the minor part of Jerry, the orchestra leader.

This is a good family picture, well done enough to hold the interest of a fairly critical audience. Sue Carol and Grant Withers are thoroughly likeable in their roles in "Dancing Sweeties."

A program with this as the feature should include musical shorts.

On the Level

(Fox—All Talker)

O. K.; Occasionally Rough

(Reviewed by Sherwin Kane)

THERE is a lot of lightweight entertainment in this, which makes it acceptable to almost any type of audience. The story is a familiar one, but properly done in the ruling spirit of comedy. Victor McLaglen, with a supporting cast that would be hard to beat, garners most of the laughs and carries the bulk of audience attention, not alone because of his role but because of his hearty, honest good-nature.

In this, he is Biff Williams, a rowdy mob riveter, the pride of his trade and with a weakness for dames. A double-barreled love interest is introduced when he, with his pal, Danny Madden (William Harrigan), find themselves living in Mom Whalen's (Leila McIntyre) rooming house. Danny loves Mom's daughter (Mary McAlister), but believes she is in love with Biff.

Biff, however, has fallen for a glamorous blonde (Lilyan Tashman). She happens to be a decoy for a racketeer gang who have an option on property they intend to sell before the option expires. She tells Biff of her father's plan to sell lots to working men at cost, and makes him an unwitting agent for the gang in order to dispose of the property to the iron workers. Which he does.

The show-up comes in time for Biff to overtake the racketeers before their train pulls out for Montreal. He returns with the money to his fellow workers, and with his heart to Mimi (Fifi D'Orsay), whom he had been giving the go-by for the blonde. Danny and Mary likewise come to an understanding of the same sort before the fade-out.

Fifi D'Orsay appears to have been injected into this as something of an afterthought; probably to provide a finale clinch for the otherwise uncomforted riveter who was so unkindly treated by the blonde. There was noticeably little background provided for her in the picture and when, finally, she comes forth to help the picture to a close, one wonders why.

Lots of the standard vulgarisms are given an opportunity in this to prove that they are still good for a laugh. Even the holding of the supposedly wet baby is with us. A little of the dialogue borders on bad taste. The limit of suggestion is reached when McLaglen, on the make for the blonde, asks if she is keeping company with anyone. "You know," he says. "Any one special"—stroking her thigh—"with good intentions."

The cast is uniformly good; everyone working together like a bunch of lodge brothers. Photography and sound, too, are okay.

Novelty and musical shorts will go well with this.

Holiday

(Pathe-All Talker)

Distinguished; Made for Women

(Reviewed by Red Kann)

THE fine hand of the skilled craftsman sticks out all over "Holiday." Philip Barry, one of the outstanding playwrights of the American stage, unquestionably deserves major credit as the author of the stage play from which the picture was adapted. So closely, in fact, that only one stretch of dialogue was altered for production purposes.

The cast assembled by Pathe for the screen version is practically gilt-edged. Headed by Ann Harding, always capable and always to be depended upon for a good performance, the principals include Robert Ames, Mary Astor, William Holden, Edward Everett Horton and Monroe Owsley. Collectively and individually, they deliver their histrionic goods.

"Holiday" should carry a big appeal for women. It's got the sort of stuff that gets under the female epidermis and stays there. The picture moves through surroundings of luxury and sophistication, yet this reviewer believes it hits close enough to the ground to have the mob appreciate it.

You see two sisters and a brother reared in an atmosphere of great wealth. Holden, the father, is a financial giant whose word in his home, as in his business, is ironclad. While the mother of the family is never shown, the unfoldment of the yarn conveys the idea that when she died humanness and warmth left the household with her. One girl, the younger (Mary Astor), meets Robert Ames at Lake Placid, falls in love with him as he does with her, and brings him home to break the news to her self-satisfied father. The other sister (Ann Harding) capitulates to his charm and determines to aid the engaged girl win over the lord of the house.

But the head of the family finds himself more interested in the boy's people, his social background and the status of his bank account than in Ames' make-up. He digs in, finds matters to his satisfaction and sanctions the engagement. Everything proceeds like clockwork. The boy is offered a partnership in a progressive law firm. He is to visit the girl's relatives in London where he can combine honeymooning with a slant on British business operations. Ditto, in Paris.

The boy can't see it. He wants a mental and physical holiday, a surcease from the cares of business while he is young and in accordance with the dream he had built up for himself all through the bitter years of his early struggle. The family, with the exception of Linda (Ann Harding) and the brother (Monroe Owsley) look upon him as an idler and fail completely to appreciate or understand his point of view.

Gradually, revolt wells up in his mind coupled with the realization that the girl he chose to be his wife is lacking in complete understanding of his slant on their future and that it is Linda, the other sister (Miss Harding), who appreciates what he is after.

Hurdling the barrier proves impossible. You see the complete break, the ultimate realization on the part of both Miss Harding and Ames that they love each other and yet can do nothing about it until there is forced from the engaged girl's lips the admission that she doesn't love the boy. Thus, the path is cleared and off Linda and Ames go for their holiday in Europe.

The dialogue sparkles. It is easy to understand how it was that Barry's play made such a hit when it ran in New York. Miss Harding easily tops the cast, with Edward Everett Horton, in a secondary lead, well night stealing the picture in a gorgeously handled part.

Hungarian Nights

(Amer. Gen'l Syn.)

Only a Fair Programmer

(Reviewed by J. P. Cunningham)

ITS lifeless tempo shackles "Hungarian Nights" to a millstone which proves much too heavy to permit its ascendancy to the realm of good program material. And it's too bad, because the elements contained therein—while pure unadulterated hokum—could have been made to click convincingly if the director had but given more effort to the acceleration of the plot.

The picture was produced in Germany by Aafa Films, Berlin. Lil Dagover is the only familiar member of a cast which fails to register even near par. They are all grossly misplaced, or perhaps it is their lack of ability which is responsible for the unconvincing performance of everyone but Miss Dagover. The male lead needs a good shaking to loosen him of a stiffness which closely borders on unnaturalness.

Synchronization of music and sound effects, particularly the latter, is excellent. The effects sound true and are placed in most advantageous spots.

The story — a heavy triangle — involves the love of an Austrian officer for his commander's wife, and the emotional incidents which later pave the way for the re-uniting of the two young lovers. Old stuff, but good for the b. o.

Strong support will put this over. The shorts should all be comedies.

Not Damaged

(Fox—All Talker)

Diverting

(Reviewed by Robert Hage)

ONE of filmdom's most impregnable traditions has been shattered in this picture. The rich, cocktail-imbibing, man-of-the-world suitor of our heroine turns out in the end to be the clean-minded, pure-hearted chap, while the penniless fiance is shown up in his true light as worse than a cad. The producers evinced great courage in thus double-crossing their public, who believe that only the lower classes can be sterling in character, but they have turned out a picture that is swell entertainment.

They shattered another precedent by casting Lois Moran in an ultra-sophisticated role. She tried hard to make a go of it, but it was difficult to accept her in the characterization and she herself appeared to be bewildered at times. However, her appeal and her excellent voice serve to gloss over any deficiency. Of the other players, Walter Byron, Robert Ames, Inez Courtney and George Corcoran were particularly well cast and turned in fine performances.

Chandler Sprague, the director, and Richard Connell, author of the revolutionary theme, are entitled to the major credit for a picture that moves swiftly, is punctuated with many laughs and that is not insulting to the intelligence of the audience. It is hardly suitable for juvenile trade, but its sophistication is not over the heads of the average adult.

Gwen Stewart and Maude Graham, roommates, are clerks in a department store, Gwen (Lois Moran) in the shirt department and Maude (Inez Courtney) at the music counter. Kirk Randolph (Walter Byron) sees Gwen, falls in love with her and manages to see her regularly by purchasing several dozen shirts a day. He arouses the ire of her sweetheart, another store employee.

In an adventure-seeking spirit, Gwen visits Kirk's luxurious apartment, but she is quickly convinced that his intentions are not honorable, and flees. From there she goes to the apartment that her fiance is preparing for their home, and the author reverses the usual order of things by having him make advances to her. So she returns to Kirk and theatrically announces that she wants to have a wild time. He obliges by taking her to a Greenwich Village studio. Here the director burlesques the denizens and posers of that section in delightful manner.

Gwen becomes beautifully cock-eyed on red ink and when she awakens the next morning she is horrified to find herself in Kirk's bed. There is a suspicious dent in the other pillow, but Kirk comes in later and explains that he has slept in another room that night, thus appeasing the censors, but not adding to the plausibility of the plot. And so they get married.

Good box-office for sophisticated audiences, although local censors may swing the axe on portions of it.

Musical shorts and newsreel are sufficient to fill out your bill.

Turksib

(Vostok-kino—Synchronized)

Impressive

(Reviewed by Robert Hage)

HERE'S a picture without a story, a scenario or a cast, but it grips the attention from start to finish and, although it is not classified by its Russian producers as an "epic," it justifies that appellation more than many others ballyhooed thusly.

While the film is a record of the Soviet's mammoth undertaking to connect Turkestan and Siberia by railroad, all semblance of propaganda has been avoided scrupulously, and the result is a human document of man's indomitable courage in battling with adversity and his will to conquer the forces of Nature.

The work of Director Viktor Turin is outstanding and worthy of the highest praise. He has taken a cameraman and gone in search of the primitive to record a simple drama of life in the raw that becomes powerful through its simplicity. The characters that flit across the screen very obviously were not paid players; in fact, one suspects that the camera was hidden. For example, in one instance a tribe of Mongolians ride up on horses, steers and camels to behold the miracle of the "iron horse" penetrating the mysteries of the Turkestan desert. A shot of steam sends the animals bolting in terror. No faking there.

One terminus of the railroad is in the desert, the other in icy Siberia. Yet it is only 897 miles in length. Laying roadbeds in shifting sands and across snow-covered mountain passes, building bridges over turbulent rivers, hammers being used to drive home the rivets—these were some of the obstacles faced by the engineers in constructing the Turkestan-Siberian Railroad.

The director first takes us to Turkestan, where the struggles of Asiatic tribes to eke a living out of the country are often frustrated by the lack of water for the cotton fields; then complicated by the tremendous difficulties in transporting their wares to market. One striking shot shows a caravan numbering hundreds of humans and thousands of head of stock wending their way through mountain passes.

Later, in an exceptionally gripping sequence, the caravan is engulfed by a sand storm. Everything in the path of the storm is carried along at a terrific speed and man and beast huddle together in an effort to save themselves from being swept to destruction. Here, however, Turin strikes a false note by shooting a mound after the gale had subsided and intimating in a subtitle that the entire caravan had been buried in the sand.

With the railroad come tractors and labor-saving devices and the peasants are freed from their heart-breaking manual toil and factories spring up to convert the raw materials into manufactured products. Progress and prosperity.

The cameraman should share the honors with Turin for practically flawless and distinct photography. Some sound effects are dubbed in, but are not authentic. As one in the series of cinematographic glimpses into life in far-off lands which are in vogue, "Turksib" is good enough for any type of theatre.

Balance with peppy comedies and musical shorts.

Produced by Vostok-Kino. Distributed by Amkino. Directed by Viktor Turin. Length, 4,900 feet. Running time, 60 mins. Release date, May 24, 1930.

Wonderful Lies of Nina Petrowna

(Ufa-Film—Silent-Syn.)

Splendid Programmer

(Reviewed by J. P. Cunningham)

ERICH POMMER'S masterly touch gives an ideal box office slant to a tense drama convincingly told by writer, director and players. All of these production elements are to be commended for working in such close unison, delivering an impressive program attraction which is well suited to the tastes of those picturegoers who insist upon a natural and intelligent handling of the problems of everyday life.

There is but one flaw in the production and that lies in slow handling of a few unimportant sequences.

The story beautifully relates the tale of a strong love between a young Russian lieutenant, a part ably portrayed by Franz Lederer, and Nina Petrowna, splendidly played by Bridgette Helm, who sacrifices luxury and a high position in St. Petersburg military circles as the fiancee of Lederer's commanding officer, for the love, and inevitable poverty-stricken existence, offered by the young army man.

Hans Schwarz directed under Pommer's supervision. Both turned in a splendid piece of production work, paying keen attention to the most minute details. There is no dialogue, a welcome relief from the constant humdrum of spoken parts. Mechanical delivery of lines will never be missed becouse of the tense interest and sympathetic understanding which Lederer and Miss Helm are bound to cultivate.

Synchronization was well done and the photography is nearly flawless.

Slapstick and a newsreel will go well with this one.

Produced by Erich Pommer Prod. for Ufa. Distributed by Allied Film Exchange. Story by Hans Szekely. Directed by Hans Schwarz. Photographed by Carl Hoffmann. Length, 8 reels. Running time, about 1 hr., 20 mins. Release date, May 30, 1930.

Women Everywhere

(Fox—All Talker)

Mediocre

(Reviewed by Red Kann)

MAYBE the producers' code of ethics had nothing to do with the case, yet it's anything but difficult to see how frequently the whitewash was applied to "Women Everywhere."

The opening shots of Fifi Dorsay show the French gal going through some of her wiggles to the tune of a near-naughty song called "Good Time Fifi." The locale is a low cabaret joint in Casablanca where French Legionnaires are on the hunt for women and liquor.

It doesn't take long after J. Harold Murray, gun-runner and devil-may-care sort of guy, breezes in for Fifi to become chaste and full of ideas about marriage. Ditto with Murray, despite the fact that he tells you he has been everywhere and has done everything.

As a matter of fact, the story can be shot full of holes. It's that inconsistent. Orchestras from nowhere swing into accompaniment as Murray sings in the desert fort of the Legion. And in her dressing room Fifi later turns pensive enough to burst into song. And again the obliging orchestra is on hand. Dramatic license—or rather musical license—is permissible, but even a good thing can be overdone.

Murray, running guns to sell to the Arabs, is overtaken by a French destroyer through a tip-off planted with the authorities by Michel, generally played by Ralph Kellard. The crew is arrested and breaks away while being escorted through the town, Murray making his way into Dorsay's dressing room. She doesn't turn him over to the police, naturally. There might have been no story if she had. Instead, she decides to save him, outfits him in a Pagliacci costume, makes him sing to the assembled rabble while the police conduct their search and later arranges for him to escape. However, he is caught in a Legionnaire's uniform and sent into the desert to bump off a few surplus Arabs. In the interim, the counterplot has Fifi about to marry Michel. But Murray returns some months later when everything goes according to Hoyle. Very convenient, very tame.

Miss Dorsay's work is as usual; considerable pouting, chest heavings and heap big French accent. One of the redeeming features of the picture is the robust singing of Murray whose voice is recorded very well indeed. Clyde Cook is in and out for some laughs and gets them, although it is regrettable he wasn't given more to do.

This has plenty of singing. Stick to comedy shorts and be certain to pick good ones.

Good Intentions

(Fox—All Talker)

Clever Crook Melodrama

(Reviewed by Red Kann)

A CROOK melodrama, but not merely another.

"Good Intentions," despite its nondescript title, is extremely satisfactory box-office because treatment and tempo are novel.

Here are crooks, coppers, a bank robbery and an automobile stick-up and yet the only time the guns bark or are actually seen for that matter—is in the closing sequence when Eddie Lowe and Earle Foxe shoot each other to death. William K. Howard wrote the story to begin with and had the added advantage of watching his own brainchild take form. There you have one explanation of why the results click. But far and above that in importance is the freshness of the directorial plant, and its ingenuity.

In point of actual story value, the picture hits it off along more or less conventional lines. Lowe, once again the head of a gang of crooks, falls for Marguerite Churchill, whose family wealth these gentlemen gunmen originally set out to capture. This complication, added to which is the jealousy of Earle Foxe toward Lowe eventually leads to the latter's undoing and a gun duel in which the two crooks kill each other.

Regis Toomey as the young society idler, provides Lowe's competition for the hand of the girl and, of course, in strict accordance with the celluloid doctrine that the righteous individual conquers the wrongdoer, finally wins the girl.

Nothing to create excitement there, as you can see. But by virtue of the dressings which go with the plot and the cleverness by which the situations are developed, the picture at once becomes engrossing and entertaining. Contrary to the run-of-the-mill crook mellers, here there are no villains leering over fair heroines, no gun-play to clutter up the theatre with a lot of sound. Howard's deft, smooth touch is apparent all the way.

He makes all of the characters likeable. Even Foxe, the heavy, under careful handling, never appears particularly vindictive. The solitary character who approaches the usual conception of the crook is played by Eddie Gribbon. The others are all apparently gentlemen and no strangers to swallow-tails and high hats. This naturally fits Gribbon in like a misfit and makes for plenty of laughs. Shrewd story building.

Lowe gives a nice performance and builds up plenty of sympathy for himself. One of the best drawn roles in the picture is that of the butler, played effectively by Henry Kolker. Foxe, as the menace, does capable work and Miss Churchill, filling a spot that never called for anything further than a good-looking girl, was satisfactory.

Since "The Valiant," she hasn't had anything that even approximates the opportunity that was then her's. Too bad. She's a trouper.

Gribbon's part proves a rather fat one; he played it for plenty. The demands upon Toomey weren't much, but whatever he had to do, was nicely handled.

Sound cartoons and comedies acceptable here.

Cain and Artem

(Sovkino—All Talker)

Junk

(Reviewed by Robert Herr)

THE best, if somewhat ungrammatical, criticism of this offering was voiced by an unidentified man who arose at the end of the showing at a New York theatre and announced loudly: "This is the worst picture I ever seen in my whole life." The audience applauded.

"Cain and Artem" resembles the hallucinations of a diseased mind. There is no excuse for it.

It is nauseating and revolting. While Soviet propaganda has been injected into it, especially in several scenes ridiculing the church, the picture is likely to prove a boomerang and instill a dislike of all things Russian in the minds of persons who see it. Maxim Gorki may have written the story, but he's no best seller today.

The story is negligible, the action consisting of episodes in a dirty Russian village. The central figures are Cain, a Jew who is subjected to many persecutions from the Russians; Artem, a bully; Elena, a fish-peddler in love with Artem, and her husband, Georgy. Artem has no use for Elena, getting his fun out of life by mauling the populace. However, Georgy hires four friends to kill him. They think he's dead when they dump him into the river, but he survives and hides in Cain's home until he is recovered. Then he goes to the village cabaret and starts tossing his enemies out of the window. After which, looking at the setting sun, he remarks to Cain: "It will be a nice day tomorrow."

The audience is treated to shots of fish stalls covered with crawling vermin; a butcher smelling the meat he's selling and grabbing for his nose; to a succession of incredibly repulsive human faces. It's not a picture for persons with weak stomachs.

This reviewer had to sit throughout the production in the line of duty, but others were more fortunate. Scores were seen to take seats, look at the screen for ten to twenty minutes, and then hurry out. Others, obviously devotees of "arty" and foreign films, sat enraptured and also delivered a volley of applause during the showing of the Russian newsreel, which was packed with Soviet backpatting.

Don't show it if you want to stay in business.

Produced by Sovkino. Distributed by Amkino. Based on story by Maxim Gorki. Scenario and directed by P. P. Petrov-Bytov. American titles by Shelley Hamilton. Photographed by Nikolai Ushakov. Length, 7,000 feet. Running time, 78 mins. Release date, June 6, 1930.

THE CAST

Cain	Emil Gall
Artem	Nikolai Shutov
Woman in the Market	Elena Lavrova
Her Husband	Georgy Zaitsev

The Critic Pays

Hollywood—Leave criticism of histrionic ability to the critics might well be the moral of Joseph Schildkraut's excursion into the divorce court, which resulted in a decree against him and in favor of Elsie Bartlett. She testified that, among other things, he called her a "rotten actress," that it was too bad one so talented as he "was bound to one of such meagre ability." Schildkraut, who did not contest the suit, will pay $250 alimony.

Lubitsch's "Silent Policy" Irks Wife

Hollywood—Ernst Lubitsch still favors silence so far as his home life is concerned, his wife alleges in her divorce complaint, declaring that for a month at a time he would refuse to converse with her except in scolding manner. This and his alleged insults of family guests and friends, "opprobrious" language and habit of staying out nights constitute mental cruelty, she insists. A property settlement has been reached out of court.

Opinions On Pictures

Off to Peoria

(RKO-Talker—2 Reels)

Rough

ANOTHER in the "Nick and Tony" series, the two Italians in this instance putting over some wild slapstick on a sleeper. Nick loses everything down to his B. V. D.'s to a couple of gamblers on board and swipes a woman's dress for protection. A brooch is stolen by the sharps and the conductor orders that all be searched. Nick is crowded into the women's dressing room with a dozen females in deshabille and there's a riot when they find out his sex. They're easily satisfied if they laugh at this one. Running time, 15 minutes.

Slip it into a program that's strong otherwise.

The Devil's Parade

(Vitaphone Varieties No. 992—1 Reel)

Unusual

SOME inside stuff on hell, in the manner of a revue, showing how various pests on earth get their just desserts from old man Satan, dressed in a Tuxedo. Two choruses, white and colored, furnish some snappy stepping, and there are a couple of songs that don't mean a thing. On the whole, its originality makes it entertaining. Directed by George Hale. Running time, 10 minutes.

Okay any place.

For Sale

(Vitaphone Varieties No. 3355—1 Reel)

Punk

A BRASH "super salesman" butts into an executive's office and tries to sell him everything from life insurance to a revolver with which to commit suicide. The executive does nothing but register extreme nausea at the salesman's efforts, but he's got nothing on the audience. Running time, 6 minutes.

If you must play it, do so when the surrounding bill is strong.

Matinee Idle

(Vitaphone Varieties No. 1,021—1 Reel)

Nice Little Short

THE final fade-out twist sends this one over. Henry Hull, well known stage actor, appears as a matinee idol, visiting his playwright friend to listen to the big scene of playwright's new opus. Husband returning home finds best friend in arms of wife and threatens to shoot, is the supposed kick. Hull laughs, calls it old-fashioned until the author makes the situation applicable to Hull's own wife. Whereupon, Hull pulls the very line for which he ridiculed playwright. That, of course, sends the play over and Hull departs believing he is the victim of a writer's trick. Then wifie actually emerges from her hiding place behind the screen and goes for the playwright in a clinch. Directed by Arthur Hurley. Running time, 8 minutes.

Since this is slightly different from general run of shorts, try musicals as a balance.

The Japanese Bowl

(Vitaphone Varieties No. 3,899—1 Reel)

Will Please

IT'S the sad story of the ill-fated love affair between the Japanese girl and her lover, with papa frowning on the match, etc., etc. All Technicolor and pleasing in a mild way. Won't elicit cheers or groans. An indifferent short for indifferent audiences. Running time, 8 minutes.

Sound cartoons or straight comedies necessary for surrounding shorts.

Short Subjects

Let's Elope

(With Jerry and Betty Browne)
(Vitaphone Varieties No. 970—1 Reel)

Fair Comedy Stuff

SAPPY dialogue, with but a few light chuckles, is redeemed in the last few hundred feet by a nicely rendered popular tune sung by Jerry and Betty Browne, and the saving grace of this reel, which concerns an elopement of two young collegiates. Running time, about 9 minutes.

Use a good cartoon reel and dramatic feature material.

Musical Moments

(RKO-Talker—1 Reel)

Ordinary

FELIX FERDINANDO and his orchestra, dressed in Spanish costumes, render several stale selections in an uninspired manner, and make several puerile attempts at comedy. A pair of Spanish dancers are better than average. Running time, 11 minutes.

Spot in with a bill that needs musical divertissement.

The Nagger

(Vitaphone Varieties No. 1,014—1 Reel)

So-So Stuff

HENPECKED husbands—there must be some left—may get a kick out of this bedroom line of chatter between Jack Norworth and wife. It's the old wheeze of the jealous wife suspecting husband has been playing around with another woman and her efforts—successful—at keeping him awake. Not very funny. Running time, 10 minutes.

Strong shorts essential to bulwark this dud.

Lew Fields Amuses

BACK to the days of lager and Lillian Russell, "23 Skidoo" takes place in one of these beer gardens that used to be. The bustles of the women and the sideburns of the men supply the background and Lew Fields, of the famous Weber and Fields combination, the comedy. Generally amusing, often draggy, this short will get by to average satisfaction. Running time, 10 mins.

Cartoon comedies will go well with this.

What a Life

(Vitaphone Varieties No. 995-6—2 Reels)

Clever

A SATIRE on prison life and prison reformers that's novel and funny all the way through. On the threat of a bunch of reformers that they would complain to the governor if he did not treat the prisoners "humanely," the warden goes all the way, allowing the inmates to play golf, have stock tickers in their cells and dress in swell togs, with the keepers "yes-siring" them. It clicks a bunch of laughs. Running time, 14 minutes.

Will help a weak feature.

Taxi Talks

(Vitaphone Varieties No. 995-6—2 Reels)

Has Merit; Too Long

HAS merit and too much footage. Fifteen minutes of running time stretches the values pretty thin. Opening scene shows a taxi driver under a third degree. He tells his story and by flashbacks the action is told. First episode shows a college boy and a flapper with the boy on the make, secondly is the gold digger and the southern colonel, and lastly, a dramatic episode between a gunman and his moll. Shoot-'em-up wants to rid himself of sweetie who knows he has fallen for another gal. Finally, she stabs him and orders the driver to take her to the police station. Treatment and idea are a bit different; therein is this short's value. Running time, 15 mins.

Good short for light feature.

Holland

(Vitaphone Varieties No. 3,897—1 Reel)

Repetitious

DON'T shoot! This Vitaphoner is built up around a theme song that warbles about lips that meet in tulip time. An all-color release and nicely photographed at that. The number is pleasing enough, but becomes tiresome due to the persistence of Jack Haskell, the director, in repeating the song. Will get by. That's all. Running time, 8 minutes.

Comedies and cartoons here. Don't forget the newsreel.

Screen Snapshots

(Columbia-Talker—1 Reel)

Mild

JOHNNIE ARTHUR is "master of ceremonies" in this issue, and intimate off-the-lot shots are shown of Douglas Fairbanks, Mary Pickford, Hobart Bosworth, Alexander Grey, Bernice Claire and Raymond Hatton. The Doug-Mary sequence evidently was taken from a newsreel. The rest of it is rather amateurish. Running time, 9 minutes.

Okay for any type of bill. Ardent fans will like it.

Ryan and Lee

Flat

AND still they come. Another vaudeville sketch transferred to celluloid. Ryan and Lee are the principals in this dull affair which has something or other to do with failure to pay the rent and complications that follow. The only laugh in the picture is the sequence where a stray dog, for which the couple thinks a reward has been offered, undergoes a washing, loses his black ears and the reward with it. Running time, 9 mins.

Bolster it heavily. Requires loads of support.

Done in Oil

(Vitaphone Varieties No. 3881—2 Reels)

Wholesome and Amusing

NICE, wholesome amusement in the Potter series. "Done in Oil," latest of the group, will register with the rank and file because it will hit close to home. Lucien Littlefield, fine as usual as Pa Potter, this time gets himself messed up with a couple of oil promoters, finds he can't invest his own modest funds because his wife won't let him, takes the plunge on behalf of the church athletic association and sells out later to find out the sharks have really struck oil. Running time, 17 mins.

Worth a plug. Talk about it in your advertising.

Short Subjects

The Royal Fourflusher

(Vitaphone Varieties No. 975-6—2 Reels)

A Pippin

THIS short has more laughs in it than many a feature comedy and they're almost continuous. Eddie Buzzell is a riot, the idea behind the opus is refreshingly original and the gags, with one or two exceptions, new stuff. The setting is the throne room of a castle, with the king and queen being entertained by Eddie as a radio announcer. He cops a beautiful blonde with whom the king has a date, then has a rendezvous with the queen in her boudoir, getting her garters as souvenirs of a pleasant evening. It is all sheer nonsense, but delightfully entertaining. Running time, 17 mins.

Here's a lifesaver for a weak feature.

Stop That Noise

(Universal-Talker—2 Reels)

Slow

NOT much comedy in this one, it's only redeeming feature being Sunny Jim, one of the screen's best actors. His parents are unable to find an apartment because of the ban on children and Sunny Jim has to pose as a ventriloquist's dummy. It's laborious and forced and will produce yawns instead of laughs. Director, Sam Newfeld. Running time, 21 mins.

Will get by if the other units on the bill have strength.

The Stand Up

(Vitaphone Varieties No. 3,762—1 Reel)

Fair

BOBBY WATSON heads the cost of this little drama, which is well done, if filled with implausibilities. A rich broker, staging a little dinner party for a dame on New Year's eve, gets mad when she fails to show up on time and tells his butler to go out and bring in any person to be his guest. He brings back a bum who, believe it or not, turns out to be one of the dame's suckers. He bows out with a $20 bill, telling her, when she appears, that for once she won't get his roll. Running time, 7 mins.

Okay for a feature comedy.

Radio Kisses

(Educational-Talker—2 Reels)

Extremely Pleasing

Combining all those elements which go to make up a well balanced two reel subject with a high entertainment value and plenty of class. It has color—Mack Sennett's own process—of the best; love and comedy interest, intelligent dialogue and a well placed cast. Songs and music are tuneful. Need you ask for more? Sennett produced with Marjorie Beebe and George Duryea featured; both render splendid performances. Running time, about 19 minutes.

Ideal music and comedy number to use with a dramatic feature.

An Ill Wind, or No Mother to Guide Her

(Vitaphone Varieties No. 4097-8—1 Reel)

Good

A BURLESQUE of the old-time meller, done in the style recently made famous in Hoboken, with the audience hissing the villain, wildly applauding the hero and heroine and giving the razz to the dirty work. It's got the "papers," the poor but honest lad, the girl with the pure heart, the rascally villain who holds the mortgage, the sawmill from which the girl is snatched at the last moment and all the other standbys of the 10-20-30 days. Packed with laughs and sure fire for any audience. Running time, 11 minutes.

Ideal for a novelty drama.

The Artist's Reverie

(Paramount—1 Reel)

Pretty but Dull

A WELL done fantasy, showing an artist's painting come to life. Frank Cambria produced, and it's somewhat on the order of a stage presentation. Bradford Hunt is the artist and Gamberelli plays opposite. A costume subject that will get by as a pretty affair, but without any kick. Running time, 10 minutes.

Good balance for comedy bill.

Good Morning Sheriff

(Educational-Talker—2 Reels)

Fine

Lloyd Hamilton gives a performance which will get a laugh from the most frozen-faced spectator. 'Nuff said. The yarn is a Western burlesque number in which Lloyd, as sheriff, is pitted against the town's bad man. Suitable for any playhouse. Running time, about 18 minutes.

Use anything but a Western with this; comedy drama will go nicely.

Wise Flies

(Paramount-Talkartoon—½ Reel)

Fine Cartoon

THERE are quite a few laughs in this Max Fleischer cartoon. It has some novel gags, and for those who enjoy these exaggerated affairs, it has lots of laughs. The kids will pronounce it a wow. The spider and the fly fable here is given the funny treatment that only these cartoons can provide. Running time, 7 minutes.

For any kind of program.

Come Take a Trip in My Airship

(Paramount-Screen Song—½ Reel)

THE bouncing ball again in a community song number that has some novel effects and laughs. Krazy Kat gets a piano and starts the ball rolling, or rather bounding. It features the title song, a hit of several years ago, and there are some funny drawings to illustrate progress of the trip. Running time, 7 minutes.

Spot in anywhere.

Roger's Film Follows "All Quiet" at Carthay

Hollywood—Will Rogers' second starring talker, "So This Is London," has been set into Fox Carthay Circle for a Los Angeles run starting June 19.

Universal's "All Quiet on the Western Front" is currently in the house and will round out a total of ten weeks before it moves out.

Del Rio-Lowe Run Switched

"The Bad One" was premiered Thursday at the Rivoli, New York. Original plans called for first presentation at the Rialto. Dolores Del Rio and Edmund Lowe are teamed.

"Anita Page is letting no grass grow beneath her feet while climbing the ladder to movie fame. The popular M-G-M player is developing a natural talent for sketching and painting and plans to study abroad at the conclusion of her film career."

"Lon Chaney, making his first talkie, 'The Unholy Three,' treats the stage crew at the M-G-M studios to soda-pop every afternoon. Between scenes he can be seen fastening bottles to strings let down by the electricians in the grid above the stage. They haul 'em up and drink his health."

Six Dane-Arthurs Set As Darmour Prod. Starts

Hollywood—Swinging into his production schedule of two reel comedies for RKO's program next year, Larry Darmour has outlined the series of six comedies co-starring Karl Dane and George K. Arthur. The first has been completed under title of "Men Without Skirts," with others of the series including "Broken Wedding Bells," "Dumbbells in Derbies," "London Dry," "Dizzy Dates" and "Knights Before Xmas."

Louise Fazenda's initial Darmour comedy, "Pure and Simple," is slated for production in July, to be followed by "A Fall to Arms," "Too Hot to Handle," "Treat 'Em Handsome," "Second Hand Kisses" and "Blondes Prefer Bonds." Eight Mickey McQuire comedies are on the schedule for direction by Al Herman; with Lewis Foster and Phil Whitman slated to handle the two other starring series.

High and Low On Music Row

WITH "Mysterious Mose" and "Dancing with Tears in My Eyes" already in great demand with our dear music buying public, M. Witmark & Sons has augmented its catalogue with several new numbers, "In the Good Old Sun-Sunshine," by Al Lewis and Al Sherman; "Wasn't It Nice" and "Next to Your Mother," by Joe Young and Seymour Simon; "Things That Money Can't Buy," by Irving Caesar and Seymour Simon, "and "Along the Highway of Love," by Tommy Christian and Blaine Stone.

Miracles happen right under people's noses and are unnoticed. Of the nine songs which now grace the catalogue of Leo Feist, not one has the word "Love" in its title. Here they are: "Around the Corner," by Gus Kahn and Art Kassel; "Down the River of Golden Dreams," by John Klenner and Nat Shilkret; "If My Friends Find You They'll Steal You From Me," by Gus Kahn and Seymour Simons; "It Happened In Monterey," by Billy Rose and Mable Wayne; "Where the Golden Daffodils Grow," by Gus Kahn and Harry Archer; "The Song Without a Name," by Benee Russell; "Alone with My Dreams," by Gus Kahn and Harry Archer; "You're the Sweetest Girl this Side of Heaven," by Gus Kahn, Carmen Lombardo and Harry Archer, and "If I Had a Girl Like You," by Louis W. McDermott. Are we right?

Rudy Vallee seems to have taken a liking to Max Rich's new song, "My Bluebird was Caught in the Rain," published by Irving Berlin, the famous wielder of the megaphone having crooned aforesaid number several times in the past few days. Moishe the Gonnif says, "Vy not? It's a goot sonk, too."

Talking about Rudy Vallee reminds us that the crooner's decision to enter politics looks like a scheme on the part of megaphone manufacturers to introduce into Congress the most modern and up-to-date method of speaking, via the megaphone. Rudy Vallee is without a doubt the most logical choice to become standard-bearer for the M. M., having already made a successful debut in the Capital as guest artist of the First Lady of the Land.

Shapiro-Bernstein will publish two songs from "Night Work," forthcoming Pathe production starring Eddie Quillan. "Deep In My Heart," the theme song, is sung by Eddie Quillan and Sally Starr, while Margery "Babe" Kane warbles a novelty called "I'm Tired of My Tired May." Ted Snyder and Mort Harris wrote the tunes.

Over 40 years ago, Chas. K. Harris wrote a song entitled, "When the Sun Has Set," which he placed with Witmark. On receiving his royalty check for the enormous sum of $.84 (eighty-four cents), Harris wrote a letter to Isadore Witmark, saying: "I have framed your check, it being the lowest royalty check I've ever received." Isadore wrote back, "We have framed your song, it being the only song we have ever published that didn't sell."

PINCUS

U. S. Conspiracy Trial on Coast Slated Aug. 18

Los Angeles—Trial of the government's conspiracy action against Fox West Coast Theatres, Harold B. Franklin and a number of distributors is scheduled to start in Federal Court here August 18. The indictments grew out of alleged agreement of defendants to freeze-out independent exhibitors through long protection.

Fox West Coast and distributors have hastened adoption of a new set of zoning rules, in what is regarded here as a move to forestall further government activity with respect to protection. The zoning schedules adopted here may be made the basis of a national zoning plan.

Frisco House Damaged by Bomb Planted on Roof

San Francisco—Police here are seeking the vandals who placed a time bomb on the roof of the Royal. The culprits apparently sought to wreck the projector, but failed in their objective. The bomb ripped a hole in the roof and scattered bits of steel about the booth, but failed to damage the sound reproducer. The bomb was timed to explode after the show.

Reward of $1,000 has been offered by the Theatrical Federation of Unions, which is co-operating in trying to locate the culprits. Racketeers are suspected of the outrage.

Staging of Pictures Before Audience Planned

Hollywood — In planning production of Liberty Pictures, M. H. Hoffman and the Halperin Brothers intend to stage the rehearsals of each individual picture in front of a regular theatre audience. Arrangements have been made with Loring Kelly of the Manhattan Players to present the rehearsals in various small theatres in various southern California towns. Liberty's first picture to be made in this manner will be "Dancing Fathers," to be followed by "In Oklahoma."

Inspecting Cooling Plants

George Skouras, of Warners' theatre department, Herman Maier, chief of construction, and Joe Hornstein, general purchasing agent, are touring New England states to inspect refrigeration plants in Warner theatres. Following their survey, installation of cooling systems, which was announced some time ago, will begin in the New England theatres.

All Is Not Quiet

Lou Handman and Bernie Grossman, staff composers for Universal, have written a song, "All Quiet on the Western Front," which is the theme song of the war epic of the same name, although not synchronized. Handman, Kent & Goodman are the publishers.

Before the "Mike" In N. Y. Studios

WITH Lillian Roth starred, "The Picnic," the first of the new "personality series," has been launched at the Paramount New York studio under Norman Taurog's direction. The entire series will be one-reelers and will star featured contract players of this company, including Ginger Rogers, Frank Morgan and Charles Ruggles, the latter already having been featured in several two-reelers.

Beginning next Sunday, Harold Levy, musical director at the eastern Vitaphone studio, will conduct the Eastern Vitaphone Symphony Orchestra, consisting of 55 pieces, in a series of concerts every Sunday afternoon at the Beacon.

THE STUDIO SLEUTH

Telegraphon Wins Patents Victory In German Court

Berlin—Regarded as far-reaching in importance, so far as manufacture of sound film records in Germany by any other firm is concerned, is the victory of Tobis' ally, Telegraphon A. G. over Artiphon Record.

As a result, Artiphon has been forbidden to use the electro-magneting process in making other than ordinary phonograph records, and is held liable for damages for sound film records declared illegally manufactured. Artiphon in 1928 was licensed to make phonograph discs, but subsequently made sound film records.

W. E. "Propaganda" Is Hit By Writ of German Court

Berlin—Western Electric has been forbidden to spread alleged propaganda in connection with claims of installations declared to be untrue in a decision handed down by District Court No. 1 in an action brought by Tobis. Appeal was denied and W. E. ordered to pay costs.

"3rd Alarm" to Be Remade By Johnson as Tiff. Talker

Hollywood—"The Third Alarm," one of the most widely distributed silent pictures ever made by an independent company, is to be remade as a talker with Emory Johnson again directing it. The picture, produced some years ago for FBO by Johnson, played in 9,124 theatres of the United States, it is claimed.

"Wedding Rings" Ban Is Lifted by Ohio Censors

Toledo, O.—Fickleness of the Ohio censor board has again been demonstrated in connection with the First National picture, "Wedding Rings." Passed as okay by the Ohio board, the picture, heavily exploited, opened at the Pantheon here just before Christmas. It was taken out on one hour's notice after the board decided that it was not a proper picture for the Ohio public, and has meanwhile been banned. It has now, however, again been released and is being shown at the Pantheon with practically no change from the original script and dialogue.

lease season, and when they were getting ready to send their salesmen throughout France and to hold trade shows in Paris of their 1929-30 product.

Fearful of the adoption of the chamber's recommendations and consequently of being unable to estimate the number of licenses which would be available on the market for the 1929-30 season, especially since it was impossible to forecast the quantity of French feature film production with the advent of sound, the American exchanges decided on March 30, 1929, to make no more contracts for the release of their films until such time as the recommendations of the chamber were settled and the situation clarified. This involved the withdrawal of salesmen and the cancellation of trade shows. In addition, the American wiring companies decided it was futile to attempt to sell recording and reproducing equipment with no American sound films on the market, so they, too, decided to remain out of the market until some settlement was reached.

Papa Benny Rubin

Hollywood—Ever since Benny Rubin became a "pop" he has spent half of his time playing with the youngster and the other half talking about it. The climax came last week when Benny wrote an article for Motion Picture Magazine, telling "how to care for a baby." Here's the low-down:

Place her milk in the icebox so that it keeps cold; then heat it until it's warm. Cool it off so that it is not too hot, but be sure it is warm enough. Ring a gong three times to warn baby that the food is coming. She will arise to the occasion by giving three yells in answer. Repeat every four hours.

"It is advisable to bathe baby. Take a broiling pan, lay the baby on top of it and turn hose, especially constructed for the use of fathers, upon her. The water will hit her and go through the broiling space to the receiver beneath. You can save money by using this overflow for the next bathing.

"The influence of toys is important. I have already given her one little cash register and an adding machine. Never give a child anything which subtracts. Likewise, never give her one rubber ball. Give THREE, keeping her in a business mood. I am now getting together a group of pictures for her nursery. I have, already, those of Lon Chaney, Louis Wolheim, Ernest Torrence, Wallace Beery and Victor McLaglen. This is to give her an impression, early in life, that her father is good-looking."

Loew's London Theatre Gross Jumps 19 Per Cent

London, Ont.—An increase of 19 per cent in gross revenue during the past year is shown in the financial statement just issued by Loew's London Theatre, Ltd., the total gross being $278,794. Operating costs were higher, due to the adoption of talking pictures, but the net profit was also higher, the comparative figures being $86,257 and $80,962. Common stock earned 46 cents per share after dividends of $23,619 were paid on preferred stock. After writing off $3,621 on the talking equipment, the installation added $20,518 to physical assets.

Baltimore Theatre's Wide Screen via Magnify'g Lens

Baltimore—A big screen has been installed in Loew's Stanley, upon which the newsreel is being projected. The size is 28 by 40 feet and the enlargement is done by means of a magnifying lens which can be used for ordinary film. All pictures presented at the Stanley can be shown on the big screen if the management desires to do so.

Three Iowa Towns Cast Votes for Sunday Shows

Des Moines—Humeston, Ia., which had never before put the question to a vote, favored Sunday shows by a vote of 248 to 101 in one of the heaviest votes ever polled. G. L. Wellemyer, manager of the theatre there, paid the costs of the election.

Lenox reversed a previous decision and gave a favorable vote to Sunday shows. The March 31 election saw the issue lost by a scant 4 votes. At the last election, with a vote of 336 to 281, practically every voter was out at the polls. H. E. Hobbew, manager of the only house at Lenox, paid the election costs.

At Fayette, the new city council approved Sunday films and also started to license pool halls.

Higher Court Reverses Sunday Violation Cases

McKinney, Texas—Declaring the complaints were defective, a higher court here has reversed convictions of Roy Brockman, Eddie Nix and Marshall Padgitt, jr., who were alleged to have operated theatres on Sunday.

Brockman for several years has been city manager of R. & R. theatres. For the past few months he has clashed with local courts on the Sunday problem. In several cases he was given a $50 fine.

CONDUCTED BY AN EXHIBITOR FOR EXHIBITORS

The Human Side!

NOT so long ago in Cambridge, Mass., a very eminent young physician was told that he had an incurable malady and that death was certain within eighteen months.

He adjusted his mode of living and prepared for the inevitable; and at the same time began a book which he was determined to finish before he died. That book was finished, he passed on, and the contents of the book are known to almost every doctor of medicine and surgery in the country.

Considering what that young physician was going through, you might come to the conclusion that the title of the book would, naturally, be "The Cure Of The Patient."

But your guess would be wrong. The title was "The CARE Of The Patient."

The importance of this theme was recently emphasized still more when I attended the Commencement Exercises of a well known Medical College the other evening. The speaker of the evening laid great stress on the patient's point of view instead of the doctor's.

And stopping long enough to analyze the above, your mind should easily swing into the entire truth of the matter.

The human imagination is a mighty elastic one. Impressions are formed quickly and from reasons hard for the "other side of the fence" to appreciate or understand. Why shouldn't the doctor in the operating room take into consideration the feelings of the man about to be operated on?

Is it not important from the patient's viewpoint that his mind be made as much at ease as possible? Is it not true that in addition to the worry and strain of the operation that there might be other things worrying him and making his battle for life all the more difficult? Maybe he is worrying about his family. Maybe about financial matters. Who knows?

In every walk of life and in every field of endeavor the human element angle must be paramount, otherwise you have built up a wall that will be hard to scale. When working out any problem or situation never fail to take into consideration the other man's viewpoint. Put yourself, momentarily, into his place and see if the picture looks the same.

We wonder whether in all of the above you—showmen of the world—can't find a decided parallel as applied to our business? Whether it doesn't strike home as far as contact with patrons, employees and others are concerned. Think it over.

"Chick."

Maxfield Another To Recognize Possibilities Of Organ

Cashing in on his organ solos enabled C. M. Maxfield, manager of the Colonial Theatre in Hartford, Conn., to boost up his kiddie business on Saturday matinee.

It came about like this. Max uses the organ for about ten minutes on the beginning of each show and one Saturday afternoon while the organist was playing a popular number the kids were all humming under their breath. Then came the idea. Being handicapped as to organ slides, he decided to fashion some home-made ones. So during the week he made up some typewritten slides and printed the choruses of a number of popular tunes.

Fifteen minutes before show starting time he got up on the stage and asked the kids whether they would like to sing. The response was a unified chorus of "yesses." The kids went after the plan in great style and as Max says, "It's done more to keep up the attendance of the kids than anything I've done yet." The angle enables him to bring them in early, thus giving the show a clean break and keeping the youngsters out of the mischief they indulge in by running all around the house before starting time.

The new idea met with favor with the kids' parents and the reason they knew that something was going on inside the house was the fact that when 1,200 kids start bellowing "The Stein Song" at the top of their lungs it's bound to be heard for a mile or two away. So when a stunt will meet with the favor this one has why not give it a trial, especially if you have an organ and you're not using it. If you can't secure the regular organ slides, the typewritten ones will do fine and we don't doubt but that the business you do will more than repay for the time spent in putting this idea across.

"Box-Office-Blues" Don't Stand Chance With George Irwin

Your box-office will never get the blues if you're as wide-awake as George P. Irwin, manager of the Paramount Theatre in Brainerd, Minn., when it comes to cashing in on slants that your picture presents to you.

When he played "High Society Blues" Irwin felt that here was one that needed some different plugging in the line of window display so he tied up with a local ready-to-wear store and arranged to feature a display of clothing, entirely in blue. There were blue hats, blue coats, gloves of blue and scarfs of blue, blue dresses and blue blouses. And to top it off, a blue gelatin was used to lend a blue tone to the lighting. The unusual shading of the window drew people from the other side of the street over to look at it and with the picture and playdate being plugged by a sign reading "FASHIONS IN BLUE FOR MILADY SUGGESTED BY 'HIGH SOCIETY BLUES' AT THE (THEATRE)" it's small wonder that they started to line up early at the box office on the opening day.

In addition to his tie-up in the window, Irwin also persuaded the dealer to lend him a complete blue outfit to be worn by the theatre's personality girl, who stood in the lobby greeting the guests and telling them about the picture. When a showman puts over activities like these it is the logical thing for us to conclude, since he is a new Club member, that he is going to be a very active one. Now that George knows our views on the subject we hope he will take heed and when he sends us in his next contribution he'll include a photo and a little note about his career in show business so that we can give him a regular send-off.

GROWING MIGHTY FAST!!

We hit a new "high" a few week's back when the Club section ran to thirty-eight pages. Not bad for a "baby" only two years old.

Maybe those dyed-in-the-wool pessimists will finally admit the Club is really all that our boosters claim it to be.

And who put the Club and the section where it is today?

Me?

Hell, No!

The credit goes to you members who keep us supplied with the material to make these pages so doggoned interesting that when a subscriber misses a copy he lets out a rave like this: () "Some one copped my M. P. N. twice in succession and I had to send to N. Y. for back editions." Or one like this: () "My regular issue of the News has not arrived . . . business went rotten last week and started off worse this week . . . and I blame it on the failure of the News to arrive so that I could have checked up on the attractions booked for this house . . . and would have known they were 'weak sisters.'"

Keep it up, boys, because as "Mammy" Jolson says: "You ain't seen nothin' yet" and we don't mean maybe. We've dozens of novel gags coming along that will constantly key up more interest than ever in our own Club pages.

A MEETING OF THE EX-MANAGERS ASSOCIATION!

Newt Treece Has A Baseball Slant That Sounds Good

Almost every showman likes to take in a baseball game now and then but we guess that when they look at all the advertising space on the billboards located at various parts of the field, their attention is momentarily devoted as they muse on the possibility of plugging their theatre before the eyes of thousands upon thousands of people. But it usually happens that the rates are so high that it would be impractical to attempt this medium of advertising. But it is not so in small towns Newt Treece, manager of the Sherman Theatre in St. Cloud, Minn., has proven that.

His local ball team plays once a week at home and so Treece arranged to erect a twenty-four sheet board along the right field fence. To stimulate interest he offered a pair of tickets to any slugger hitting the theatre attraction while the game was on. The stunt met with immediate favor and it was to be noticed that the more accomplished place hitters were lining their drives in the direction of the right field wall. And every time the pellet whizzed towards the twenty-four sheet, many eyes were trained upon its flight.

We want to hand a little compliment to Mr. Treece for his alertness and for bringing this angle up before the Club as we know his fellow members will be very glad to make use of this stunt if they happen to have a ball team representing their town or city. Listen, Newt, how about sending us in a photo and a little dope on yourself so that we can give you an introduction to the "boys," because from what Cliff Gill has to say about you fellows around his district, there's plenty of showmanship being displayed?

The Talkie Producer—Excellent! Excellent! I have never heard Miss La Hotte's voice reproduce so well!
The Director—Good Lord! That isn't Miss La Hotte—that's the parrot! —Judge.

Theatre Birthday Was A B. O. Party For Mgr. Greenberg

Anniversary parties as presented by showmen have proven to be knockouts so far as "ace" merchandising is concerned. And the best part of all the Anniversary stunts we received has been that nearly all of them have introduced a couple of new angles that we could pass along.

When Anniversary time rolled around at Harry Greenberg's house in Eau Claire, Wis., he tied-up with the local dealer and promoted a number of valuable gifts that ranged from kitchen utensils to wearing apparel, jewelry and practically every other thing that would appeal to the residents of the town. The gifts were placed on display in the darkened orchestra pit and as the trailer announcing the dealers participating in the celebration and their donations was flashed on the silver sheet A BABY SPOT PICKED OUT THE VARIOUS GIFTS IN THE PIT. What a word-of-mouth builder this one turned out to be! The patrons were telling others to go into the theatre and get a look at this bit of showmanship and when they talked like that, is it any wonder that the affair proved successful?

Of course, the well-known double truck co-operative newspaper ads were not omitted in the campaign and they, too, did a lot towards the success of it. Another angle that created plenty of comment was arranged through a tie-up with a local taxi company. THE COMPANY AGREED THAT ANY PERSON GOING TO THE THEATRE IN ONE OF THEIR CABS WOULD BE TRANSPORTED HOME FREE OF CHARGE! And take it from us—that is showmanship. We could probably go on and set forth a few hundred more details that went into the complete campaign but since we feel that Mr. Greenberg will want to let the rest of the world know what he is doing through these pages we will have to cut this short until the next account of his activity And we hope to find a photo in the mail, too. Right, Harry?

Another thing about night baseball, which they are now playing in the West, is that night is a swell time for what the umpires usually get away with. —N. Y. Evening Post.

Odd Angles Worked Fine For Crowther In W. Palm Beach

We don't know whether you would call this angle that Ted Crowther used to plug "Party Girl" at the Stanley Theatre in West Palm Beach, Fla., "auto-suggestion" or "bottle suggestion" but read it over and decide for yourself.

For three days in advance and continuing through run of picture, the entire front of the theatre from the marquee back to the auditorium was dressed in a gala effect with banners and pennants to conform with the theme of the picture.

In one of the corners of the lobby was a table for two—containing a tablecloth, empty bottles, etc., together with a card announcing the gaiety of the picture and playdates.

A prominent down-town window was dressed in much the same fashion as the lobby, using the table, bottles, streamers, etc., as well as card announcing the picture, theatre and playdates.

Taken all in all, it's atmosphere and atmosphere without showmanship wouldn't be so hot. With Ted holding the title of showman it's no wonder the picture clicked and its success was due in no small measure to these angles.

MANAGERS' ROUND TABLE CLUB

BASEBALL!

Have you a local team?

Is the game popular in your town or city?

Then why not sponsor the donation of a cup, to be on display in your lobby, which is to be awarded to the most valuable man on the team. And select or suggest a committee of judges that will make the gag still more interesting-provoking? Making sure, of course, that the local papers are in on it.

You might help them by exploiting the home games and distributing appropriate circulars, with a heavy head reading—

"A REAL DOUBLE HEADER"
The Blankville Giants Play Ophustown Yanks This Afternoon at the Civic Oval and
Joe Whizzeltiff in "Came the Applesauce" at the Blank Theatre Tonight

Its only a rough suggestion. Some may think it rougher than others, but its worth a thought or two. Maybe it will suggest an idea to you. People will go to ball games, and if the team is popular and the weather right, you cant keep 'em away from the ball field anyway.

And if you do get in right with the team, they may even be promoted for a personal appearance at your theatre.

Lots o' angles if you want to investigate. But it is up to YOU.

Many Good Slants To Cokain's Newspaper Activities

We had been wondering about the whereabouts of Ralph Cokain, manager of the Indiana Theatre in Marion, Ind., when as usual, we arrived at Club headquarters and found out that he has been very busy pulling some stunts that had the town gazing and gaping and for that reason remained sort of out of touch with his fellow members. However, Ralph assures us that in the future he will resume his active contributing and not cause us so much anxiety about him.

When he played "Hold Everything," he arrived at the conclusion that the picture should be sold and sold well. So to that extent he started stepping and promoted a full-page co-operative page from the local merchants in town. And since a page of this kind is no easy matter to secure in his town we decided to let you see what sort of thing he turned out.

In order to stimulate interest and also to find out the drawing power of the special page, he injected novelty into it in the form of a contest. In case you cannot discern it from the reproduction, we'll tell you that it was a "Missing Letter" stunt. A letter or two was missing at some place in all the ads and the readers were invited to find them and correct them. The completed letters, when orderly arranged, spelled "Hold Everything." The success of the ad was seen in the number of replies received at the theatre, with Ralph being almost swamped by mail. And with so many people interested, it stood to reason that the picture would click, and click it did. Incidentally, should you decide to use this stunt on any picture you're playing don't overlook the fact that "Hold Everything" is the one thing that predominates on this page and if your picture's title will fit in a running head it will pay to work it in.

Having the interest of his fellow showmen at heart and knowing a good gag when he sees one, Ralph passes along a stunt that he picked up in Indianapolis and used at his house, during the showing of Chevalier's latest opus "The Big Pond."

He tied-up with the local newspaper and arranged to have the staff photographer snap people on the street. When the group picture was published in the paper, rings were drawn about the heads of certain persons (men). The men, who were thus catalogued were invited to call at the local hat store and receive, free of charge, A NEW STRAW HAT. Here's an idea that at this time of the year is a corker for you. Your newspaper tie-up should be easy and a little persuasion on your part ought to convince your local haberdasher that the publicity resulting from a stunt like the above will eventually mean added business for him. Go after this one, hook, line and sinker and you'll find that it's good business building bait.

With his starting off like this, we believe that Ralph is more than sincere in his determination to once again enter our active fold and pass along accounts of his live-wire work.

Jack Dempsey Gave O.K. To Put Picture Over For McKinnon

We recall that not so long ago a story appeared in our pages which credited a Canadian showman with asking a competitive showman in his town what he thought of a picture the competitor had just been previewing at his house. The showman stated that it was the best picture he had ever seen. The next day the questioner's ads carried statements to the effect that the manager of the other house thought a lot of the film. The stunt clicked and the picture went over to big box-office. Of course, before running the ad permission was asked to use his testimonial. This was freely given as the showman is a very good friend of the other.

Our point in citing this example of live-wire work is to bring out what Gordon McKinnon manager of the local Publix house in Rochester, Minn., did with a testimonial that was given him by no less a personage than Jack Dempsey, the noted pugilist. When he played "Hold Everything," McKinnon got a break by finding that Dempsey had purchased a ticket to watch his pal Georges Carpentier perform in the picture. As Dempsey was leaving the theatre he was asked for his opinion of the picture. He endorsed the film most heartily and the yarn was broadcast by the United Press and carried on the sport pages of hundreds of papers throughout the country.

Publix certainly got a break on this one and McKinnon deserves a big hand for being wide-awake to take advantage of the opportunity. We would like to hear more from this showman. And by the way, he has already cashed in on Vacation Time by tying up a local travel agency and securing a free cruise around the Great Lakes to be given away in connection with a business building contest he was promoting. This timely stunt is eliciting a lot of comment and though it hasn't been awarded yet we know that it is going to prove profitable, and we hope that he will keep us in touch with the final result. What do you say Mac, keep us posted on it, will you, and how about obliging us with your photo and a little dope about yourself?

C. E. WHELAND Says:

"I have been kept busy digesting the many and helpful suggestions and campaigns of my fellow members. I have found your Department very helpful."

MANAGERS' ROUND TABLE CLUB

Railroad Tie-Up Went Over Big For Bolivar Hyde, Jr.

We figured it would be only a matter of time before a couple of brand new ones would be forthcoming from Bolivar Hyde's stronghold at the Polk Theatre in Lakeland, Fla., and for that reason we sat back to see what this live-wire was going to pull. Imagine our surprise when we heard that he crashed the railroads for publicity.

Here's how it came about. Through a tie-up he arranged with the Atlantic Coast Line R. R., he was permitted to place banners on the engines stopping at Lakeland and the adjoining towns. The banners plugged "The Vagabond King." Inasmuch as this stunt had never been seen before in Lakeland or the other towns the natives paid special attention to it and as a result eventually hit the theatre and slapped down their dough at the box-office.

Here's something that perhaps you too can use. There may be a trunk line, or some other branch line running along through your town. And if so it will pay you to use a stunt of this kind and the little delay you might have to go through in placing the banners will more than be paid for later on. We want to thank Bolivar for passing this one along to us, and say that if he gets any more new ones we'll have to investigate and find out how he does it.

Archaeologists are in doubt about the use of a strangely shaped jar which was found recently in a tomb at Luxor. It was probably a bridge prize.—Dublin Opinion.

Dashkin Bids Fair To Create A Fine Name For Himself

Ten days straight run on a picture, according to Irving Dashkin, managing director of the Savoy Theatre in Jamaica, New York, is a mark for the rest of the Jamaica houses to shoot at. For that's the record his house hung up on "Disraeli," and it may have been due in considerable extent to his A number one publicity campaign, which, though we haven't it on hand at this time, we will endeavor to pass it along in the future.

However, on his merchandising of "Across the World With Mr. and Mrs. Martin Johnson," he carried over a few of the stunts he used on "Disraeli" and by these you can see what he did to bust records. The first exploitation stunt he used was to place a quantity of bookmarks in all of the public libraries around the theatre. The bookmarks were placed in every book leaving the library and gave the picture some great publicity. To secure this tie-up without any trouble, the bookmarks were so made up as to suggest books on Africa and in this manner the library benefitted, too.

He then tied-up the local Willys-Knight agency, due to the fact that the car was used by the Johnson's on their trip, and they loaned him a new model which he covered with banners and pennants plugging the film. In one of the windows of a large department store he arranged a display of stills and a number of the explorer's books, grouped around a card plugging the picture. A special morning show was arranged for school students. Obtaining the co-operation of the local Boy Scout troops, he was enabled to have the scouts hand out, at the schools, over ten thousand special discount tickets.

All-in-all the campaign clicked from the minute it started and when Dashkin counted up his receipts at the conclusion of the run he knew that he had hit upon the right angles in merchandising the film. We would like to hear more about what this showman is doing to sell his shows in Jamaica, because we are well aware that competition around his neighborhood is very keen, and for that reason he has to keep stepping. How about it, Irving, keep us posted will you? And remember, we're going to hold you to your promise to tell us about the "Baby Contest" stunt you are engineering now.

MANAGERS' ROUND TABLE CLUB

"Rudy" A. Kuehn

When ever you start out to list those showmen whose ability has carried them way up to the top in the show-racket, don't overlook "Rudy" Kuehn, General Manager for Lawrence S. Bolognino's Consolidated Circuit.

Kuehn first startled the show business when he was born in Milwaukee,—but of course no one will hold that against him,—but when he finally decided to make this game his life's work he, at least, started from the bottom of the ladder and therefore he does not fit into that class of executive who was pushed to the top without the much-needed experience and background so essential for his present job.

To prove that Milwaukee was a magnet, "Rudy" returned to his home town as managing director for the (then) new Alhambra Theatre. What he accomplished along the lines of perfect theatre-management plus a decidedly progressive style in advertising and exploitation, is now history, but the kind of history that puts him in the proper light when one starts talking about his past experiences.

Feeling that neighborhood theatre management was a highly specialized phase of show-business, Kuehn fulfilled his ambition to take hold of just such houses when he tied up with the Consolidated outfit over two years ago, and the fact that he still retains that position, in a city where hiring and firing and switching and changing predominates, is the finest tribute we can possible pay to his fine ability.

Kuehn numbers among his large group of friends many outstanding figures in theatrical circles and long before we had the opportunity of meeting him personally we felt that we knew him for years. As a matter of fact, the first time we mentioned him on our pages we were surprised to have several dozen showmen from all over the country mention his name in their next letters.

But, here, we don't want to keep this up too long, so we'll just say: "Hello 'Rudy,' glad to know you and it's a pleasure to number you among our friends."

Community Goodwill Is Important Says B. L. Kearney

Good-will building, as we have stressed time and time again, is an invaluable asset in any community and from the way B. L. Kearney, manager of the Palace Theatre in Ashtabula, Ohio, strives to bring it to his house, it is a cinch that his box-office receipts, at the end of the year, are going to show a profit.

Ashtabula harbors a good many local organizations, such as a High School Band, Industrial Art Club, Hi Y Club, Y. W. C. A. and others of the sort that almost any local town possesses. It has been Kearney's method in the past to co-operate to the fullest extent possible with any of these local organizations needing help. He rents out the theatre to them on a plan that would be of mutual benefit to both and it has never failed to bring good results. Consequently, the High School Band, when they needed money, hired the theatre and came clear with a profit. As did the Y. W. C. A. and a few more of the local clubs All of these organizations hold only the friendliest feeling towards the theatre and we imagine that the good-will the house has received since these plans were put into effect has reached proportions that would gladden the heart of any showman It pays always to try and help the other fellow in your town because you're bound to get back that time you expend, in a lot of good-will and subsequent business.

On his show merchandising proper, Kearney has contacted with the two hotels in the city and they permit the printing of the theatre's program on the back of the menus. The manager of a local music store, being wide-awake, allowed Kearney to build a marquee over his music stand and the song hits from current and coming attractions are plugged on it. An interesting item of note is the fact that the dealer's music sales have almost doubled since the tie-up. To plug his shows about the town, a special advertising truck is used by Kearney and care is taken to see that the truck is on the street at all times.

Judging from this showman's activities that we have just set forth, it seems to us that we are going to hear more from him. So what do you say "B. L.," are we right? You know when we come across examples of work of the sort you turn out nothing gives us more pleasure than to pass them along to the rest of the Club.

A new clerk, dictating a letter a few days ago, was in doubt as to the use of a certain phrase, so he said to the stenographer:
"Do you retire a loan?"
And the wistful eyed one replied rather sleepily:
"No, I sleep with mamma."—Elbenews.

Have You Ever Seen An Ad Like This? Credit Geo. Landy

When you stop to consider the amount of advertising brain power that is now on the West Coast of the United States, it immediately becomes a Herculanean task to say just which is the finest, the greatest or which is the most outstanding.

We have shown more than we can recall at this writing, dozens of newspaper layouts, some from Frank Whitbeck, some from Eddie Fitzgerald and many others too numerous to mention, so we can be pardoned this little outburst of enthusiasm if we say that for the moment George Landy cops the honors for doing something decidedly unusual yet mighty effective.

Lest you be confused, permit us to inform you that Mr. Landy is the Chief of Advertising and Publicity for the RKO Circuit and is well qualified to think up new and useful angles in connection with his various activities.

All of this raving now brings us to the point of the story which is the reproduction of a two column by 7½" newspaper ad which appeared in the Los Angeles Examiner on May 31st and upon close inspection (if a close inspection is needed) will reveal something that is certainly different and eye-arresting regardless of how much black ink is employed on the same page for other newspaper ads.

We are certainly delighted at the opportunity of showing this clever gag, and we hope that Landy will keep us posted on future stuff of this kind.

How about it, "G. L."? You can answer this one better than we can, and it would seem to us that the activities of the RKO outfit on the coast ought to be presented to the industry a whole lot more than they are right now. No sense keeping good things a secret, because if we all took that attitude, there would be darn few of us who would get far in the world. And that would put the racket in a rotten spot.

MANAGERS' ROUND TABLE CLUB

Altitude Records Broken; "Swing High" Hit The Sky

This story about "Swing High" opening down in Baltimore marks a radical departure from Club methods in handling such matters; but to tell the truth, Rutgers Neilson got us so pepped up that we threw discretion to the winds and said we would "shoot the works" if he'd send us the dope. Therefore, if you like the way the details of the following campaign are set forth, credit Rutgers and those responsible. If, by any chance, you don't like them, don't blame us, 'cause we DIDN'T write it.—Oak?

Aided by one of the biggest advertising exploitation and publicity campaigns seen in Baltimore, Pathe's SWING HIGH had its premiere at Keith's Theatre in that city Sunday night, May 4th. Laurence Schanberger, manager of the house and Joe Rivkin, Pathe exploiteer, engineered the campaign under the direction of Gar O'Neill, director of advertising and publicity who also went to Baltimore for the opening.

Every radio station in Baltimore was supplied with orchestrations and piano arrangements of the five hit songs. Numerous dance hall orchestras were also given music.

A special SWING HIGH programme was broadcast over StationWCBM. Sunday afternoon with a variety of entertainment, the theme songs being plugged, of course. A novel contest was arranged on this radio hour, whereby all listeners were requested to send in the titles of the pictures in which they remembered seeing each of the sixteen stars who appear in SWING HIGH. A goodly number of answers came in and $25 was given to the prize winners.

At the Pennsylvania Station terminal the largest sign ever seen in Baltimore—10x70 ft.—was on display, as you will note on the group of photos tying up the SWING HIGH showing at the Keith Theatre with the recent T.A.T.-Maddux-P.R.R. Coast-to-Coast air-rail trip made by Helen Twelvetrees with the film.

For street ballyhoo, a character well known in Baltimore was engaged to parade the streets on stilts, garbed as an old time circus clown, carrying sign on his back announcing the showing of SWING HIGH This stunt proved a splendid attraction.

GRADUATION GAGS!

We are trying to present all graduation suggestions as fast as they come in, but there is no reason why you should wait until it is too late to work up some interest in this idea.

Surely there are some gags which will just suit your local situation and requirements. But you can't always expect them to come to you. Get busy and go after them yourself.

Every graduate of your local grammar and high school should receive some sort of a congratulation from your theatre. Tie in with the schools in any possible way. Help them put on their exercises. Possibly your theatre will solve the seating capacity problem which most schools have to contend with every year.

If you have followed the advice of leading showmen, you ought to have a corking batch of graduation suggestions in your "tickler" file.

Time Is Short So Don't Fall Asleep!

The decorations in Keith's Theatre were put up some days before the opening and consisted of several large clown cutouts, four cutouts made from the pictorial three-sheet—these were hung on the marquee—oil paintings representing scenes and principal characters; and special frames showing telegrams from screen stars, film directors and executives.

The posting throughout the principal thoroughfares of Baltimore included fifty (50) 24-sheets, one hundred (100) 6-sheets, one hundred (100) 3-sheets, one hundred (100) 1-sheet and one hundred (100) half sheets. With such an amount of posters it would be rare to find someone in Baltimore not knowing about SWING HIGH. Special dispay cards were distributed among leading hotels, cigar stands, etc.

In the newspapers, SWING HIGH received far more publicity than the nearest competitor, including front page stories and large headlines on the movie pages. Advertising on a large scale was done in the newspapers.

Pedestrians must now obey the red-and-green traffic lights, and what Elmer Twitchell wants to know is whether he can be arrested for standing too long near a hydrant?

Gingell Organized The Ken Maynard Club For Kid. Biz.

Some good work was turned out by R. Gingell, assistant manager of the State Theatre in Bethesda, Md., on kiddie biz building that merits passing along in these columns.

As Westerns are a big favorite with the kids on Saturday shows, he decided to take their most popular star and form a club to be named after him. The actor selected was Ken Maynard and so was formed the "Ken Maynard Club." Enrollment was open to all children under fifteen years of age, and they more than flocked to join.

A special bulletin board of one-sheet size was placed in the lobby and on it was tacked all items of note regarding the club and the coming attractions. Special buttons plugging the organization were given to all of the juvenile members and in this manner the house received a lot of publicity since the buttons also carried the name of the theatre. This is a slant on the kiddie business angle that it would pay you to look into. Of course, we have passed along similar ideas many times, but it may be that a club formed after the name of a certain Western star will be just the medium you are looking for. In the past we have given you accounts of Mickey Mouse Clubs, Tom Mix Clubs, Rin-Tin-Tin Clubs, Joy Clubs and all of the other ideas used by showmen throughout the country to boost business, so you should know just how to go about putting an idea of this sort across.

We want to thank Mr. Gingell for letting us see what he is accomplishing down there in Bethesda in the lines of show merchandising and we are sure that his kindness is more than appreciated.

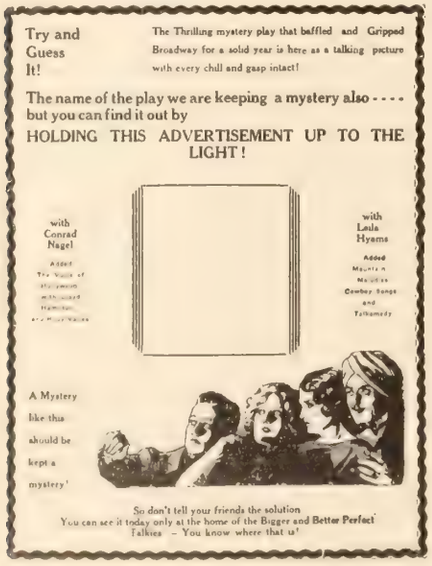
MANAGERS and PROJECTIONISTS Co-operation Will Pay

If there was ever a time when working together was more important than now, to the manager and projectionist, then we can't recall it at this moment. But the fact is, perfect harmony is a vital necessity in this era of sound pictures. Fact is, perfect harmony is a vital necessity in this era of sound pictures.

The slogan of the Projection Advisory Council is, "Progress Through Understanding," and although the slogan and the Council were organized primarily for the projectionists, it behooves the managers to take notice of the same things.

Managers should know many things about the sound equipment in their theatres. They should be acquainted with the major causes for trouble, where to look first if the sound goes dead, what it is all about, etc. And they should, likewise, know something about projection. A good manager is a man who knows enough about everything in his theatre without necessarily being an expert in anything.



Working together properly with the men in your booth brings about a closer feeling between you. It will prompt the men up there to do their utmost, and then some, to make your theatre and their booth the finest in town.

Raise Your Hats To McGeachie For This Novel Advt.

Again we have to hand it to those Canadian showmen for turning out ads that would make a mummy throw off its swaddling clothes and proceed to the theatre. From the way these showmen are progressing in their newspaper advertising it looks as though it won't be long before they occupy a lot of space held by some of our go-getters in the States.

The ad we are reproducing here was turned out by W. P. McGeachie, manager of the Algoma Theatre in Saulte Ste. Marie, Ont., Canada, and take it from us he knows his onions when it comes to selling them along this line. The white space in the center of the ad, when held up to the light was seen to contain the words "The 13th Chair." He has inserted so much novelty in his ad that he decided even to leave out the name of the theatre. Study this ad carefully and we'll guarantee that when you have a chance to use it in connection with a future picture that you'll be more than surprised by the interest it causes.

Then when a showman can use an endorsement from his competitor in town, that, too, is showmanship. McGeachie did it on "Sunny Side Up." The manager of the local house witnessed a preview of the picture and told him that it was the finest picture he had ever seen. The next day McGeachie broke with an ad in the newspapers which carried a heading stating that "The Princess Theatre Speaks" and underneath carried the testimonial of the rival manager. This, of course, was done with the consent of his rival, with whom he has always carried on the friendliest relations. Another line that he used in an ad "Crowds Tell The Story Of A Good Show" will, we believe, be found useful by some of our members so we hasten to pass it along.

When he turns out work like this we don't doubt but that he wants to pass it along to his fellow showmen all over the world. So what better medium can you use "W. P." than the Managers' Round Table Club and for that reason we look toward receiving a lot more of your novel work. And by the way, slip our regards to Jack Allan will you, and tell him we'd like him to inject a little pep juice into anyone in his district who doesn't seem to be keeping up to tap.

Boss—"What does this mean? Your brother just called up and said you were sick and wouldn't come to work today."

Here's A Trio Of N'spaper Ads From Bair's Collection

Holding back on E. E. Bair's work is like keeping quiet on a hot tip on a gold-plated stock, but the press of work at Club headquarters in getting the Anniversary Edition off to press necessitated our eliminating a number of good stunts from our live-wire members until such time as we had room for them. So here's what "E. E." has been doing.

Being an expert in making up advertising copy, it is only fitting that when we receive examples of this showman's work along these lines we pass them on. There is no use in our making a lot of explanations on the ads and picking out the highlights because we know that if you study them closely you can see how well "He" knows his town. Especially is this seen in the "Big Time" ad where he uses the line "Stepin Fetchit Has Charge of the Seals." He also uses a cut of the colored comedian. All this tends to make us aware of the fact that the sepia entertainer has clicked before in the town.

In the other ads, too, "HE" has followed out the same angle. This slant is invaluable for showmen who are located in towns or communities where they come in daily contact with their patrons. We don't doubt but that Bair can tell you who Mrs. Smith's favorite actor is and who Mr. Smith likes along the actress line. And if he knows one or two, he knows them all. And that point is evident in the ads. It would pay you, too, to study your patrons' likes and dislikes. It's no task that will take a lot of special labor or anything. NOTE YOUR AUDIENCE'S REACTIONS TO PLAYERS IN YOUR PICTURES AND NEXT TIME YOU PLAY SOMEONE WHO CLICKED IN A FORMER PICTURE PLAY HIM UP IN THE NEW PICTURE.

We want to state that Bair's ads are certainly to be commended. And we're also of the opinion that his newspaper editor thinks so too, because ads of this sort are a credit to any well run paper. Before closing this little story, since we know we'll hear more from "E. E." concerning his showman-like work in a little while, we'd like to say that the "teaser" one-sheet that he turned out for "Hold Everything" was a corker. The sheet was printed in red and white and carried copy which read, "Hold Everything, Folks, Hold Everything." The angle created a lot of comment and worked up plenty of interest in the picture, so that when Bair was ready to release the rest of his campaign he sold them hook, line and sinker.

Extra! Photos Of Rosenthal's Anniv. Party Here At Last

With praise of the fine anniversary party he turned out at the Lyceum Theatre in Duluth, Minn., still ringing in his ears, Morris Rosenthal is due for another story on these pages, because of the fact that the photographs we are showing here did not arrive in time for us to use in conjunction with the complete story of the anniversary.

On the left you see the special front he created for the occasion. The box office had a cut-out beaverboard cake built around it and was painted in attractive colors. This attracted a good deal of attention from passersby and was the subject of a lot of valuable comment. The other photo is the lobby that we endeavored to describe in our issue of May 30, in which we recounted Morris's work. By referring back to this article you can obtain a description of it.

The cake in the center of the special display was promoted from a local baker. The first slice was cut by the Mayor of the city, and besides this it was a "golden cake" for the reason that concealed in it were a number of gold pieces. We'd also like you to note the telegrams displayed on the bulletin board, which got in plugs for the anniversary. They were purported to have been sent from Hollywood, with noted movie stars congratulating the theatre on its ninth birthday.

The beauty of Morris's work lies in the fact that he did not have to dig down and throw up a lot of jack for the displays. His well known ingenuity was called into play and that's the result. And take it from us, he has turned out one of the prettiest lobbys of its type seen in many a day. Another thing we want to call your attention to is the corking front cover he sported on his anniversary program. It would pay you to note the copy on it and also the cut, for to our eyes it seems to pack a punch that will sell in any part of the country. The program was simply printed in black on white, but seemed to be much more than just a program, due no doubt to the dignified tone it carried, and the special features it contained on the inner pages.

And the next time he holds us back on photographs, we intend to spell his name wrong. So you'd better be good, Mawruss, and see that the "whole works" arrive intact at Club headquarters.

J. McKoy Received Co-operation From Local Merchants

As usual when James H. McKoy, manager of the Olympia Theatre in Miami, Fla., sets out to put a campaign across he does it in a manner that spells success from the moment he starts. So it was only natural that his campaign in celebration of the fourth anniversary of the theatre should also click.

He dressed up the lobby, the marquee and theatre front with a bunch of flags and pennants that seemed to shout out the fact that it was Anniversary Week. A big birthday cake was placed in the center of the inner lobby all dolled up with candles and fancy icings.

In addition to this cake, one of the local bakeries baked a special four layer one and placed it in their spacious windows together with a sign announcing that slices of it would be given away at the theatre. Another card informed the readers that tickets to the theatre would be given to those estimating, nearest correctly, the weight of the cake. The estimating contest was also announced on slips of paper which were wrapped about every loaf of bread sold. The papers plugged the anniversary pictures and playdates, also.

Through a tie-up with a candy manufacturer McKoy was enabled to have them make up a special Anniversary Week package which they plugged with the announcement that every eighth box would contain a ticket to the theatre. This tie-up netted him special window displays in the stores selling the candy and he certainly made good use of his stills to plug the pictures and the week.

All of the florists in town were represented in the foyer of the theatre in the form of baskets of flowers. The baskets were placed on tables and carried credit lines for the florists as well as congratulations to the theatre. The newspapers came through nicely with stories on the various angles and the complete success of McKoy's work was seen in the crowds of people during the week.

Being one of our real active members it is needless for us to request that this showman keep us posted on his future activities because we know he is more than interested.

"ALL FUZZY EDGED"

We recall the story about the school teacher who, becoming provoked because one of the youngsters in the class gave repeated wrong answers, shook the youngster for several minutes and then told him to go to his seat and "try to see things a little more clearly."

And, so the story goes, as a result of that shaking, everything the kid looked at for the rest of that day had a fuzzy edge. The words on the black-board, the printing in his speller, the problems in his mathematics book, and everyone of the other children in the class.

And, this poor youngster must have thought: "If shaking me for five minutes produces a fuzzy edge to everything I look at, how can I be expected to see things clearer?"

Which is typical of the way some of our esteemed bosses are inclined to do things when they set out to make their divisions the "best" on the chain.

Kinda funny, thought the kid, and damned peculiar think we.

Instead of showing a person the right way from the wrong, they start out to shake everything, including our enthusiasm and pep, and then expect us to do things better and with fewer mistakes.

Seems to us that men of that kind are always seeing things with fuzzy edges, else why can't they see the truth and facts clearer themselves?

Or perhaps they are suffering from a constant case of Superiority Complex. They have so sold themselves that they are smarter than the next man, that they begin to believe it, too.

In their cases the opposite results might be achieved by using the same "shaking" methods. It may clear the fuzzy edge that follows them around all the time, so that they will see clearly their own shortcomings.

SAM RINZLER—MASTER SHOWMAN!

—He Gives "His Boys" All the Breaks—

By proving he was not too old to learn himself, Sam Rinzler convinced, without lecture or dunning, every man on his division that they too could learn and they were keen to prove it to him by actions and not alibis.

What I want to know is:—what kind of a spell did Sam Rinzler cast over everyman in his division? You can't tell me otherwise. Or perhaps, he gives 'em something to drink that makes 'em that way. And then again, yes, I think I've hit the nail on the head this time: HE KNOWS AND UNDERSTANDS MEN.

And how——!

What's that you ask? Who is this guy Rinzler?

Well, as far as my memory serves me at this moment, he started way back in the old Nickleodeon days when theatres were more of a gag than a business. That, immediately, makes him an honest-to-goodness pioneer, and we have so many making a claim for that distinction, and so few deserving of it, that it really constitutes a revelation when we uncover someone actually in that class.

And he kept at it, not as a fad or a fancy, but as a business, and if you doubt his success in the small circuit racket, just ask anybody about the chain he and an associate operated in Brooklyn. I can remember several of them and they were all successful money-makers long after, so-called, competition came into the territory and started to murder the community. What could be called their crowning achievement was the erection and operation of the beautiful Congress Theatre, and you would have to travel far to beat it from every angle.

But, we'll risk the charge of being a rotten story teller and jump the clock to the time when he sold out his circuit to Fox and, although entitled to a well-earned rest and vacation, consented to take over the supervision of the entire Brooklyn division. If my guessing apparatus is not too far out of gear, I think there were some forty houses under his charge.

Back about a year ago when the Metropolitan Circuit started actually functioning, many strange things were happening, and to this day I can't for the life of me understand why they pulled some of the funny things they did pull. But then, they were in a position to know and I was not, so that's that. At any rate, things kept humming along with a word or a whisper dropping here and there, and finally some of the boys whom I knew rather well started to stop in and tell me about the outfit they were working for. But what they told me was not nearly as interesting as the constant expressions: "Rinzler is certainly a peach." Or, "Gee, Chick, it's a pleasure to have a man like Rinzler for a boss."

You know, after a while those lines begin

All criticism and no praise, not only makes Jack a dull boy, but takes valuable brains and padlocks them to the loss and detriment of the whole organization. Give a man a break and he'll give you results.

Sam Rinzler

to crawl under your skin and especially so here in New York where many a theatre executive could well afford a little schooling in the art of running theatres and men. Then I heard about a fellow who needed a little encouragement, maybe down in the mouth from some trouble or other, or perhaps he was discouraged about his house not going over so well in spite of his best efforts. Those were the boys whom this guy Rinzler played around with. Gave them a chance to prove their mettle in houses where they were better fitted. Slapped them on the back, so to speak, and made them feel that they had nothing to worry about so long as they gave their best and stuck to their guns.

It has been proven, beyond all shadow of doubt, that if you treat a man like a human being he will give you everything he has in him to further the interests of his theatre and his circuit.

In other words, he gave as much attention to the individual as he gave to his division and the result was inevitable; they were for him to a man. And he managed to instill the same ideas into his immediate assistants. They too were working under him with the same thought in mind; give the manager every break possible. No wonder he built on a solid foundation a structure and organization that would be hard to beat anywhere. It spelt success from every angle.

The more recent reorganization and shake-up (if you want to call it that) ended with Rinzler taking over the Queens and Long Island division, so that at this moment he has over eighty houses under his wing and we don't believe we are divulging any Masonic secrets when we say that those eighty are the biggest profit-makers of the whole Metropolitan Circuit. They deserve to be with every man in the outfit so thoroughly sold on the circuit and their boss that they work like Trojans for him.

But I'll hop the cycle of time again and come up to the more recent incidents which prompted me to tell this story.

Despite all the ohanges taking place in the outfit, and the excitement for a while has everyone guessing, he never, for one moment, forgot "his boys" and kept right on planning for the continued success of his division and the happiness of the manager's frame of mind. Now hold on to your seats; he just put the finishing touches to a plan whereby every manager on the circuit will get a week's vacation with full pay. Now that statement may not sound nearly as important as it looks, but take it from me, and we are in a pretty good position to know, it means putting over a tough idea because we doubt whether any thought was further from the minds of the "big shots" than giving the hired help a vacation.

But that was not all, after breaking the good news to the "gang" he told them that for a start-off this year, every assistant would be allowed an abbreviated week, meaning from Monday to Friday, after the house manager returned from his vacation. And again we say that as simple as it all sounds, it really represents a master move on behalf of the men behind the guns. They sure need a week of rest and relaxation even if most of them spend it sitting in a theatre looking at the screen. At least the responsibilities of their work will be off their shoulders for one solid week and they don't have to worry about their jobs either. They can enjoy that week absolutely assured that their jobs and theatres will be there awaiting them on their return.

And, before we bring this little tale to a close we would have you know that Sam Rinzler put into active practice a phrase that has become rather crummy. Namely, the old baloney about "promotion in the ranks." Yes, I know, you've heard it before, and it always ended up with this boss or that boss' friend or relation getting the good houses or jobs. But in this case it is in actual practice and working so well that a recent attempt to pull one of Rinzler's boys away to another outfit at more money brought an emphatic "NO, thank you." The present policy, so far as his division is concerned, is: assistants to managers, manager to supervisors, etc., etc.

Our editorial this week features "The Human Side" of life and we must be frank enough to say that Sam Rinzler rates the classification of being a man among men and a leader of manpower not excelled by any individual in show-business today, and one who knows "the human side." We deem it both a pleasure and a privilege to dedicate this unsolicited little story about him and can only re-echo the words of the boys working under him:

"More Power to That Master Division Supervisor, Samuel Rinzler."

Try showing appreciation instead of constantly complaining and finding fault and you will notice an immediate turn for better operation of the theatre. It's a plan that has rarely failed and the exceptions are mighty few.

Beauty Revues, Free Radios, Etc. Form Nellis' Peppy Work

This is the time of year when style and beauty revues are all the rage and many up-to-the-minute managers who feel that ther house is specially suited for the presentation of one of these revues are hastening to take advantage of the stunt.

One of our showmen from Indiana engineered one recently that went over to big box office receipts. The showman under discussion is none other than R. L. Nellis, manager of the Von-Ritz Theatre in Bedford Indiana.

He tied-up with the local newspaper and they agreed to co-operate to the fullest extent with him in putting the revue across, as a local girl was to be selected to represent Miss Bedford at the final state event to be held in Indianapolis during June. Nellis then promoted the assistance of the man handling the revue for the state. The expenses of everything were borne by the Indiana State Beauty Pageant Committee sponsors for all the revues.

The cast of the revue was selected from local entrants and they were outfitted from head to foot by local merchants. In addition to this the merchants ran three pages of co-operative ads announcing that they would furnish the winner with a complete wardrobe. The special ads made a hit with the newspaper and as a consequence they came through with more publicity. As an added attraction Nellis arranged to have Miss America of 1929 presented on the stage of the theatre. All of these angles tended to complete the success of the campaign and it is small wonder that new records for business were created. And the cut will give you an idea of how the local paper came through with publicity on it.

Promoting beauty revues are only a side-line though for Nellis. He even finds time to give away a radio free and engineering a campaign that was a knockout, complete in every detail. As most of our members are aware of how these radio stunts are worked we won't attmept to go into a description of it. However, Nellis used a new slant as a follow-up that we are sure the Club members would like a line on. After the radio had been presented to one of the patrons he made up a special letter and sent it out through the mailing list. The theatre expressed regret because the reader of the letter did not win the radio but stated that a consolation prize in the form of an offer of a forty dollar discount on the same model could be had through the courtesy of the local dealer. We are reprinting a copy of the letter that was sent out so that you may file it for future reference, because this will eliminate that ever present evil whereby giving away the radio to one there's a lot of people disappointed.

Dear Patron:

Last week we presented a Model 92 Majestic Radio to Mr. Earl Bell, 1705 S. Street, Bedford, Indiana.

This naturally meant disappointment to you and our several thousand patrons, who, like you, felt sufficient interest in the beautiful instrument to hand in their names anl addresses.

We have this much good news for you, however: Through a special arrangement with C. & B. Electric Company, Greystone Hotel Bldg., Bedford, Indiana, we are enabled to distribute a limited number of aluable favors somewhat in the nature of consolation prizes.

Fortunately one of these favors has been allotted to you, and we in make it a lot easier for you to own a Model 92 Majestic Radio.

The enclosed coupon accepted by the C. & B. Electric Company of this city will be considered as a credit of $40.00 on the purchase of that particular model Majestic Radio in accordance with its terms. We hope you will avail yourself of this advantage.

Please permit us to add here that we have appreciated your patronage during the Majestic Radio Contest and solicit your further patronage, and at the same time we will use every effort possible to present to you only clean and up-to-date programs that will entertain every patron of our theater. Of special interest to patrons of the Von-Ritz Theater will be the coming of the All-Talking, Singing and Dancing Stupendous, Spectacular Wonder Show of the season, "HIT THE DECK," starring Jack Oakie and Polly Walker. A flaming Pageant of Song and Dance with scenes in Technicolor.

Very truly yours,

This angle is a great good-will bet. And it more than proved its worth to Nellis.

We are very glad to hear from this hustling showman again as we had somehow lost sight of him during the time he was getting set but now he will be represented more than ever.

No story about Mr. Rinzler would be complete without mention of his capable assistant, Freddie Stein, but we'll reserve our comment about Fred for another issue in the not too distant future. Maybe a little tale about assistant division managers could reveal other interesting sidelights.

ANNA-BELL GOES A-VISITING!

Among the most welcome—and when we say welcome, we mean welcome—visitors to Club headquarters was none other than one of the Club's most valued members, Miss Anna Bell Ward, Assistant Managing Director of the Phoenix Amusement Theatres of Kentucky.

The greatest tribute we can pay the fraternal spirit of the Round Table Club is the friendly and interesting manner in which the members from out of town stop in to say hello. They always make it a point to visit us regardless of how short the stay or how busy they may be.

We feel that Miss Ward will continue as an active member and booster of the Club, and we look forward with keen pleasure to some of the information she will convey to us via the Club pages.

And how we would like to take advantage of that hospitable invitation to visit her in Kentucky is nobody's business. Maybe we'll get a chance and drop in. What a surprise that's going to be, but we won't say for whom.

It was a decided privilege to meet Miss Ward personally, and if any of you male contenders for the title of "showmen" want some live tips, just watch what this "showoman' has to say about running theatres and advertising them.

TRAILER NOTE

In last week's issue we carried an article "Analyzing The Trailer" from Frank Whitbeck's, "Here's How." In view of the fact that the article created so much comment we want each and every member and reader to understand our position regarding, not only this particular article, but any others which may appear.

The pages of the Round Table Club are open for discussions of every subject pertaining to the operation of theatres. One man's opinion is as valuable and important as the next. If Whitbeck tackled the trailer situation from his viewpoint, then anyone disagreeing with that slant is at liberty to have his say whenever they want to sit down and put it on paper for publication.

Instead of trying to sidetrack these differences of opinion, we would much rather encourage them. Such debates, thru our pages, are bound to bring about a better understanding of the manifold problems encountered in show business.

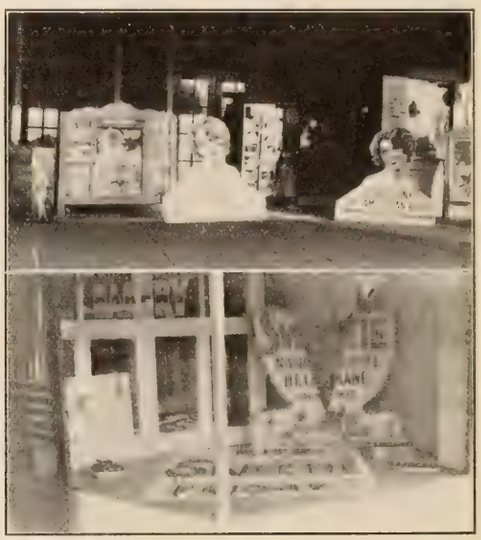
We Say That 'W. L.' Deserves To Have A Band Of His Own

One of the things that keeps the Capitol Theatre of Steubenville, Ohio, in the limelight is that good-will that the house secures through the efforts of William L. Hendricks, the managing director.

An annual event at the Capitol is the extending of invitations to the inmates of a Home for the Aged, requesting their presence at the theatre. This year the film was "Light of Western Stars," so Hendricks decided to give it a plug along with the publicity he was certain of receiving in connection with his annual stunt.

He received the co-operation of the local Rotary Club and was enabled to secure a number of cars to be used for transporting the inmates of the charitable institution to the theatre. He then promoted the services of the local high school band. The band numbered sixty musicians and all were uniformed. Banners were placed on the cars in the procession, and a police escort accompanied the cavalcade. The photo will give you an idea of the flashy parade that was the direct result of Hendrick's promotions. They marched through the entire business section of the town, and stopped at the city hall, where the band rendered a couple of numbers to the enthusiastic approval of the Mayor and then proceeded to the theatre.

The added touch of showmanship, in the form of the parade, was the subject of much comment during the run of the picture and the local newspaper devoted some valuable space to it. Hendricks displayed some corking showmanship in another angle that he used. A circus came into town on the opening day of the picture and it looked like tough sledding for Hendricks, but instead of regarding it as opposition he took the bull by the horns, went over into enemy territory and was able to effect a tie-up whereby he agreed to run a special show on Sunday evening, (Theatre ticket selling prohibted on Sunday) for about five hundred of their personnel. In return for this the circus gladly offered to place banners about the "lot," hand out handbills on his picture, and assist him in any way possible. Hendricks retaliated by flashing a special slide, plugging the circus, on the screen. Incidentally, on his Sunday show, the circus owners insisted that they be permitted to defray the expenses involved by operators, etc.



Showmanship of this sort would click in any part of the world and we must certainly congratulate Hendricks on the work he is doing out in Steubenville. And say, "W. L.," we published Howard Waugh's "facial blueprint" not so long ago, and from rumors that have drifted into Club headquarters he has received a number of movie offers, one to act as "spokes"-man in "The Wagon Trail." So when you shoot us in your picture include a resume of your show career to date, just in case Oke?

Judging By This Oscar Could Tie-Up Almost Anything

Though we haven't a picture of him on hand we want to introduce Earle F. Oscar to the Club. Oscar is the manager of the Ritz Theatre in Athens, Alabama, and just how much of a showman he is we are going to show you in this article.

When the theatre played "Glorifying the American Girl," he set to work and tied-up the local merchants on a full-page ad in the newspaper, that was a corker. The layout was made very attractive by the insertion of stills which plugged the various stars in the picture. The theatre's name predominated on the entire page, there being a streamer on both top and bottom. The entire make-up was constructed so as to sell and we have no doubt but that it certainly did.

A few more of his activities may be seen in the photographs which accompany this article. The first one shows the cut-outs he used in front of the theatre to plug the picture and the other photo shows a window tie-up on "Sweetie." Oscar's showmanship comes into view when it is learned that due to the absence of a candy store in the town, he secured a lot of lump sugar from the local bakery and arranged his display around that idea, with the ultimate result that everyone looking at it expressed a "sweet" desire to see the picture.

We want to welcome Oscar into the Club and we feel that since he has shown us by his first contribution that he is going to be active it is unnecessary for us to say more about him at present. However, Earle, we would like a photograph and a little "dope" on yourself so that we can give you a real introduction.

Show Selling Tips? This Story Is Made To Order For You

If medals for atmospheric fronts were being awarded we believe that every showman around Florida would be in line for one. It seems to us that the live-wires down South have been represented enough times to fill a couple of books of their own. No matter what the picture is there's bound to be a good front made for it. We could name a large number of showmen around Miami, Palm Beach, Tampa, Jacksonville, etc., who are "aces" at turning out knockout displays but just at present this article is to be devoted to Earle Holden, manager of the Fairfax Theatre in Miami, Florida, who is one of the showmen in line for a medal.

The corking front we are showing with this article was created by Earle's house artist, (Phil Gunn, we believe) under the showman's expert supervision. Since Earle did not want the war motif predominating, it was kept down as much as possible. The photo on the left will show you the "symbolic figures" of soldiers that were used to attract attention. Selling catchlines were worked around them. The walls of the inner lobby were covered entirely by beaverboard, depicting the desolation of the battle fields. No attempt was made to show action scenes.

The inner lobby was used as an advance plug as well as a current one. Inside the theatre, a machine gun nest was erected on the foyer. The guns, borrowed from the local American Legion, were grouped about a one sheet carrying the critics' comments on the picture. During the run of the picture these machine guns were placed on the sidewalk.

And incidentally, the sand bags placed about the front of the theatre happen to be cement bags filled with sawdust, borrowed from a local cement factory and turned inside out so that they could be returned "clean." A trip to a saw mill supplied the "fillings." The sawdust filled bags gave a realistic effect and were easier and cleaner to handle.

An angle that did a lot toward selling the picture to Miami, was the special preview that Earle arranged for local notables, the press, American Legion heads, consuls of all countries, and war veterans. A card was handed them for their comments, and these were pasted on a large display board which was placed on the main street of the city. ALL NEWSPAPER ADVERTISING WAS DEVOTED TO PRESS COMMENTS AND THE COMMENTS OF LOCAL PEOPLE.

The novelty injected in Earle's campaign went a long way toward putting the picture across at his house and we are sure that our members, after reading this article, will agree with us that he knows showmanship from A to Z.

If the nation's plumbers are wide-awake they'll get together and hire Chic Sale to write a book that will do for their profession what his first two volumes did for the small town lumber business. — Life

Another Canadian Showman Turns Out An Ad That Sells

Every once in a while we have passed along samples of the advertising turned out by our Canadian members and we have come to regard this phase of their work as a very important part of their show merchandising due to the care that is taken in layout. To-day's contribution for high honors in the newspaper advertising field comes from Chris Georgas, manager of the Classic Theatre in Owen Sound, Ont.

For his showing of "Honey," at the Classic, Chris turned out this classic of advertising that merits reproduction here. That he knows his public is evident in the way he has taken considerable care to plug both "Honey" and "Come Out Of the Kitchen." The latter is the well-known popular farce comedy of recent years that met with the public's cordial approval, and from which "Honey" was adapted. A tie-up with local dealers was the means of securing ads for this page. As is usual in stunts of this sort, a contest was run with it. This consisted of a "Broken Letter" gag.

The letter "H" was cut up and inserted in all of the dealers' ads, both as an assurance of having the ads read and to stimulate interest. Free tickets were awarded to the first twenty correct solutions submitted. In the ad you will also note a medium designed to attract the women, in the form of a recipe for "Honey Date Pudding," found in a cook book used by local housewives. This is the first example of this sort that we have seen in some time and we want to hand Chris a compliment on it. And by the way, he received a very nice letter of commendation from the manager of the Paramount Exchange in Toronto commending him for his "Honey" campaign. Though the real news lies in the fact that his showmanship was proven by the capacity business the house did during the run of the picture.

By passing along this account to us, Chris automatically elevates himself to a top position among the active Canadian members and we know that he is going to make his future work so good that he will remain among the leaders.

THINK THIS OVER!

When a man quits a job and starts all over at some new place, he sacrifices his seniority and loses months or even years.

It seems to me that many a young fellow, worried over some incidental slight or some transient problem, quits a job just when it is beginning to offer a real opportunity to him. If he could only see the matter from the company's point of view! If he could only restrain his impetuous temper and wait for things to develop normally!

Rome was not built in a day. Promotion does not come all at once. No company that is worth much acts hastily; always advancement comes deliberately. Why not have faith in this principle?

NEWSPAPER READERS!

By EARLE M. HOLDEN, Mgr.,
Publix-Fairfax Theatre
Miami, Fla.

Earle Holden has furnished us with many important and interesting articles. In this, his latest contribution, he touches on a subject not generally looked upon as important by many showmen the world over. Follow Holden's logic and see if you don't adopt a different slant on your newspaper readers. "Chick."

Take Time and Care

As much time and care should be devoted to the selection of the proper reader for your newspaper publicity, as you spend on laying out your advertising. Because it must be taken into consideration where people will skip your ad they will probably read your news item of the day. I do not think that the term "reader" should be applied to a story in regards to your theatre, if you are situated in a city, whose papers co-operate to the extent that they give you daily space.

Any little item about patent medicines can be a reader, and each and every article that you place in a newspaper in regards to your attractions or to your theatre should be real live news and written as such.

The average newspaper reader tires very quickly of reading amusement news daily that is of a stereotyped nature, and articles that carry the sameness day in and day out with the results that many of them do not bother to look at the items on the amusement page, or theatre items should they be published under a heading in the newspaper.

Write Them Yourself

For this reason the press sheet should be gone over very carefully before you grab up a pair of scissors and snip out any old thing. A good plan to carry out would be to cast aside the press sheet entirely and plan and write your own news story. I have found this plan the best in the long run.

And there are several reasons why this should be done. In many instances the press sheet from the exhibitor is often prepared and printed even before the picture has been released and in many times before the final scenes have been made. This means that many items find their way into the press sheet that would lead a reader into getting a wrong impression on the type of story pertaining to that particular picture. For instance, just this week I had occasion to glance very carefully over a press sheet on a coming attraction and selected one story in particular which was read very carefully. This press sheet story stated that "there were hundreds of scenes in natural colors." Prior to the time that I read the story I had the opportunity of seeing the picture in question and there were just two scenes in natural colors. The average reader would have interpreted the story, had it been published in the papers, to have meant that almost the entire picture was in natural colors, as to their way of thinking "hundreds of scenes" would have covere dquite a lot of ground.

Screening Is Important

Much benefit can be derived in the preparation of your theatre stories for the newspapers if you get the opportunity of screening your picture in advance. By doing this you will have first hand information in regards to your picture and you should then be able to sit down to a typewriter and knock out an accurate message for the public, one that will tell the truth and not mislead them.

Besides, much good can be accomplished for you if in your news story you put some institutional copy and also be sure and make mention of the added attractions on the same program, but all this must be written in a snappy newsy manner, and not as you would write copy for an advertisement. The time of performances is also very important. In other words, place in your news item everything that you would carry in your ad, but take great care in preparing it, so that it will not find it's way into the editor's waste basket, but instead in a prominent position in the paper.

Watch What You Print

If time does not permit you to sit down and think out your own story and you must use a story from the press book, that particular story should be closely analyzed, and all material that might mislead the public should be crossed out. The time when you think you can bluff the public with some hot news about something that is not in the picture, has passed, and the public wants the truth just as much in your theatre news as they would expect to find in any other story of timely interest that paper might publish for the day.

You can still go another step towards the proper preparation of your news story by typing it out on paper, this even applies if you use an item from the press sheet. Type it neatly and double space it. The editor of any paper appreciates copy handed in in this manner, and it will save many an eye strain for the linotype operator when he places your copy into type. Any copy clipped that has already been printed is hard to read, and it is items of this kind that many times end up in the waste basket.

Most any editor of any paper realizes that motion picture news is valuable news, provided of course that it is real news. This is evidenced by the fact that motion picture magazines have the largest circulation on magazine stands, and any timely items in the daily press are always welcomed by motion picture fans, especially women readers. But it is up to the individual exhibitor to keep his news real news and not just a lot of hash that might be clipped from some press sheet which was prepared by a press agent who probably wrote the same story for some other picture, merely changing a few words.

Good-Will Was the Idea Behind This Stunt of Carlson's

Some fine good-will was secured for his house recently by G. W. Carlson, manager of the Peoples' Theatre in Superior, Wisconsin.

Carlson tied-up with the local paper, the Evening Telegram, and the paper agreed to publicize and sponsor a special matinee to be given to all of the Gold Star Mothers in the vicinity, as a plug for "Seven Days Leave."

The angle went over very well in the town with the paper reaping benefits too. The front page of the newspaper carried a big story extending an invitation to the war hero mothers as well as mentioning the title, theme of the picture and the playdates.

This stunt is only one of the many that Carlson has pulled successfully out there in Superior, for he is by no means a stranger to us, and we know that the future will bring more accounts of his work that we can pass along. How about it, "G. W."? You know we're always interested in seeing what the other live-wires all over the country are doing.

Manager—"So you think you are qualified for a job as floorwalker? What experience have you had?"
Applicant—"I have a pair of twins at home that have just finished teething."—The Kablegram

Stewart Tells Us That He Likes To Keep Front Alive

Here's another fine front. This one is the work of C. H. Stewart, manager of the Rialto Theatre in San Antonio, Texas, and when we get through describing it to you (since the picture from which the reproduction is made was small) you'll see why Tucker is one of the leading showmen in the city.

Being well aware of the necessity of stressing action in his work, since he has found that by doing so his patrons and passersby pay lots more attention to what he is merchandising, Stewart arranged to place special "dancing dolls" under the marquee with which to plug the picture. These "dancing dolls" we believe are operated by wires concealed near the doorman or in the cashier's booth. Another form of "dancing doll" is the cut-outs of featured players, usually in musical comedy pictures or farces, that are mounted along the side-walk in the style we showed you not so long ago with a story and picture concerning Miss Anna Bell Ward's use of the stunt. Piano wire is used to effect the animation of these.

On some of his shows, Stewart endeavors to keep his whole display animated and as his house is the only one in San Antonio to use this as a regular feature, persons come for miles around to get a look at it. With a contribution like this coming from his district we feel that "C. E." is going to keep it up and become a very active member and contributor of the Round Table Club and we hope that when he sends along his next activity he'll include a photo of himself.

G. Banniza Chalks Up A Couple More Valuable Angles

Every picture that is booked into the Princess Theatre in Decatur, Ala., is sure to be in for a plug of some sort due to the fact that G. P. Banniza handles the exploitation campaigns as well as the house.

From time to time we have shown you many photos of what he is accomplishing down in his neck of the woods and we are sure that you will agree with us that when it comes to showmanship he is right in front with a big bag of tricks that will be found to be productive of both good-will and publicity.

In the photo layout that accompanies this article will be seen some of the most recent stunts engineered by him on attractions at his house. On "The Virginian," an atmospheric street ballyhoo in the form of an old-fashioned stage coach was used to excite public interest in the production. Men, arrayed in cowboy attire of frontier days were drafted into service to drive the coach and Banniza added more atmosphere to the angle by having the stage coach carry passengers, who too, were costumed in the dress of the days when Buffalo Bill was a synonym for frontier heroism.

Most all of the Club members know Banniza by his stunt of running a special banner across the street in front of his house. In one of the photos you will see that he is still using this all-important angle and giving "Rio Rita" a plug that would sell it to anyone coming along the street whether they be motorists or pedestrians. On "Untamed" he made up special art work for the front of the house and endeavored to keep the jungle effect before the public by having his display conform to the jungle locale of the picture. This angle was found to be an excellent slant for attracting more than passing interest.

In another photo you can note what he did to sell Greta Garbo's first talking picture in Decatur. Where he gets his pull to erect signs like this is still a mystery to us but we know that this was the first time that advertising matter of any sort had been placed in the small park. The sign board, itself, was so big that the park was dwarfed by comparison and anyone, no matter from what part of the town they approached the park were sure to be hit with "Garbo Talks!"

If space would permit we could go on and tell you of the many other marvelous ballyhoos he created for various pictures but for the present we will have to content ourselves with this brief account as we know that "G. P." will be represented here again with some more of his up-to-date work.

Reintroducing Our Charter Members!

In response to many requests over a period of months, we finally got around to compiling a list of our Charter Members, together with the city and state in which they were located at the time they were enrolled. Many of them have changd positions or locations, so this list is not correct from the angle of addresses. It will be gratifying to note that almost everyone of these Charter Members are still our most active and interested contributors, which in itself speaks mighty high for our organization. If by any chance we have overlooked anyone who feels their name belongs on this list, start your kicking now and we'll correct the error if your viewpoint and ours jibe. "Chick"

MANAGERS' ROUND TABLE CLUB

RITZ PATTER

By ADOLPH PINCUS

Manager Ritz Theatre, Lyndhurst, N. J.

This is one of a series of humorous "chats" used by Pincus in his theatre's program. If they appeal to you, go ahead and use them with his compliments.

Every one you meet these days has a cold in the head, and if there is anything that is annoying it is just that, particularly the sneezy kind.

But there seems to be a significance in the various kinds of sneezes one hears, and you can almost tell the type of an individual by the sneeze.

Now, for instance, there's that "TZZ" sneeze, like a worm, well that's the shy retiring little damsel that is often seen but never heard from, and the "GRUFFF," that the type of a man, big and fat and plenty of money—and when you bear "Who Is She," you can bet it's some cake eater, with a French Beret stuck on his head, a leather jacket—the shirt open at the neck—no tie on, and out of work for two years—the "Kerchoe" sneeze generally emanates from the poor sucker that has to get up at seven in the morning no matter how he feels and go out and earn the family needs—he's too busy to develop a high-class sneeze.

Have you ever sat in a restaurant opposite a hay fever patient, while eating a plate of soup, and have him burst forth in a series of nose detonations that rock the walls, and when you leave you look like a leopard—it's a pleasure.

And advice—every one suggests a different remedy—you take so many pills, that when you walk around they rattle so loud, you sound like a crap game.

The safest way to cure any ills is to forget them—get a change of mind—and the surest way to do that is See a Good Talking Picture amid comfortable surroundings—you can't go wrong at the RITZ.

Sullivan's Glider Display Created A Lot Of Interest

Current events and timely topics often furnish showmen with mediums whereby they can tie in the attraction they are selling. And so when H. C. Sullivan, manager of the Palace Theatre in Gary, Indiana played "The Sky Hawk" at his house he decided to cash in on Captain Frank Hawk's recent cross country glider flight.

He promoted the one and only glider obtainable in that section of the country from a local aircraft corporation, and assembled it in the theatre lobby. He then set out to make a display that would enhance the selling power of it. He secured a lot of stills and grouped them about the glider, together with printed matter which heralded the progress of aviation and by the time he finished he had a display that could well be placed in a museum.

The display created a lot of interest and comment and it even brought people into the theatre for the express purpose of seeing what kind of a plane Hawks made his flight in. Once in the theatre lobby they were as good as sold. The lobby displays on "The Sky Hawk," other than the glider, were bound to sell them.

It was only a short time ago that we showed you the fine ballyhoo this showman used for "Three Live Ghosts" and it looks to us as though he intends to continue the good work. Oke "H. C." and remember we want you to keep us posted on what you are going in Gary.

Delis Has Been Responsible For Some Fine Exploitation

It has been some little time since last we heard of the work being turned out by George A. Delis, manager of the Olympic Theatre in Steubenville, Ohio, and we were wondering what had happened to him but now that we have this account of a stunt he used on "Vagabond King" we know he's still on the job displaying his regular brand of showmanship.

He inserted a large ad which was made up in the form of a quiz in the local newspaper. The ad was directed to the boys and girls of the town and contained questions on the picture. The questions were inserted in the ad. The plugs for the picture were on the title, stars, technicolor, playdate, dialogue, cast, theatre, etc.

The ad was very cleverly worded and if the correct answers were submitted it was a sure thing that the boy or girl submitting them would know a lot about the picture. This stunt made a big hit with the kids in the town and nearly all of them could be seen going to school with the ad tucked under their arms. For correct answers the contestants received free tickets to the house. The stunt was for children only but there's no doubt but that the parents read about it, too, in an effort to help the kids out.

We would like to point out at this time that this stunt can be used on almost any picture and will be found of great value for securing a lot of word-of-mouth publicity and good-will. We want to thank Delis for passing this along and also to let him know that we are glad to note he is continuing the activity which characterized his merchandising in the past.

Some Examples Of Showmanship From The West Indies

From all over the world we give examples of the way showmen are merchandising their attractions. And not the least of these is Pedro Gelabert, one of the showmen who makes up the theatrical part of Porto Rico in the West Indies.

Though rather handicapped as to exploitation and publicity, they nevertheless turn out some very fine work. In the past we have shown you some examples of the work done by Pedro at the Teatro San Jose as well as that of some of our other members. In the photo we are reproducing below you can see the Spanish pandereta which was used as part of the campaign on "Rio Rita," at the Teatro Broadway.

The pandereta was made of wood, wire and cloth and painted in very attractive colors. Though we are not sure whether pandereta is the Spanish name for tambourine, nevertheless we feel that it is what it is and so far as the stunt goes it can't be beat. As a good many cars pass the theatre the value of the gag as an attention getter was more than proven.

Since we have found that our Porto Rican representatives are very active showmen we know that they will have more accounts of their work presented on these pages in the future. We are always glad to pass along the ideas they use to sell their shows because we feel that the rest of the Club are mighty interested in seeing what the showmen from other countries are doing.

MANAGERS' ROUND TABLE CLUB

Orlove Deserves A Great Big Hand For His Rapid Rise

Starting at 17 years old as an electrician's helper and rising ten years later to the position of purchasing agent for a chain of fifty houses is the enviable reputation established by Louis W. Orlove, of the Uptown Theatre in Milwaukee, Wis.

In 1918 he went to work for the Saxe circuit. The circuit was just branching out and so Orlove came in for a break. He worked hard and faithfully as an electrician's helper for five years. Then Saxe, himself, owner of the circuit, decided that he wanted him as a purchasing agent. He made good at the job and was assigned the purchasing position for all of the houses. About twenty skilled craftsmen came under his direction. Organ repair men, handy men electricians and painters. Their efficiency depended upon Orlove. Only results counted. They would be charged up to him.

He set to work to vindicate Saxe's faith in him and came through with flying colors. Not so long ago Saxe sold out to Fox Midwesco and Orlove went to work for the same outfit. The group now contains fifty houses distributed through Wisconsin, and he is still stepping along giving his circuit the best he can. Not only is he a skilled electrician and purchasing man, but a darn good showman. He handles the Uptown, a big deluxer, in a showmanlike manner. The stage settings and lobby displays that he makes for the houses are considered some of the finest pieces of work in the Middle West and we hope to show you some in the near future.

In order that you may meet this showman and his staff we are showing a photo of the persons who maintain the Uptown theatre. Mr. Orlove may be seen on the left of his cashier. His assistant is on the right. We want to extend this showman a welcome into the Manager's Round Table Club and hope that he will prove a very active member and keep us posted on his work. Oke Louis?

Edwin Carewe, Hollywood movie director and capitalist, was awarded a contract for exclusive rights to buy all wet garbage collected in Dallas by the city. Carewe agreed to start work within ninety days.—Los Angeles Examiner.

"HATS OFF TO HYDE"

It is with great pleasure that we broadcast the glad tidings that Bolivar Hyde, Jr., formerly manager of the Polk Theatre in Lakeland, Fla., has been promoted by the Publix Circuit to City Manager for Montgomery, Ala.

Keep it up, Hyde, you've got the "stuff" and can deliver the goods.

Johnson Shifts To Another House In Oil City—Congrats.

It came as quite a surprise to us to hear that Fred Johnson had resigned his position as manager of the R.K.O. Colonel Drake Theatre in Oil City, Pa. However, after the first surprise was over, we learned that Fred would remain in Oil City as manager of the Latonia Theatre.

As most of the members of the Club know, Fred has always been a live-wire showman and active member of our organization and with a new house to look after we feel that he is going to uncork a lot of novelty angles and examples of showmanship that will prove of mutual benefit to all.

He has followed the show business ever since his 18th birthday, spending many years in the management of theatres in various parts of the country, and also served as manager and advance agent for legitimate shows. He is a native of Kent, Ohio, and it was in that city that he began his career at the old opera house. Before going to Oil City last year he was general manager of the Marietta Amusement Company, handling the circuit houses in Marietta and Cambridge, Ohio, for three years. Previous to that he handled the Weller Theatre at Zanesville for a few years.

Since he has been in Oil City, Fred has been very prominent in church work and club activities and this no doubt will be continued at the new house. One change in policy that will become effective when he assumes charge will be the presenting of two matinee performances instead of one as Fred feels that his showmanship is more than equal to bringing in extra business and the new policy will give shoppers an opportunity to witness an early show.

We want to congratulate Fred on his new job and wish him the best of luck. We know that he is going to continue the fine work that has characterized his show merchandising in the past and also the very active interest he has taken in the Club.

Having silenced firearms, Mr. Maxim announces that he will next endeavor to eliminate noise in industry. And when he finishes that, he might tackle politics.—San Diego Union.

Laugh-A-Minute Is The Record Made By Max Tschauder

Whenever we present an account of Max Tschauder's work there's bound to be a laugh or two concealed somewhere in it, for ever since he's been handling the affairs of the Rivoli Theatre in Beatrice, Neb., his fellow members in the Club have seen some fine examples of showmanship.

This time it was on "Cohens and Kellys" that Max let Beatrice in for a "belly laugh." He engaged a young man dressed in kilts and wearing a vivid red beard to parade the streets of the town. The ballyhoo man carried a Gladstone bag upon which was lettered the plug for the picture and the theatre.

Before sending the young man out on the street, Max provided him with a hundred pennies. Imagine the hilarity occasioned when the McGregor made purchases at various stores in the town and paid for the merchandise with the coppers. Kids followed him wherever he went and this too helped to attract attention.

If they were dealing out medals or gilt edge securities, it's a cinch that this showman would be in line for the one awarded for the best laugh gags pulled. He has so many to his credit now that it would take a couple of years to recount them (or at least two hours.) But listen Max, just the same we want to pass along the new ones and even if we have to make a special page out of them it's oke with us.

MANAGERS' ROUND TABLE CLUB

Tom Kane's Riot Call Netted Him Front Page Space

Is Tom Kane still plugging in Redwood City? You'd think so if you had witnessed the American Legion "riot" call that he engineered not so long ago. According to reports, in order to secure another member to the local post, Tommy "accidentally" happened into the office of a local doctor and a little while later thirty-five legionnaires stormed the doors and demanded admittance. The doctor was taken to the post and immediately inducted into membership.

When the local newspaper heard of it they picked it up and used it as front page news and Tom in this manner secured quite a publicity break. And he received another great one on his ballyhoo for "The Arizona Kid." A stage coach was secured from some place about the town and wonder of wonders was found to be the same one that Brete Harte wrote about in his book. And to top all of this off, Tom managed to secure the services of Dan Woods the very same driver that the author wrote about in connection with the stage coach.

This was newspaper stuff de luxe and Tom more than took advantage of it. In the near future we expect to pass along a photo of this stage coach and the driver in order that you may see the very effective way the stunt was engineered. So for the present we'll have to sign off until we have the photo. Rest assured Tom, that we will be in to see you when we make our contemplated trip to the Coast in a little while and once more breathe some more of that California air.

Bert Levy Takes A Seat Around The Round Table-Oke?

Well, we've another director of publicity on the rolls. This time it's Bert Levy, who tells the world about the Spreckels Theatre in San Diego, Cal.

Bert has been in the game for a good many years so he knows his stuff when it comes to laying out ads and things like that. But in order to prove to those members who declare that "seeing is believing" we are showing a lay-out of the work he turned out for "King of Jazz."

As he played the picture day and date with the Roxy in New York, the press books had not yet been made up and he was handicapped right there. He had absolutely nothing to work from in the way of mats or anything, had to make up his own ads, twenty-four, three sheets and other paper. The black reverse idea in the ads was also carried throughout the lobby display. All boards were in black with white letters and silver flitter. The words, "King of Jazz" were in silver flitter and the word "Colored" in varicolored paint.

You will notice in the ads that stress has been laid in the ads upon John Boles with Whiteman leading. Bert explains this by telling us that Boles is more or less or a local favorite, and that with a true showman's eye toward the future, he is getting in plugs for Boles. Another angle that went across well with the patrons was the program Bert turned out for the picture. It was printed in a "Rhapsody Blue" tone throughout and carried the various numbers in the picture. We are reproducing a photo of it in conjunction with the ad layouts. The programs were sent out in sealed envelopes to a special mailing list, distributed in all of the music stores, copies being inserted with every piece of sheet music or records sold, and were also placed in the mail box of each guest at the local hotels. It also served as an advance herald.

The campaign went over to a big box office smash and the work turned out by Levy did a lot toward swelling the receipts. We want to welcome him into the Club and since he knows Eddie Hitchcock and Sammy Cohen, a couple of other publicists who are on our rolls, we believe he will prove as active as they.

MANAGERS' ROUND TABLE CLUB

'Sarah And Son' Got A Corking Send-Off From Syd. Oshrin

Showmen in neighborhood houses, bucking close opposition, find it necessary often to step out and display some live-wire work that would do credit to any attraction holding a record for merchandising. Such is the case with Sydney Oshrin, manager of the Allerton Theatre in The Bronx, New York.

He found that in order to put "Sarah and Son" over he would have to display some showmanship of the highest calibre and this he did by taking advantage of some recent ideas of the Managers' Round Table Club. As he is rather limited as to the amount of exploitation he can do, considering where his house is located, he decided that a well made cut-out placed in the lobby would do a lot to attract attention. We are showing this cutout in the lay-out of photos we are using.

He introduced a new angle for his house, in the form of a bulletin board carrying the reviews of the New York critics on the picture. The board was headed "Read the Raves," and made a decided hit with the patrons of the house as the crowds stopping to read them attested. On the outside of his house, Syd hung a banner plugging the picture and you can see this banner in the photo, together with his well known street ballyhoo which consists of a large truck drawn by a couple of horses. And you can be sure that when the residents around the vicinity saw the "flashy" twenty-four sheet they more than paid attention to the picture.

As Syd is one of the veteran members of the Club, and one who is always on the alert, it is indeed gratifying to know that his latest efforts met with complete success at the box-office and we are sure that his future ones will too. Keep it up, Syd, and don't forget you're an active member.

Incidentally we had a photo of him which we intended to use in order that the newer members of the Club who haven't met him may see what he looks like, but it was too blurred for reproduction. However, we know that

Customer—"To what do you owe your extraordinary success as a house-to-house salesman?"
Salesman—"To the first five words I utter when a woman opens the door—'Miss, is your mother in?'"—Tit-Bits.

Seel Helped His Newspaper To Sell Book Via Co-op Ad.

Alertness enabled Henry Seel, manager of the Majestic Theatre in Jackson, Miss., to cash in on some free newspaper publicity, to the extent of securing a three column ad free of charge.

It seems that the newspaper had been offering for sale a book titled, "How I Broke Into the Movies" or else one can procure this book by securing three new subscribers to the newspaper.

Inasmuch as Seel knew that one of the sixty life stories of as many movie stars appeared in this book, he sold the newspaper on the idea of a huge ad which might prove mutually beneficial to both concerned.

Current with the showing of Nancy Carroll in "Honey," the three-column by 9 inch ad appeared, reading, "NANCY CARROLL is only one of the many outstanding figures on the screen who will tell you the story of her experiences in rising from an extra to a star in the remarkable book 'How I Broke Into the Movies'—The life stories of sixty famous movie stars, signed by them together with full size photos."

The ad also showed a photo of Miss Carroll. And it had a decided effect in popularizing the picture throughout its entire run.

This exploit of our representative from Jackson is only one of the many things he engineers up there and we know that our future issues will carry more accounts of the way this live-wire merchandises his attractions.

Richard L. Moss says:

"The CLUB'S pages are getting more interesting and instructive each week, with always a touch of freshness."

Manager, Raymond Theatre, Pasadena, California.

THE PARAMOUNT PEPSTERS!

The latest dope we have on hand concerning the group of live-wire showmen who operate under the title of the New England Division of Publix Theatres, informs us that the staff who will comprise the merchandising end of the new Paramount Theatre in Providence, Rhode Island, is composed of Eddie Reed in the capacity of manager, with A. J. Siner, former assistant manager of the Imperial in Pawtucket, as his assistant; Lea Duhamel, Keith-Albee publicist for seven years at the Providence house, takes over the assignment at the new Publix house. Bunny Bryan, publicity director for South Eastern New England, will handle the publicity for the official opening of the Rhode Island "ace" house. The Paramount is the first Publix house in Providence.

We want to extend our congratulations to the showmen who will maintain the house, and we know that they will keep the Publix pennant fluttering high over the box office. Let's give them a big hand and hope to hear a lot about their work in the near future.

"Many budding poets are to be found in our prisons," declares a chaplain. Most of them, however, are still at large.—Humorist.

Short Will Never Run Short On His Live-Wire Ideas

When a showman can make tie-ups with radio stations and persuade them to plug his theme songs as a special feature he sure must have a drag in his town. At lease, that's the way it seems to us, for when Paul Short played "Puttin' on the Ritz" at the Tampa Theatre in Tampa, Fla., he effected the stunt.

Two weeks in advance he arranged for an Irving Berlin hour on the radio. The opening of the hour carried the former hits of the fashioner of popular songs and led on to the rendering of his latest song numbers with announcement, relative to the fact that they were featured in "Puttin' on the Ritz."

The radio hour went over very well and Short knew that the house had benefitted along the publicity angle because numerous people informed him that it was one of the most entertaining hours they had heard in a long time. And when this was conveyed to the radio station they too were more than pleased. Which makes it look as though Short is going to cash in along this slant on every production he cares to use it on.

Another angle that he used to sell the film was the placing of a girl inside a shadow box which was so constructed as to give a silhouette effect. The girl in the shadow box took off and put on smart clothes, promoted from a local ladies' wearing apparel shop. The stunt was plugged by a card reading, "You should always wear smart clothes when 'Puttin' on the Ritz.'" The people crowded around this unique display during all of the busy hours when it was used and by the time the play date rolled around the film was on every one's lips.

With Paul one of the most active showmen in Tampa, and a co-worker of Wally Allen's he knows the value of passing these ideas along to his fellow members and for that reason he holds the distinction of being one of our very active members. Keep it up, Paul.

LEO LA FONTAINE is the Assistant Manager of the Blenheim Theatre in New York City and working under the showman wing of that past master in ballyhoo, Fred Dollinger. If we don't miss our guess Leo will be able to go out and handle anything from a circus up by the time he finishes his course of instruction with Fred. Remember Leo, we're counting on you to keep us up on what you and Fred are doing to pack them in at the house.

DAN A. REYNOLDS manages the Avenue Grand Theatre in Washington, D. C. This city boasts some darn fine showmen and we believe that if we looked back in our files that Dan would have his name listed there. However, just to show the rest of the Club, what you're doing, Dan, how about shooting in a line or two on your recent exploitation campaigns. And if you have a photo include that too.

———Wear Your Club Pin! ! !———

MILTON GREENE, the Assistant Manager of the Fortway Theatre in Brooklyn, N. Y., seems to be in for a lucky break, not only because he is working with a showman like Ben Friedman but also because Ben gives him a boost that should help him a lot. So keep up your good work Milton and before long you'll be writing manager under your signature.

———Wear Your Club Pin! ! !———

LOUIS H. ULFFERS, Manager of the Glen Theatre in Glen Cove, N. Y., can lay claim to being a real old time showman and is also one of the charter members of the famous Anti-Misframe League, now extinct, sponsored by the Motion Picture News a number of years ago. Well, Louis, with such wide and varied experience as yours to draw from you should be able to dig up a few good ones for us and we're looking forward to seeing them.

———Wear Your Club Pin! ! !———

BERT LEVY handles the affairs of the Spreckels Theatre in San Diego, Cal., and you need only to consult this issue of the Motion Picture News and read what he did on the "King of Jazz" in order to know that he is a live-wire showman. By the way, Bert, we could have used your photo in conjunction with the article. Why don't you slip it to us now together with a note about your career so that we can give you a regular "intro" along with your next contribution?

———Wear Your Club Pin! ! !———

HARRY MARCHAND, managing the Saenger Theatre in Mobile, Alabama, is another representative showman from the South who really needs no introduction here as his Graduation Day gag has been passed along and used by his fellow members. But you know, Harry, that all must pass through these portals and so there you are. Which of course doesn't mean that you're exempt from continuing your active interest.

———Wear Your Club Pin! ! !———

RUDY BORN is the Manager of the Coronado Theatre in Rockford, Ill. He has been represented on our pages before in connection with his live-wire work and we are of the opinion that he will be represented many more times. Especially since we know that he is anxious to keep right in front with the leaders of his outfit. So let's hear more from you, Rudy, in order that we can report your progress.

THOMAS McGUIRE is the manager of the Hollywood Theatre in Detroit, Michigan. He has already shown that he is going to be very active by including a number of his activities along with his application. We published an account of his work recently and since you know what he can do, then you also know that the future will be productive of some good slants.

———Wear Your Club Pin! ! !———

BILL SOUTTAR is the Assistant Manager of the Midland Theatre in Coffeyville, Kansas, and working with a showman like Mr. Carroll, who we understand has been in the game a number of years, he should pick up enough points to enable his running a house of his own some day. Keep us posted on your work, Bill, so that we can know what you are doing.

———Wear Your Club Pin! ! !———

GEORGE D. BICKFORD manages the Des Moines Theatre in Des Moines, Ia., for the Public outfit. Working with a snappy bunch of managers such as comprise that organiation and the same type of men as comprise this organization, it appears that George is going to be a very active member. How about that, George, have we hit it right?

———Wear Your Club Pin! ! !———

WALTER GOLDSTEIN is the assistant manager of the Stadium Theatre in Brooklyn, N. Y., and his enrollment enables us to chalk another one up on our fast growing line-up from this section of the "Big City." As a good many stunts have originated in Walter's part of the world we expect to hear from this new member very soon and with Mr. Goldfarb as his tutor in showmanship it should make interesting reading.

———Wear Your Club Pin! ! !———

J. E. KELLY manages the Regal and Attucks Theatres in Norfolk, Va. Mr. Kelly shows that he has already grabbed a hold of the real Club spirit by applying for a pin along with his membership certificate. All of which leads us to believe that this showman doesn't do things halfway by any means and we know that he is going to prove a very active member.

———Wear Your Club Pin! ! !———

CHICKIE RINALDO is the Assistant Manager of the College Theatre in College Point, L. I., out where it takes showmen to sell them right. And knowing the vicinity around where Rinaldo is located he should be turning out some pretty good stuff. Let's have a few accounts of what you are doing to help Mr. Korbel boost the box-office, Chickie.

THE Club is anxious to publish photographs of every member and would, therefore, appreciate receiving as many as possible for use in future issues of the Club columns. If you have not already done so, PLEASE send us your own photo at once. Thank you.

"EVERY MAN, WOMAN AND CHILD IN THE WORLD SHOULD SEE THIS PICTURE"

A Statement by S. R. KENT

I refer to "WITH BYRD AT THE SOUTH POLE."

¶ I make this statement calmly and sincerely, after seeing the picture with an audience of Paramount home office people, guests and circuit buyers from other companies.

¶ The statement was echoed by every man and woman with whom I talked after the showing. You will endorse it yourself when you see the picture, as will the countless millions who will see and praise "WITH BYRD AT THE SOUTH POLE" before it has run its course.

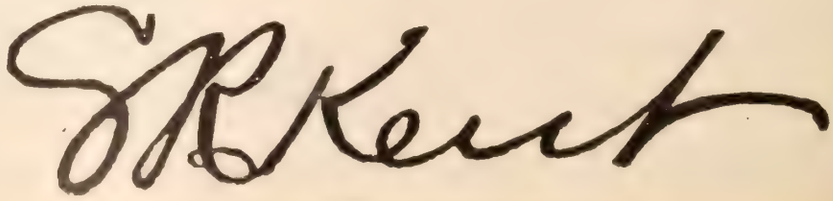
"WITH BYRD AT THE SOUTH POLE"

"WITH BYRD AT THE SOUTH POLE" can be compared to no other motion picture ever made, because there has never been another picture like it.

¶ The picture will be a tremendous box-office success. Nobody who watched that hard-boiled audience at the Criterion Theatre, New York, hang tensely on every scene can doubt that.



¶ It is drama, stark and gripping. It is a glorification of human daring and courage that pulls you proud and cheering out of your seat. It is down to earth, so packed with humor and pathos that the flapper will vie with the business man in honest praise of it. And it is REAL. Everything actually happened, making it ten times more moving than fiction.

¶ "WITH BYRD AT THE SOUTH POLE" is more than a motion picture. More than the record of an epochal event that has held the world's interest for over two years. It is an invigorating tonic for all mankind at a time when we need it most. It is a renewal of faith in humanity, an inspiration for men, women and especially children.

¶ Paramount owes a sacred duty to distribute this great picture to every nook and corner of the world. We propose to discharge this duty.

¶ Theatre owners everywhere owe it to their business, to their standings in their communities and to humankind in general to play this picture in such a manner that the widest possible audiences will be attracted.

¶ I urge every theatre man to see "WITH BYRD AT THE SOUTH POLE" at his first opportunity. Then you will agree with this statement.

Del Rio-Lowe Hit Rams Thru Hot Weather Resistance for Smashing Attendance in New York

Critics Enthuse Over New Crowd-Drawing Thriller Romance . . . .

"Good entertainment [illegible] dialogue and several [illegible]." — Daily News

"Dolores Del Rio Big Hit. 'The Bad One' is a good show, colorful picture, expertly tailored to fit Miss Del Rio's [illegible] personality. Her voice records effectively. There is plenty of romance and plenty of comedy, well put over."—Eve Journal

"'The Bad One' Hold Screen Thrills. The laughs come in quick succession. Film above the average level. Both Mr Lowe and Miss Del Rio contribute fine performances. Miss Del Rio is at her best. She is equally fine in comedy and emotional sequences." — American

"'The Bad One' is pleasantly and unstiltedly romantic. Miss Del Rio is charming. It is hard to imagine an actress more visually effective." — Morning World

"A good picture, plausible, well-knit, interesting and entertaining. Both Dolores and Lowe contribute excellent bits of acting; will appeal to all who like these actors—which is most of us." — Eve World

"This picture should prove its value in any theatre. All the elements that go to make interesting screen fare. George Fitzmaurice has done his best." — Telegraph

"An unusually cleverly staged production, with competent direction and able acting. Miss Del Rio does exceedingly well. Lowe is at his best." — Times

"Dolores Del Rio Hits New Tempo in 'Bad One.' A good picture. Plenty warm. She's a hot mamma. Clara Bow, Alice White and Joan Crawford may have been dynamite to the sailors, but dynamite is whipped cream to the kind of conduct and dialogue Doloes Del Rio inspires in 'The Bad One'. Dolores looks lovely and flashes the trimmest figure on the screen. She gives a deft, convincing performance. Edmund Lowe almost steals the picture. There are some great laughs in 'The Bad One.' Its daring comedy is entertaining."—Mirror

"Dolores Del Rio in her First Talking Picture; Attractive as Ever." — Telegram

"An interesting story, snappy dialogue and clever performances, an excellent production. Amusing and exciting. One of the best roles of her film career. She teams excellently with Lowe. Her voice is charming." — Graphic

"Miss Del Rio looks thoroughly alluring. She plays her role with genuine charm and skill. It is amusing. Miss Del Rio is excellent." — Tribune

the Sharkey-Schmeling Fight which ended in an unsatisfactory foul!

BUT

JAMES CRUZE'S masterly production of

ends in a clean knockout! It's a knockout from every standpoint — the trembling tender love theme; the smashing dramatic action; the vivid colorful characterizations, and the whirlwind climax in the roped arena!

Adapted from DAVID BELASCO'S noted Broadway play, and featuring "Big Boy" Guinn Williams, Lola Lane, Stepin Fetchit, Ralph Ince and a galaxy of others. Read how "The Big Fight" bowled over the hard boiled press at its New York review.

Jack Alicoate, Editor of Film Daily, said: "A natural . . . one of those things that any audience should eat up . . . has a couple of twists that will surprise the most picture wise. Big enough for any man's theatre."

Exhibitors Daily Review said: "A knockout! Worthwhile entertainment with a punch." Robert Garland in the Evening Telegram, under an eight column head, said: "A good deal better on the screen than it was on the stage. Stepin Fetchit comes a little below Charlie Chaplin, and a little above Lillian Gish!"

"The Big Fight", now ready for pre-release and being booked by leading circuits everywhere, is the first of the 1930-31 program.

TWELVE "BROADWAY PLAYHOUSE" PICTURIZATIONS

of Famous, Current, Stage Plays . . . Only Proven, Tested, Audience Successes

1. "MOTHER'S MILLIONS"

by Howard McKent Barnes. Record-breaking, comedy-drama classic of Hetty Green's life—plus gorgeous love story. With MAY ROBSON, who immortalized play on stage.

2. "EAST OF ASIA"

by Kay Clement. Epic Drama of the tropics. Combine "Rain," "White Cargo," sex and sensation—you will never forget it!

3. "THOU SHALT NOT SQUEAL"

by Leslie Burton Blades and Harry Clay Blaney. First commandment of the crook world—with suspense and punch thrills. Compelling crowd-getter.

4. "THE APE"

by Adam Hull Shirk. The most startling mystery play ever written. Now the international rage. Hair-raising, screamy, yet replete with laughter.

5. "EAST LYNNE"

by Mrs. Henry Wood. Enduring classic heart-drama. Perfect woman's picture. Like "Way Down East"—perennial, golden draw.

6. "IN OKLAHOMA"

by May Sheldon and Loring Kelley. Spectacular outdoor melodrama of national fame. Vibrating entertainment.

7. "EVERYBODY'S GIRL"

by Richard Barry from his New York, Princess Theatre success, "Barefoot." Vital drama of a girl deceived. Ultra-modern. Sure-fire winner.

8. "THE MIDNIGHT ALARM" by James W. Harkins, Jr. Screeching sirens, clanging bells, flying wheels—FIRE! Our favorite melodrama reenacted for the benefit of your money till.

9. "THE WORST WOMAN IN PARIS"

by Alexander Kosorotov. International stage sensation. Stunning, swift-moving play of sex and emotions—of Parisian morals and fascinating women. Tremendous.

10. "DANCING FATHERS"

by May Sheldon and Loring Kelley. Popular play with appeal to all ages. Packed with sentiment, humor and glittering showmanship.

11. "BODY, SOUL AND DRESS"

by Olenin-Volgar. Imperial prize continental play. Start led blase Europe—took it by storm. Box office smash.

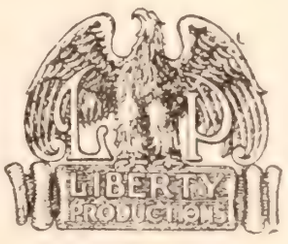
12. "RED KISSES"

by Charles E. Blaney. Fierce love and adventure in the tropical diamond mines of Brazil. Breathtaking entertainment.

EIGHT EPOCHMAKING "VICTORY" SPECIALS

I. "DAVY JONES LOCKER"

By the great American playwright, Richard Barry. New Broadway stage success—acknowledged greatest sea melodrama ever written. Modern pirates, sunken treasure—the fight for millions in gold on the bottom of the sea—a beautiful aviatrix—romance, heart throbs, thrills as never before. Master entertainment—packed houses!



II. "THE ROMANTIC SCOUNDREL"

Prize novel by Victor Cherbuliez. Booth Tarkington says, "Greatest story of a social adventurer in all prose literature." Marking new era in showmanship—a romantic comedy—"Jekyll-Hyde" hero worshipped by women, spurning all. A gorgeous, musical back-ground.

Six more "VICTORIES" to be announced from time to time.

Each VICTORY IS a "special"—individually, specially produced. Unlimited as to expense, reflecting sky-peak of showmanship.

Each "VICTORY" is a VICTORY for LIBERTY and for YOU!

Coast War on "Spicks"?

Hollywood — Spanish "experts" who sell their "services" to producers making Latin versions are on the pan, so much so that the strong verbal condemnations of these fakers might easily lead to at least a war with Spain, Mexico and half of South America.

With most of their knowledge of Spanish customs and language gleaned in chile con carne beaneries, their advice on Spanish versions is causing no end of embarrassment to producers. Take the case of Mack Sennett, for instance. This comedy producer paid big dough to a "spick expert." And, according to Cedric Hart, the writer, here's what happened:

"If Mack only knew Spanish, he certainly would never have produced the synchronization we saw at his studios recently. Of course it won't be shown. The exhibitors don't cherish any more 'revolutions' down there. But how a man of Mack's showmanship can fall for such stuff as his 'Spanish expert' gave him is only proof in itself that we all make mistakes. It's these so-called authorities on Spanish who are hurting the market. Hollywood needs a general weeding-out of these birds."

Doesn't Cedric mean BULLS and not BIRDS ? ? ?

Will Retire, Says Kennedy But He Still "Presents"

Retirement or not? That's the question. By his own pronouncement, Joe Kennedy is pulling up film stakes in favor of banking. Evidence to the contrary, however, appears in the product announcement book which United Artists is distributing among first run exhibitors in which Kennedy will "present" Gloria Swanson's two-picture contribution to that program for 1930-1931. The first is "What a Widow" and the second is to be announced.

Kennedy still is chairman of the board of directors of Pathe, his forces having successfully overcome an effort of minority stockholders to dislodge him. E. B. Derr, brought into the company by Kennedy, was elected president. Other Kennedy choices also were named by the directors.

Warners Join with RKO in New Booking Combine Against Paramount and Fox

The battle of 1930, raging on a front that extends from Maine to Florida and from New York to San Francisco, is about to break out.

Allied on one side are the Paramount and Fox forces marshaled under the generalship of Adolph Zukor, Sidney R. Kent, Sam Katz and Jesse L. Lasky for the former, and Harley L. Clarke, Winnie Sheehan and Jimmy Grainger for the latter. Opposing them are Warners and R-K-O with Harry, Abe and Jack in command for the company bearing their name, and David Sarnoff, Hiram S. Brown, Joe Plunkett and Joe Schnitzer issuing the orders that will swing the R-K-O forces into line.

Booking Contract Closed

Fox, as first intimated in Motion Picture News several weeks ago, has closed a booking contract which will carry its product into all Publix theatres, roughly 1,600 strong, with the exception of the de luxe theatres on Broadway, where Fox has the Roxy. The deal was closed Tuesday afternoon.

Warners and R-K-O have closed a reciprocal booking deal to play each other's product throughout the nation, despite the fact executives at both organizations are either out, denying the telephone or have nothing to say.

This move, held in the strictest of confidence and actually unknown to some of the executives in both offices, swings Warners and R-K-O into one camp for the 1930-1931 melee and further bears out the in-

Richman Out, Clara Has Doctor Sweetie in Dallas

Los Angeles—It's all over but the shouting in that alleged and oft-panned Clara Bow-Harry Richman romance and the screen may lose Clara. She admitted this herself when she declined to guarantee performance of her contract with Paramount and will be 25 grand poorer as the result of her decision. Clara is sweet on a Dr. Pearson of Dallas, and would have been named co-respondent in his wife's divorce action, she said, only that she paid her off. Some of the money, she said came from the fund set aside by the company which held out $500 weekly under terms of the contract, the money to go to Clara when the contract was completed. Her rival's alleged demands made it necessary to drain the trust fund.

Omigosh! !

San Francisco—Filing of a wage suit by the "ferocious gorilla" who is featured in a certain wild African film was the cause of many gag knocks along newspaper row, all involving the "ferociousness" of gorillas doing picture work.

The best story of the bunch, concerns the Bengal tiger in a circus who died very suddenly. He had been headlining and the loss threatened the successful run of the outdoor show, so much so that the big boss hired a man to get into the skin and do the best he could in the cage.

It was mostly a sleeping part and all went well until the African lion in the next cage began to shake the bars and roar. The tiger trembled and at last in sheer fright shouted to be taken out of his cage and out of his skin.

"I've a wife and six children," pleaded the Bengal tiger.

"Don't be afraid," whispered the African lion, "I'm a married man myself."

Warners Reach For Legit to Save The Hollywood

Warners will become straight legit producers in the Fall, a move which is understood to be prompted in an attempt to salvage what remains of the flop of their pet baby, the new Hollywood theatre on New York's main stem.

The town's big time dopesters have speculated over the house ever since construction plans were announced last year. The theatre was opened only two months ago. Many voiced the opinion that Warners were taking a long shot in building within a few feet of the Winter Garden and Warners, the chain's "vet" Broadway stands. In addition, they claimed that the nearby Capitol was too strongly entrenched.

Spotty box office performances at the Hollywood proved the accuracy of the main stemmers' predictions. The house will open around Labor Day with a musical.

PULLING THE FIRE BOX TO SEE THE ENGINES RUN

MILLIONS for the first page and not one cent for the truth. From Hollywood, more often than otherwise inspired by the dictators of the studios themselves, press agents flood newspaperdom with exaggerated yarns of production costs. An old custom which seemingly can never be interred and a constant red flag waving before reformers and legislators who stand on the sidelines ready to throw more trouble in the industry's face.

Every year there is fresh talk about cutting it out. And every year the same old procedure strides the boards unbridled. It's a dangerous and costly pastime the industry is countenancing merely to aggrandize its personalities. For all the world like a mischievous boy who pulls the fire box to bring the engines out. And just about as sensible.

Music Has Charm When New

LOUD wailings from medium and small town operators. Musicals with current song hits are reaching their theatres so late that the public won't go for them. The songs are old and new ones have replaced them. Aside from the banality of the operetta and musical comedy formula, producers might well consider this other point if they are anxious to learn why filmusicals are writhing in death agony all over the country.

Producers' own theatre affiliations, preferential bookings and extended protection over second and later dates are responsible. Here's another nut to crack.

The Shoe Pinches and Hurts

THE scramble is on. Make pictures for "children" is now a Hollywood by-word. Producers, analyzing their theatre patronage, have finally discovered what any casual observer could have told them months ago: That kids were being kept out of picture houses by questionable themes, dubious treatments and dirty dialogue.

Now the realization in the form of spotty theatre grosses has struck home and, to a man, the run to cover has begun. Some day, those who guide this business will anticipate trends instead of following them.

MINIATURE golf courses, stage shows, Sunday concerts, bargain matinees, the revival of contests in avalanches—what next to maintain the level of business?

Sound pictures, once novel because they spoke, are no longer that and the question on every side is what to do now? Sam Katz thinks stage shows may be the way out. So it is that Publix theatres, once stripped of all flesh and blood entertainers, are putting them back in a rush. Maybe Katz is right.

The one known factor in the picture is the realization that the situation is serious. All others are pure speculation.

Protection That Protects

THE committee that handled the Southern California zoning plan performed a service for which full recognition is yet to come. The system adopted in Los Angeles will be the nation's model. Among other clarified points it sets in automatic playdates and provides this:

Reduces the autocratic power of first runs and gives subsequent runs a measure of the rights to which they are entitled.

Cuts distribution cost and makes it theoretically possible at least to sell pictures cheaper.

The plan looks sensible, but the test of practicability is before it. Yet even if this system doesn't work, another will. Protection that protects the upper as well as the under dog is on the way at last.

And in Troublesome Europe

THE guns are turned toward America. Europe is all het up. Added to quotas, taxation and the high wall of unfriendliness which confront American pictures on the continent is the resentment against the tariff legislated through Congress this week.

The cousins across the sea won't take this latest wallop without retaliating. The danger to American exhibitors, we point out again, takes the form of higher rentals to make up for the slack, present and future, in European grosses. Producers must be far-sighted enough not to attempt this. Nothing but trouble can result if they are not.

Allied Members Not Selling Out; Will Be on Hand When 5-5-5 Meet Resumes

Byrd Film Thrills and Impresses

A permanent contribution to the archives of motion pictures, a saga of adventure in Antarctica and an epochal film.

"With Byrd at the South Pole" thrills and impresses as it weaves the authentic narrative of the greatest exploration expedition of the century. As an attraction, it's magnet that will draw gold. Different and novel and the topic of the hour, Byrd and his film have as much chance of missing out as Lindbergh on a Paris flight.

Myers Body to Ignore "Libelous Haysite Attack"

Washington—While Allied States Ass'n. is "indignant at the libelous attacks on its delegation appearing in certain trade papers and inspired by an unidentified Haysite," it will not withdraw from the 5-5-5 conferences on the proposed new contract. This is made clear in a statement issued here by Abram F. Myers, president of Allied. He says to withdraw now would be playing into the hands of "the undercover agent who is apparently bent on wrecking the conference."

"The association," says Myers, "has submitted concrete proposals which are still on the conference table and for which it hopes to obtain the favorable consideration of the conferees.

"We do not think," he continues, "that we would be justified in withdrawing, so long as any hope remains of getting the relief which the exhibitors represented by this association so urgently need."

S. R. Kent of Paramount, who sponsored the conferences, "has made it plain that in negotiating with his committee we are not dealing with the Hays organization," Myers says.

Blank Swells Chain with Purchase of Two More

Des Moines—A. H. Blank interests took over two houses at Centerville when the Ritz and the Majestic were sold by Leo Moore. The new management takes charge on July 1.

Mickey's Lifesaver

Hollywood—Marshall Neilan is said to have been all hot and bothered when he was handed the rap by Mary Pickford after the star called a halt on her new picture. Mickey was let out, and, of course, the coincident didn't help him any.

The Christies, however, jumped to the rescue and handed Neilan a honey assignment, "Sweethearts on Parade," described as a big one for the Christies, and a swell break for Mickey.

Clarke Sails to Get U. K. Break For Fox Product

Harley L. Clarke, delayed in sailing for London last week by pressure of Fox business in New York, left Wednesday on the Europa for the Continent and a discussion with Gaumont British of what is going to be done about a better break for Fox product in the British company's theatres.

The Fox company owns a considerable, but minority, share of G. B. and, it is understood, feels it is not getting either the rentals or the representation which that financial interest should command. This, London reports, is attributable to the fact that Will Evans, one of the two managing directors of G. B., is insistent that his company pick the pictures it feels will make the most money without regard to partners, while Fox doesn't agree that this is quite as it should be.

Officially, Clarke's trip concerns his public utilities in England, but it is practically certain he will meet the Ostrers, bankers and backers of G. B. in London, in an effort to straighten out the muddled situation. In London, C. M. Woolf, Evans' associate as managing director of the English company, has emphatically denied reports published there that Fox has acquired full control of G. B. The Associated Press sent the story out over its press wires a few days ago.

London—Denial of a report that Gaumont British has "passed into the hands of Fox" was issued by Lord Lee of Fareham. The Metropolis & Bradford Trust Co., Ltd., of which he is permanent chairman, owns more than 3,000,000 of the 5,000,000 ordinary shares of the company, he said, and thus holds control by a substantial voting majority.

Schenck En Route East

Hollywood—Joseph M. Schenck is en route East and is due in New York on Saturday. A European trip is in the offing.

Arrested in Fight Films

Detroit—Benjamin Wray is at Liberty on $1,000 bond on a charge of illegal transportation of Schmeling-Sharkey fight films.

Original Conferees Are Still Qualified to Attend, Says Myers

There will be no substitutions of independent exhibitors when the 5-5-5 conferences are resumed June 30 at Atlantic City, Motion Picture News learns exclusively. It has been reported at various times that the sale of their theatres would preclude service on the committee of various of the Allied members.

Abram F. Myers, president of the Allied organization, says there will not be any substitutions, unless some of the members find they cannot attend.

W. A. Steffes, general manager of the Northwest exhibitor unit; Col. H. A. Cole, head of the Texas unit; Jim Hone of the Washington association, and Nathan Yamins of Fall River, Mass., still are eligible to serve on the committee of independent showmen. Yamins is reported dickering to sell his Fall River houses to Paramount Publix.

Biechele, Miller, Harwood, Picquet, Lightman Named

Memphis—M. A. Lightman has appointed committee members who will serve on the 5-5-5 conferences. They are R. R. Biechele, Kansas City; Jack Miller, Chicago; Jack Harwood, Cleveland; Charles W. Piquet, Pinehurst, N. C.; and Lightman. This means retirement of Frank C. Walker, New York, from the committee. Allied States Ass'n. will have the same committee it started with, it is stated.

Rogers Negotiating with RKO; May Make a Series

Charles R. Rogers who sold his interest in the Stanley Advertising Co. when that organization was absorbed by Warners as the nucleus of its non-theatrical department, is dickering with R-K-O to make a series of pictures. Rogers, who is a veteran independent producer, was slated for a high executive post with Pathe, in event that the move of Richard A. Rowland and his associates to gain control of the company was successful. Rowland is said to have been acting for Consolidated Film Laboratories in the Pathe move, but denied this to Motion Picture News.

Tra-la-la

"The film director may derive the bare bones of his stories from any source whatever," according to "Bob" Sherwood, "just as Shakespeare derived the bare bones of 'Hamlet' from fables that were available for everyone's use. Shakespeare covered those bones with the flesh and blood of his own ageless poetry. So may the film director cover them with the moving lights and shadows of his own imagination."

The Insiders' Outlook

THE seers of this business sat back long ago and doped out what they thought the future held in store. Some foresaw three big companies left. Others, two. And a few souls, just one.

The twos, this week's biggest development proves, are edging the others out of the running.

Gazing into its pet crystal ball a couple of weeks ago, THE INSIDERS tipped off a business which slightly scoffed that Fox and Paramount were doing a lot of flirting. On Tuesday, this business of arching the eyebrows at each other gave way to the dipping of pens in conveniently placed inkwells and, as a result, the Fox product plays the Publix chain everywhere.

Meet the New Team

In at least two offices, it was realized that Empeenews' original yarn was quite correct. Or who knows? Maybe they read and learned. At any rate and, fast on the heels of the Paramount-Fox deal, a deep affection between Warners and R-K-O springs to the fore. Each company is to run the other's pictures in as fine a fraternal spirit as this business has seen in many moons. Lovely idea.

It may be—indeed is quite probable—that John J. Raskob, who owns a lot of Warner and a lot of R-K-O stock, might have had something to do with it.

Not actually with the booking deal, you understand, but by way of suggestion that the mutuality of interest, plus the alliance made by Fox and Paramount, might prove weighty enough factors to induce dealings between the brothers three and Hiram Brown.

Naturally the gang over at Fox is wearing the smile that won't wipe off. Jimmy Grainger carried on the negotiations with Sam Katz and Harley Clarke has been seeing a bit of Adolph Zukor lately. It isn't hard to figure it out from that point on.

With Bill Fox Out

As a matter of fact, the relations between Grainger and Sheehan with the chaps at Paramount who count have been friendly for some time. Kent and Katz have conducted considerable business with the Fox executives since the day the Fox expansion began to dazzle the industry.

The personal contacts would undoubtedly have crystallized into tangible business form more frequently had it not been that Bill Fox's penchant was for fighting the battle single-handed. But Fox is out of that picture now and the significant booking deal which became fact this week may easily be the prelude to something even more substantial in the future.

For instance, now that the gross will jump some millions as a result of the arrangement with Paramount, it becomes obvious for Fox to recognize that wherever considerations may properly be shown the Zukor organization, those considerations should be forthcoming. On the West Coast, for instance, where Fox cracks the theatre whip. In England, if and when the Gaumont British muddle is cleared up. A theatre truce, if not actually a halt, in this country is not an impossible step.

Shifting Hollywood

THEY are about to move 'em about in Hollywood again.

The latest shift concerns a couple of production executives who, reports would have it, are to shake present allegiances from their bootstraps, get themselves bigger desks, and do their lording at new studios.

If the upset does come, the cartographers will have to busy themselves revamping the Hollywood map. For the men involved are major in their activities.

The move is of interest to the exhibitor, since it would have a bearing on the quality of product originating in the two studios concerned—up or down remains to be seen.

All slightly nebulous at the minute, but on the wing nevertheless.

Two-Ply

Of the greatest significance in this latest of strategic moves is the uncomfortable realization that the step practically parcels the industry into two groups. Paramount has an M-G-M franchise covering many situations. Also with United Artists as well as an "in" there via a $3,000,000 loan arranged with Joe Schenck some time ago. Now the Fox outfit becomes an ally. Fox, on the other hand, has M-G-M and Paramount to count on.

The other side of the picture looks like this: Radio with its own product, a booking deal with—if not control of—Columbia, and now Warners which, of course, embraces First National.

On the outside, and in grave danger of becoming awfully lonesome, sit Universal and Tiffany.

Run, Sheep, Run

". . . but the cartoon was a pip" has been the out for many an exhibitor stuck with a punk program. That was in the silent days and those animated mice, rabbits, jackasses and whatnot packed a healthy draw at the box office. They contained ideas and clicked generally.

Then came sound—and confusion. The artists were commanded to dope out action that could be synchronized with some weird noises, applicable or not. They tried hard to please and in the scramble they lost sight of ideas and humor. The public got bedlam instead of laughs.

The old game of "follow the leader" was worked to death. One artist conceived a brilliant piece of business—using the ribs of an animal carcass for a xylophone. It went great the first time, but in a few weeks every cartoonist was using the idea. This INSIDER saw it on the screens of six Broadway theatres in one week.

Give the old bones a rest, boys.

Star Dust

In Hollywood, Jack Warner is credited with the statement that no star is bigger than either Warner Brothers or First National and that, if a star or player is dissatisfied it's oke with the company to pull out. Another way of putting it: Warners don't propose to be annoyed by complaints, temperament or the kicking up of star dust.

Jack, the good old scout, surprises because he should know better. This business, like it or not, is cornerstoned on personalities and, again, like it or not, will always so be. In Hollywood, all major studios have the star and temperament to counter with.

They don't like to, but they go through the pain of it all realizing correctly that the marquee headliner is the boy or the gal who brings in the kale.

The Warners had their experience with Al Jolson. All of the mal-de-mer disguised as sound through which the business has been laboring is traceable to the Jolson personality in "The Jazz Singer." And the starring equation, if it clicks, doesn't count?

Hooey, me lads. Just plain hooey.

Katz Launches Program-Building Move; Plans to Bolster Patronage of Kids

Mary Had a Little Nerve

Hollywood—Newshounds in this town were thrown into excitement the other day when Mary Pickford phoned the boys to come over to her house for an important announcement.

The writers broke dates, and most of the office furniture in their haste to be there on the dot. Speculation was rife, to say the least, with the preponderance of opinion expecting Miss Pickford to announce her retirement from the screen.

With a score or more assembled, she got up and, with the greatest poise, made her big announcement:—Mr. Tinstein had been appointed supervisor of her next picture!!!

The reporters were so provoked that Mr. Tinstein's announcement has not yet appeared in print.

35,700 Seats in Construction for Katz to Operate

Paramount Publix is building 25,600 seats to add to its chain by the end of 1930 and, on the basis of theatres now in construction and without proviso for additional projects, an additional 10,100 in 1931. The latter is expected to be increased considerably.

Twelve theatres in as many cities and towns will throw open their doors between now and January 1, all of them to be known as "Paramount" with the exception of the 2,400-seat Gateway in Chicago. They are:

CITY OR TOWN	CAPACITY	OPENING DATE
Chicago, Ill.	2,400	June 19
Peekskill, N. Y.	1,700	June 28
Hammond, Ind.	2,000	July 3
Denver, Colo.	2,100	July 15
Lynn, Mass.	2,400	July 15
El. Paso, Tex.	2,800	Aug. 15
Ft. Wayne, Ind.	2,100	Aug. 15
Stapleton, N. Y.	2,300	Sept. 15
Nashville, Tenn.	2,000	Oct. 15
Lynchburg, Va.	1,500	Nov. 1
Hamilton, O.	1,800	Dec. 1
Helena, Ark.	1,500	Dec. 1

The 1931 program, embracing houses actually in work, includes:

CITY OR TOWN	CAPACITY	OPENING DATE
Ashland, Ky.	1,100	Jan. 1
Middletown, O.	1,900	Jan. 1
Bristol, Tenn.	1,100	Feb. 1
Cincinnati, O.	2,500	March 1
Oakland, Cal.	3,500	June

Basquette-Marley Love Boat Hits a Few Rocks

Hollywood—Lina Basquette, film player and dancer, admits her romance with Peverell Marley has hit the rocks, and they are definitely separated. Marley, former cameraman for Cecil De Mille, left his position to become a vaude performer with his wife several months ago. Miss Basquette's first marriage was to the late Sam Warner.

Theatre Managers Ordered to Make Play for Children; Kelly Heads Department

Establishment of a program-building department and the launching of a circuit-wide campaign to "bring back the children" to theatres of the circuit have been completed by Sam Katz, following a tour of company theatres.

Every Publix house has been ordered to direct a summer campaign for patronage of children from 10 to 15 years old. Katz calls attention to the new production policy of the company, outlined at the Atlantic City convention, which calls for the winning back of kid patronage through a series of pictures headed by "Tom Sawyer" and "Huckleberry Finn."

The new program-building department has been placed in charge of Burt Kelly, who has been associate buyer for the circuit. Katz's inspection tour of Publix houses is said to have revealed an unsatisfactory condition, so far as program construction is concerned.

Kelly's appointment is to be the first step in the new program, with appointment of a number of other executives slated to be made.

Philly Indies Allege 'Betrayal' In Stanley Sales

Philadelphia—Independent exhibitors are talking Federal action at what they angrily describe as their betrayal by Fox, M-G-M and R-K-O in selling the Stanley here, thus virtually shutting off product to independents.

Chiseling

Hollywood—Stars who have gone through the humbling process of recent years have nothing on certain directors. One of them, now eager to say "yes, sir," once produced independently for a large distributor and he made life miserable for the home office executives. On visiting New York he would insist that all the paper, including 24-sheets, on his pictures be tacked up on the wall and he would carefully measure the billings with a ruler to see if he had received the proper percentage. If there were any discrepancy, he would march into the general manager's office and, in the presence of that factotum, would dictate a letter to his attorney complaining of the slight. Upon receiving the lawyer's complaint, the general manager dictated an apology and the director was satisfied.

He doesn't need a large ruler these days!

Greasing the Breaks

Hollywood—Before "The King of Jazz" was publicly shown it was privately previewed by critics. Reviews were prepared in advance for publication simultaneously with the premiere. Jeanie Lang—a newcomer—sang one song. But, to hear a local writer tell it, the trained eyes of the reviewers spotted a personality glittering with stardust. They wrote raves about the "discovery."

In the meantime, studio executives eliminated Jeanie from the film. When it opened in the theatre, hers was the face on the cutting room floor. BUT—when the reviews appeared, her sequence was hastily put back again, and the ads carried her picture above those of the stars:

"Jeanie Lang New Cinema Sensation."

The breaks.

Lack of Pictures Tough for R-K-O In Minneapolis

Minneapolis—Pictures are declared to be the big problem of Radio-Keith-Orpheum in bucking Paramount Publix in the downtown situation here. The R-K-O Seventh Street already has folded and the Hennepin-Orpheum is declared having hard sledding due to the lack of picture attractions.

This leaves the Hennepin-Orpheum bucking the Minnesota, State, Century, Lyric, Aster, Grand and Palace, all Paramount houses. The tough session at the theatre is said to have been eased somewhat by the draw of the Olsen & Johnson act and of "The Divorcee."

Pour l'Amour de l'Art Et "La Belle France"

Hollywood—The auditors will have a hard time doping this one out.

The French version of "The Unholy Three," which, in English, is Lon Chaney's first talker, cost M-G-M approximately $135,000 to produce. For the studio crowd, that's a mere pittance to spend on a feature, but it is understood here the executives of the foreign department in New York, from Arthur M. Loew clear down the line, are still trying to figure out how the French market can be juggled to eke out production cost.

Translated into French currency, the $135,000 negative costs totals 3,375,000 francs. Which is a lot of francs for any picture to gross across the pond, those who know that market point out.

Production Budget $126,500,000; Fox, Paramount, M-G-M to Spend Nearly Half Million Dollar Supers Are Few; No Roadshows on List of Paramount

Hollywood—The adding machines total $126,500,000 as the budget covering the 345 features to be released by eleven major companies during the coming season. Of this amount, almost half appears in the estimates of Paramount, M-G-M and Fox.

With an announced program of 60 features, Paramount ranks first in production budget with $20,000,000. The Fox budget is set at $18,000,000, while M-G-M will play around with $17,000,000.

On the Paramount line-up, as already announced, there are many specials listed, but not one that can be considered in the million dollar negative-cost class. This situation is unusual with Paramount, which generally makes a bid for road show classification each year with at least one high cost super. It is reported that the company policy for the coming year will be to spread costs over the entire program to bring up the values and production standards of the regular program releases.

Fox and M-G-M Splurging

Both M-G-M and Fox, on the other hand, each have current specials in work that carry actual budgets of over a million. Fox's "The Big Trail," which Raoul Walsh is directing, is expected to cost at least $1,600,000 and will be geared for roadshows. M-G-M has about $1,500,000 already in "Trader Horn," with at least another $100,000 to go before the picture is finished. Fox's "Connecticut Yankee in King Arthur's Court," when produced, will come pretty close to the million mark and the same is true of three M-G-M productions listed for next season: "Mme. Satan," "Merry Widow" and "March of Time."

Los Angeles estimates always look good in local papers, no matter what business is being ballyhooed. The picture industry is a particularly juicy morsel for the enthusiastic business leaders of southern California and practically any sort of "figures" are accepted and broadcast.

All Budgets Are Variable

Studio executives and publicity men have come to realize the front-page banner line value of each additional million tacked on to production budgets and the system works accordingly. As a result, several Los Angeles papers printed the story of a financial authority so-called in which he stated that a total of $163,715,000 would be spent by various producers in Hollywood during the coming year. Not being interested in what Pathe and M-G-M would expend because of their location in Culver City, these two firms were ignored in his publicity blurb, even though their combined budgets total $24,000,000.

On announcements of current season budgets, neither Paramount nor M-G-M released total figures except to point out that

Fox Expanding Theatre Plans In All Sectors

Theatre expansion plans of Fox are being developed rapidly by General Manager Harry C. Arthur, the program in the East chiefly concerning the replacement of present houses in Greater New York and northern New Jersey with newer and larger theatres.

In Philadelphia Major John Zanft announced that work on the new 5,000 seat theatre at Market and 16th Sts. will be resumed shortly, while Divisional Manager Herschel Stuart in Boston declared that plans for expansion in New England are progressing at a fast pace.

Work started this week on the construction of the Midwesco 4,500 seat house in Milwaukee, to be the largest in Wisconsin, while Harold B. Franklin, head of the West Coast chain, said that the next large house to be opened by the circuit is the one now under construction at Stockton, Cal.

Fox Bad Luck Continues

Bad luck which has followed William Fox was emphasized Tuesday at Woodmere, L. I., when his 60-foot cruiser went on the rocks with an estimated damage of $5,000.

N.W. Expansion On

Seattle—Twelve Oregon and eleven Washington theatres are called for in expansion plans of Fox West Coast Theatres. There now are 35 theatres in the Washington division, division manager of which is Earl L. Crabb. He is turning over Oregon houses to Port Major, who is to headquarter at Portland and direct operation of the company's 18 Oregon theatres.

New Reproducer Said to Cut Out Ground Noises

Brant Rock, Mass.—First public demonstration of a new type of sound reproducer was to take place here Saturday at the Brant Rock Theatre.

The new system employs only one photo-electric cell which is mounted in the amplifier unit located between the two projectors, thus isolating the electrical system from the projectors. The new reproducer is known as the Saf-Ray system and is the development of A. Des Biens, Boston inventor and head of Simplimus, Inc., manufacturers of sound devices.

It is claimed that this method of reproduction eliminates all ground noises due to mechanical vibration in the projector. A light beam reflected from the sound head to the photo cell unit is used in place of wires and leads employed in the systems now on the market. A lens assembly is mounted in the place of the photo-electric cell as used in other systems. The light from the sound track is picked up from this lens and focused on a peroscopic unit located in front of the head. This unit reflects the light and focuses the beam on a mirror facing the photo-electric cell. By means of a pivoted mirror noiseless change-over can be made from one projector to the other.

The only electrical element of the sound system that is located in the projector is the exciter lamp. There are no wires or mechanical connection between the projector and the amplifier rack which also contains the photo cell. Patents covering the new system for light ray sound pick-up have been applied for by the company building the device which now is under production and will be available to the market generally.

F. N. Buys "Ex-Mistress"

Hollywood—First National has acquired screen rights to "Ex-Mistress."

No Trend Toward Lower B. O. Prices, Despite Summer, NEWS Survey Reveals

Carewe's Lady Luck

Hollywood—Edwin Carewe figures the last week in May must be his lucky period. Week started off with Carewe bringing in a deep well at Santa Fe Springs, which rates a profit of at least $500,000 before it dries up. This was followed by another business deal that involves profit of $250,000. The climax came at the Mayfair Club, when Carewe won the drawing conducted by the M. P. Relief Fund for a Cord car. Eddie held the winning ticket out of the book of 20 he had purchased. In taking delivery of the machine, Carewe sat down and wrote out a donation check to the Fund for $1,000; the only sizeable expenditure he had during the week.

Silent Versions Off M-G-M List For New Season

Hollywood—There will be no silent versions of M-G-M talkers for the coming year. This decision was made by company officials, and previous intentions of re-cutting talker productions to hatch silent pictures for the benefit of unwired theatres in this country and abroad have been abandoned.

This year M-G-M delivered a silent version of practically every talker produced. A separate department was maintained for this purpose.

Chicago Court Approves Acoustical Insulators

Chicago—Court approval of Westfelt and balsam wool as acoustical insulating materials was given here in four test cases instigated by the Chicago Fire Prevention Bureau. The Lynn, employing Westfelt, and the Sheridan, Marquette and Savoy theatres, using balsam wool material, were the houses given a clean bill by the court.

It is believed that the decision means that additional cases pending against local theatres using acoustical materials not approved by the Fire Prevention Bureau will be dismissed.

Bebe and Ben Go Into Hiding on Honeymoon

Hollywood—The whereabouts of Mr. and Mrs. Ben Lyon, the latter being the former Bebe Daniels, have not been discovered by interested parties in Hollywood. Following their sumptuous wedding ceremony Saturday they started northward by motor, but their destination was kept secret. It is believed that they are seeking a secluded spot where they will not be recognized.

It was revealed at the wedding that Bebe and Ben had been engaged for a year, the bride explaining the length of the betrothal by saying that she "wanted to be sure."

Girl Planned to Frame Pantages, Is New Charge

Hollywood—Grand jury subpoena has been issued for Eugene Mozier, following his statement that Miss Eunice Pringle, 17-year-old dancer, had told him of a plan to "frame" Alexander Pantages. The latter was convicted of criminally assaulting the girl. District Attorney Buron Fitts and Miss Pringle have branded the affidavit made by Mozier as "false, foolish and ridiculous."

Keaton Signs with M-G-M On Four Comedy Contract

Hollywood—With his current starring comedy practically finished, Buster Keaton has signed a new contract with M-G-M providing for four comedies to be made in the next two years.

Keaton, who switched over to M-G-M about three years ago after expiration of his releasing agreement with United Artists, made several silent pictures for the first named organization. His first talker was "Free and Easy," released a few months ago.

Selznick "Talkie Contest" Under Bureau Scrutiny

Lewis J. Selznick is "on the spot" at the hands of the National Better Business Bureau, which is querying a contest advertised by the Selznick Recording Co., Albany. Inquiry at the Albany address failed to disclose any knowledge of Selznick or his whereabouts, stating he was unknown there. The "national talkie contest," applicants to which would use records made by the company, was advertised in a New York newspaper. No certificate of assumed name for the company was on file at the county clerk's office.

Local Conditions Governing Cuts, National Theatre Poll Discloses

There is no general tendency to cut admission prices, either by affiliated or independent exhibitors, a national survey just completed by MOTION PICTURE NEWS emphasizes. Cuts made in a few of the keys were dictated by local conditions, and are not part of any national trend or demand for a lower box office tariff.

Even in face of the summer business decline, there is no drift to lower prices. Changes of policy or keen competition have influenced reductions in a few spots. Here are the detailed results of the survey:

New York Admissions Held to Steady Level

New York admissions are holding to a steady level, despite summer weather. The neighborhoods, most of them double-featuring, are not making reductions. In Brooklyn, the Fox took the lead in a stiff admission drop.

No Downward Trend in Minneapolis Region

Minneapolis—Except in small towns of the territory, some of which are cutting their minimum to 35 or 40 cents, there is no move to lower prices in this territory. Locally, there is terrific competition between Radio-Keith-Orpheum, Publix and Pantages, with Publix having pretty much the upper hand, by virtue of its grip on the Loop.

Price War in St. Louis; Fox Slash Raises Hob

St. Louis—Fox may hold a goodly portion of Loew stock in its vaults, but that doesn't prevent the companies' theatres from indulging in a price war here.

Recently the Fox trimmed its prices to 50 cents top. Now Loew's State up and declares its peak figure will be 40 cents as of June 20. The Ambassador and Missouri, operated by the Skouras-Warner interests, and the St. Louis, an R-K-O combination house, have not reduced their prices.

A slant on the price reduction is the complaint of some exhibitors that the slash at the Fox with its 5,200 seats will affect their business when Fox pictures are shown in subsequent runs and as a result they have expressed the belief they should get some relief in the way of lower rentals. They will experience the same situation with M-G-M when the new scale is put into effect at Loew's State.

The price war has brought about a rearrangement of release schedules in all of the big houses. The first runs plan to spot in their best pictures, some of which were scheduled for the fall.

Omaha Business Okay; Scale Is Maintained

Omaha—Admissions are remaining as were in Omaha. There hasn't been a change since the Paramount dropped from 60 to 50 cent top two months ago. At the same time

Tariff Seen as Retaliatory Weapon in European Campaigns Against U.S. Films

New Measure Expected to Add To Handicaps Faced by American Firms

Washington—Stiff handicaps imposed upon American films in foreign countries may be increased further as a result of the new tariff rates on commodities imported into the United States which have just gone into effect, and officials in Washington are watching closely developments in Europe.

Films, however, will not be the only product utilized for retaliatory action by foreign governments which see their export affected by higher barriers in the United States. Automobiles are in as parlous a situation in France today as motion pictures ever were, are practically barred from Italy and are the subject of much agitation in other countries. Other manufactures of American origin also are suffering under handicaps, as country after country raises its high tariff walls still higher.

The new tariff, despite the hue and cry, is far less onerous than are the tariffs of many foreign countries. Ever since the war, Europe has been engaged in a race to see which country could make it hardest for other nations to get their products in. Canada has a three-way tariff, with every commodity carrying three rates, the lowest of which applies to British goods and the highest to products of the United States. Spain has probably the highest tariff wall in the world; all the other European nations have high tariffs, almost without exception. And all are aimed chiefly at the United States. It is practically impossible for an American concern to sell its shoes in Argentina because of tariff; other South American countries also are beginning to build up their tariffs in an effort to stimulate domestic production.

Just how much real resentment there is against the new tariff is difficult to estimate. Naturally, with a tariff bill pending, foreign governments whose industries found American trade a big factor registered protests. That is done every time a tariff bill is introduced. It was done in 1922. But after the 1922 tariff went into effect, there was little change in the foreign trade situation; the increased rates did not stop the flow of goods into the United States, and it is not believed that the 1930 rates will keep out foreign products to any great extent, except in one or two lines.

Now that the tariff is an accomplished fact, it is a question as to whether foreign countries will attempt "retaliation." We have some retaliatory provisions in our own tariff bill, and most countries would rather sell their goods to us, even at high tariff rates, than be prevented from entering our market at all. Talk of retaliation is likely to die a natural death, for with the American market closed to them more than one European industry would find it necessary to restrict operations materially.

Films, however, in recent years have been fair game throughout all 12 months. It was not tariff that stimulated France to attempt to bar American pictures a few years ago, nor was it tariff that led several other countries to attempt restriction. Foreign governments do not like the "Americanization" effects of our films upon their people, but their people prefer our films to the native product. Future agitation against our pictures may be attributed to the tariff, but, according to observers in Washington, the real reasons will be the same that have prevailed for a number of years.

The Height of Pessimism

"From the headlines and the shouting on the financial pages one could believe that the movie factories are working day and night. As a matter of fact, almost a thousand theatres have closed this year; several chains have been forced to reinstall orchestras in the pit. Vaudeville is more and more needed to help the movie bring in the nickels. The independent exhibitor is in a bad way. The only progress the movies are making is in Wall Street, where they are playing checkers with voting stock."—Judge.

Schnitzer Due In England to Install 'Changes

London—Joseph I. Schnitzer, president, and Ambrose Dowling of RKO were slated to arrive here Tuesday in connection with plans for establishment of a system of British exchanges, first reported by Motion Picture News.

J. I. Schnitzer

Sol G. Newman, it is expected, will handle the proposed new exchange system. RKO product heretofore has been handled by Ideal Films, Ltd. Seven exchanges are to comprise the British system, it is stated.

End of Blind Booking Is Sought by Germans

Berlin—Abolition of blind booking is advocated by the German exhibitor association. The group recently called upon its membership to back such a program at the Brussels film conference. The Holland delegation withdrew from the conference in protest against high film rentals and exploitation methods.

Maxwell Heads New Chain

London—Associated Cinema Properties, headed by John Maxwell, has been formed to operate a British theatre circuit. Five houses already have been purchased. The new chain plans to work in association with A.B.C. and British International Pictures.

American Firms Plan Merger of French Interests

Paris—Merging of United States interest in France is declared being contemplated. The series of resignations of French representatives of American firms is regarded as presaging a switch to the merger policy. The latest resignation is that of M. Schloss, Warner-First National representative in Paris.

Australian Musicals Held Killed by Talking Films

San Francisco—American-made talkies have "killed" musical comedies in the Antipodes, according to John A. Shaw, director of a picture theatre at Sydney, Australia, who arrived in San Francisco on a tour of America to study the film industry.

"Musical comedies are almost unknown in Australia," Shaw said. "The American films are extremely popular. In fact 50 per cent of the people enjoy your talkies and say so, while the other 50 per cent enjoy them apparently, but later give them the 'razz,' as you say."

London Showmen Meeting

London—Exhibition of new developments in the equipment field will feature the meeting at Blackpool Monday of exhibitors of this section. The sessions will continue from June 23 to 28.

Wardour Films To Handle Ufa Sales in England

London—Wardour Films, Ltd., has taken over distribution of the Ufa product in Great Britain. Some 12 Ufatone talkers will be released during 1930-31 under terms of the deal. The average production cost of the films is said to be $100,000. Arthur Dent and Herr von Theobald closed the deal. One of the early releases will star Emil Jannings.

Threat of Industrial War Stalks Meet To Settle U. S. American Patent Battle

Opening "Hell's Angels"

Sid Grauman, Hollywood impresario, plans to come to New York, following San Francisco presentation of "Hell's Angels," Howard Hughes production, which he plans to open within the next few weeks.

Grainger Wins Spur as A Producer on Fox Lot

Hollywood—Edmund, pride of the Grainger clan and only son of James R. of Fox, is out of the assistant director classification and today bears the title of associate producer.

EDMUND GRAINGER

Grainger's duties concern foreign talker versions which Fox is dipping into more actively after exercising extreme caution and considerable watchful waiting before the leap was made. He has been assisting Berthold Viertel for about a year and, prior to that, was assigned to other directors on the Fox lot.

Nelly Wants $200,000 for Al's "Yosel" Yodling

Al Jolson's yodling of "Yosel" may cost Warners exactly two hundred grand.

Nelly Cassman, a little Jewish girl who spends part of her time fishing for the Roumanian government, and the rest writing songs, has taken on a new sideline, effective this week, when counsel was retained by Nelly to prepare a complaint against Warners in a suit for accounting on profits of "Jazz Singer," in which Jolson sang the "Yosel" song.

Nelly wants to show Warners that she's entitled to about $200,000 profits.

Rowland Committee Sits Tight on Pathe Tangle

The protective committee of Pathe stockholders headed by Richard A. Rowland has not abandoned its fight to secure control of the company, but is marking time while plans for a new line of attack are formulated. This is expected to take the form of a stockholders' suit charging mismanagement of the company's affairs.

Mannix Gentle, Ask the Wife; She Claims Plenty

Hollywood—Edward J. Mannix is a gentle cuss, if you can believe his wife's charges made in her bill for divorce. She says her husband beat her, kicked her and slapped her in their Beverly Hills home, wherever that is.

Confab Under Way at Paris With Will Hays As Its Chairman

Paris—Possibility of an industrial war if there is no reciprocal patent agreement in Germany stalks conferences on the subject, which got under way here yesterday, with Will H. Hays presiding. Hays said he was serving as arbiter at urgent request of the American and German groups.

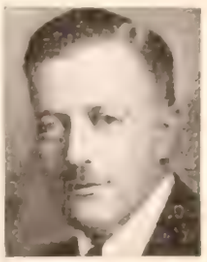
Both forces are geared for a battle on the issue. The Americans, John E. Otterson of Electrical Research Products, C. J. Ross of RCA Photophone and John C. Graham of Paramount, want the German market open to all films recorded by their respective systems. The Germans, Milton Diamond of Tobis and Fritz Lieschen and Dr. Emil Myer of A.E.G. (German General Electric), are holding out for a reciprocal deal for their films in America and demanding a straight three per cent cut of German grosses of films of the companies concerned.

The conference, Hays said, he hopes will result in a sympathetic understanding "and promote the will to co-operate." The best interests of those involved dictate an American-German accord in the matter, he added. The situation has been complicated by Warners' coup in closing a deal for exclusive rights to show Warner and First National product in Germany.

Second of Series of Suits In Lab Patent War Starts

Wilmington—Declared to be the second of a series of patent suits, Cinema Patents Co., a Consolidated Film Laboratories subsidiary, has brought patent infringement action against the Craft Film Laboratories of Brooklyn. Steve Devoe, Harry Glickman and Nat Saland are named co-defendants.

Will H. Hays



Arbiter in the discussions now under way in Paris out of which settlement of the sound patent war in Europe may be reached.

Jealousy?

London—A naturalist has recorded the utterances of an accomplished parrot for a talking film. Which prompts one of Lunnon's fan sheets to chirp: "If you close your eyes, it is difficult to believe you are not listening to a leading star."

5 Serial Line-up Is Confirmed by Reisman

Confirming the exclusive Motion Picture News announcement during the New York Pathe convention that five serials are to be made for 1930-31 release by Pathe, Phil Reisman, general sales manager, has returned to the home office, following wind-up of the series of sales meetings held by the company.

PHIL REISMAN

The company now is completing 25 per cent of the 20 pictures on the 1930-31 line-up, he said. Production is under supervision of E. B. Derr, who last week was elected president of the company.

Plans now are being completed for the first serial on the program, which will be ready for release in September. Reisman expects that Pathe will remake "The Perils of Pauline" as a talker serial. Detective, animal, railroad and outdoor serials are contemplated.

Dream Shattered, Bristol Dead in New Haven at 70

New Haven—After spending more than $1,000,000 to develop Bristolphone, disc device, only to have it flop after a head start over most other independent sound projectors in the field, William Bristol is dead here at the age of 70. He began working on his sound device in 1915.

30 Per Cent Tax Against U. S. Firms in Australia

Canberra, Australia—The government on Thursday passed a law taxing remittances and gross earnings accruing from exhibition of American pictures 30 per cent. About $2,500,000 is expected to go to the government under the impost.

Photophone Maps Drive For Small Houses in U. K.

London—E. Gilbert has been named managing director of the British subsidiary of RCA Photophone. C. J. Ross, executive vice-president of the American company, recently was here to map a sales campaign for small house equipments. Ross was en route to the conference on sound film patents scheduled at Geneva.

Increase in Deposits to Be Result of Chicago Conference; Code Is Adopted

Branch Managers to Be Held Responsible for Credits to Exhibitors

Chicago—Extension of demands for deposits from exhibitors is slated as a result of a general meeting here of branch managers, their assistants, salesmen and bookers. New credit rulings of Film Boards of Trade were outlined at the sessions. Exchangemen at the meetings agreed upon a single interpretation in order that credit rules may be enforced uniformly throughout the territory.

Branch managers were agreed that this interpretation means more deposits. The new rulings throw responsibility for credit directly upon the shoulders of the managers. If credit is granted an exhibitor who is rated "C. I." and this exhibitor does not live up to his contract, the responsibility for the infraction is the manager's, the film men were told. In consequence, any exhibitor having a poor credit rating will be required to make a deposit in the future.

At the same meeting, the exchange men adopted a proposal submitted by a Film Board committee which incorporated rules of conduct for film salesmen designed to increase the effectiveness of the Credit Committee's rulings and to eliminate the "cutthroat tactics which have been used here in the past." Primarily, the conduct catechism is an effort to command respect among salesmen for the other fellow's contract. Only in this way, the exchange men say, can film selling be elevated to a straight business plane.

Stress Contract Sanctity

In this respect, salesmen are requested to discourage any and all contract violations. Frequent instances of salesmen encouraging exhibitors to jump a competitor's contract in order to make a sale have been brought to light. Adherence to the rules, film men believe, will not only reduce the number of shows left on the floor for this reason, but will also tend to reduce the exchanges' selling costs. They point out that, in cases of contract violations in the past, it has been necessary to sell the exhibitor two or more times on a picture which he has failed to pick up.

Critics of the salesmen's catechism point out that no provisions are made for the enforcement of its rulings and that, in consequence, its potential value depends solely upon the degree of seriousness with which it is accepted by the salesmen and exhibitors. It is highly improbable, these critics declare, that a salesman with a good production record behind him, found guilty of an infraction of the rules, would be subject to any very severe penalty from his manager. At the same time, they say, it is obviously impossible to impose any penalty whatever upon an exhibitor responsible for an infraction.

Nevertheless, the conduct code is to be given a fair tryout locally and, in the event it proves successful, local film board members believe it may be adopted nationally by the Hays organization.

Protection Suit Forecast

Philadelphia—Restraint of trade action against certain exhibitors is planned by a member of the M. P. T. O. of eastern Pennsylvania, southern New Jersey and Delaware, as a result of their reported contemplated action of selling product away from his theatre. The move is part of the protection fight planned by the exhibitor association. An internationally-known attorney is being engaged to prosecute the association's fight on protection. His name, for the present, is being withheld.

63,507 Playdates Piled Up as Sam Morris Tribute

Warner branches piled up a total of 63,507 playdates during Morris Month in May, a check-up shows. The observance is an annual tribute to Sam E. Morris, head of distribution for the company. Nat Baier, Albany manager, won the playdate trophy, while Charles Gilmour, Denver, was awarded the Sam E. Morris trophy for the greatest amount of May business. The New York branch won the Claude Ezell trophy and the Minneapolis branch the Max E. Milder trophy. The Allen Trophy, for the best record in Canada, was won by Charles Osborn of Montreal.

Northwest Competition Is Narrowing Down

Aberdeen, S. D.—Narrowing down of competitive situations is being continued by Paramount Publix, which has taken over the Orpheum, State and Lyric, heretofore operated by H. L. Walker. The city was one of the few semi-keys remaining in this territory where Paramount has opposition. Others are Sioux Falls, S. D., and Bemidji.

Up to Field Force

Film rentals are to be payable four days in advance of shipments under a provision of the new standard contract, tentatively agreed to at recent meetings of the contract committees. Under the interpretation, the advance payment is to be required unless exhibitors have established a credit rating with the home office of the company concerned. Establishment of this rating will be largely up to the branch managers and salesmen, who will recommend or disapprove to their home offices such leniency to the exhibitor.

Tiffany Clan in Chi for 3 Day Sales Convention

Chicago—Tiffany home office executives, division and branch managers from all sections of the country and Canada are arriving here for the company's annual sales convention which opens at the Congress Hotel on Monday. Final convention arrangements were completed in the early part of the week by Henri Ellman, Mid-West division manager.

Home office executives scheduled to arrive a day in advance of the meeting are L. A. Young, president; Grant L. Cook, executive vice president; Oscar L. Hanson, general sales manager; Carl J. Goe, assistant general sales manager; Arthur Lee, foreign manager; A. L. Selig, advertising and publicity director, and Charles M. Steele, comptroller. About sixty representatives will attend.

Famous Canadian May Meet at Niagara Falls

Toronto—Annual meeting of eastern managers of Famous Players Canadian Corp. may be held in Niagara Falls, Ont., again this year, it is declared. Executives of the circuit are declared averse to holding it at Montreal as suggested, feeling there are too many counter attractions in a city that size.

FitzPatrick Produces Short for the Fourth

James A. FitzPatrick has completed a short, entitled "Independence Day," for use on the Fourth of July. The clay carvings feature reproductions of Benjamin Franklin, Thomas Jefferson, John Hancock, Roger Sherman, John Adams and others, and there is a background of colonial melodies.

Fazenda Starts July 5

Hollywood—Larry Darmour launches production of the Louise Fazenda series of talker comedies on July 5 when "Pure and Simple" goes into work. Start of the series has been delayed pending completion of Miss Fazenda's engagement at R-K-O in "Leathernecking."

Exhibitor Knows Where He Stands On Films Under New Protection Schedule

Los Angeles Clearance Plan To Be Used as Nation's Model

Los Angeles—Ushering in what is expected to be a new era of understanding in booking conditions among exhibitors and distributors of this territory, and for the first time supplying exhibitors with definite information on when pictures are available to him, the new zoning schedule adopted by distributors and exhibitor has been put into effect here.

The new schedule was drafted upon recent visit to the Coast of Charles C. Pettijohn. Its adoption is expected to eliminate alleged causes of government action in its criminal case against Fox West Coast and a number of distributors, on a charge of excessive protection which had the effect of freezing out independent exhibitors. It also is expected to mark the end of overbuying in this territory.

The schedule of clearances adopted here is to serve as a model for the United States, marking the first time there has been any standardization of zoning.

Under the plan, the committee which drafted the schedule is being continued, so that changes may be made in the system, as needed. The continuing committee consists of Carroll Peacock, L. L. Bard and Jack Sullivan. Alternates are Jack Brower, R. D. Whitson and Port Major. Lola Gentry, Film Board secretary, is secretary of the committee.

Full text of the new agreement follows:

ZONING AND CLEARANCE
for
LOS ANGELES AND SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA TERRITORY AS ADOPTED AND APPROVED MAY 20, 1930.

Using various present existing zoning plans and suggestions as a basis, and taking into consideration several principles agreed upon at the first meeting, May 12th, we submit the following as a fair Zoning and Clearance plan for all parties concerned.

A CONTINUING ZONING COMMITTEE has been established for the Season 1930-31 composed as follows:

REGULAR: C. N. Peacock, L. L. Bard, J. J. Sullivan.

ALTERNATE: N. H. Brower, R. D. Whitson, E. Port Major.

Lola Adams Gentry, Secretary of the Committee.

The above Committee will meet at stated periods hereafter to be determined by that Committee, to hear any complaint or complaints of any exhibitor or distributor in this territory, with reference to this Zoning and Clearance Schedule; and to determine what is a proper and fair Zoning or Classification of any theatre not covered herein or that may be constructed during such season.

ANY THEATRE OWNER NOT AFFILIATED with any organization shall have the right to designate any other non-affiliated theatre owner to act with this Continuing Zoning Committee with reference to the determination of a classification or a complaint, with power to vote.

ALL FIRST RUN ADMISSION PRICE CLEARANCES of Los Angeles City Zone, must complete their run within 14 days of availability.

In any given Zone there is a minimum of 7 days' clearance between first and second, or second and third run, or any subsequent runs, regardless of admission price charged, except those theatres non-competitive one with the other, as indicated throughout this Schedule by an asterisk (*).

DEFINITION OF WHAT SHALL BE CONSIDERED ACTUAL ADMISSION PRICES FOR DOWNTOWN HOUSES:

Downtown admission prices for other than first run houses shall be determined by averaging the day and evening prices, by adding both together and dividing by two; and the result shall be the determined admission price. In any event where the resulting figure is a fraction of 5¢, the larger figure prevails.

ALL PLANS OR DEVICES TO AVOID A TRUE ADMISSION CLASSIFICATION by any theatre by the issuance of a ticket or tickets, or any other device to admit one or more persons; or by the giving of premiums, etc., such plans or evasion may call for reclassification of such theatre by the Continuing Zoning Committee, and the actual value of each such admission shall fix such classification.

IT IS SUGGESTED BY THE ZONING COMMITTEE THAT THE FOLLOWING CLAUSE BE INCORPORATED IN CONTRACTS WHERE DEEMED NECESSARY FOR THE 1930-31 SELLING SEASON:

If prior to the expiration of the terms of this License Agreement, a Zoning and Protection Plan for the territory in which the exhibitor's theatre is located, shall be generally adopted by the Distributors and Exhibitors in said territory, then and in such event and from the time of the adoption of such a plan, the protection period, if any herein specified for the exhibitor's theatre, shall be substituted for the protection period hereinabove granted the exhibitor, with the same effect as if herein fully set forth.

DE LUXE ZONE—Any theatre running on a two-a-day policy—the clearance to be left to the discretion of the Distributor and Exhibitor.

ZONE 1—First run Los Angeles. To have protection over all towns within a radius of 25 miles. Those towns out of the 25 mile radius to be played as Zoned hereinafter.

A minimum of 21 days' clearance over second run theatres charging an admission of 65¢ outside of the city zone where first run played, this run to be completed within 35 days after first run closing.

50¢ theatres shall be privileged to play immediately following 65¢ run, but must complete run within 42 days after first run closing.

In the event that a picture does not receive a 65¢ second run, it shall be available for 50¢ houses 28 days after first run closing, the run to be completed within 42 days after first run closing.

40¢ houses to play 42 days after L.A. first run closing.

35¢ houses to play 56 days after L.A. first run closing.

30¢ houses to play 70 days after L.A. first run closing.

25¢ houses to play 84 days after L.A. first run closing.

20¢ houses to play 105 days after L.A. first run closing.

15¢ houses to play 140 days after L.A. first run closing.

10¢ houses to play 175 days after L.A. first run closing.

Paramount
Warner's Downtown	Loew's State
United Artists	R K O Orpheum
Criterion	R K O
Warner's Hollywood	Boulevard

Any other theatre playing a picture or pictures first run.

ZONE 2—Second Run in the City of Los Angeles. Theatres charging a general admission of 65¢ can play not sooner than 21 days after first run closing, but must complete the run within 35 days after first run closing.

ZONE 2-A—Fox Palace, Tower, Million Dollar, Bard's 8th Street, Rialto, Alhambra.

ZONE 2-B—Cameo, Arcade, Broadway, Bard's Hillstreet.

NOTE: To determine admission price classification of theatres in Zone 2-A and 2-B see definition of admission prices for downtown houses on Page 1.

ZONE 3—Uptown, *Forum, *Wilshire, Victoria, Arlington, Gem, *Parisian, Ambassador.

ZONE 4—Belmont, Ravenna, *Melrose, Rampart, *Parisian.

ZONE 5—Ritz, La Brea, Fairfax, Larchmont.

ZONE 6—Westlake, Alvarado, Playhouse, Chotiner's Parisian, Ambassador, Empire, De Luxe.

ZONE 7—*Georgia, Pico, Sun, Washington, *Royal.

ZONE 8—Egyptian, Hollywood, Iris, Fil-

Equality in Zoning

Los Angeles—Equalization of the zoning of every theatre without regard to affiliations is provided for in the protection schedule put into effect here. The schedule is expected to be used as a model for the nation. Under the new plan, every exhibitor knows just when he will play any given picture, because he is on the same clearance basis as a similar house in another zone.

Adoption Expected to Eliminate Alleged Causes of Gov't Act in Fox Suit

Special Privileges Out?

The end of special privilege in the industry, so far as affiliated houses are concerned, is being interpreted in the protection schedules now being drafted for adoption in a number of key cities throughout the country. Chicago and Los Angeles already have agreed upon the new zoning plans.

A Model for Nation

While the Southern California zoning schedules made public exclusively by MOTION PICTURE NEWS concern only that territory, their fundamentals will be used as the basis for clearances throughout the entire United States. Work on the schedules is under way in a number of cities.

marte, Marcal, Carmel, Marquise, Sherman, Granada.

Discuss Protection

Milwaukee—Distributors and exhibitors meet Monday and Tuesday in connection with the drafting of protection schedules here and in the balance of the state. Independents are particularly concerned over showings in subsequent run houses of affiliated circuits prior to their first runs in the suburbans and at lower prices. This practice is cutting into suburban business considerably.

New Downstate Illinois Protection Schedules Sought After Deadlock

Revenge Is Sweet

They say that Mr. De Mille was forced to say "Yes" eight times to the census taker the other day.

Tough Job Ahead Educating Exhibs

Los Angeles—A survey of exchanges and exhibitors in this territory reveals the fact that perfect operation of the new zoning plan is admittedly hard to accomplish due, for the most part, to familiarity with and custom built around the old zoning plan.

There are many showmen who are not satisfied with their present classifications, but the general feeling is that the plan is a step in the right direction.

It is practically unanimously agreed that the plan is a step forward and that responsibility rests with the continuing committee to clarify and change minor points for betterment of the situation.

Mapping of the zoning plan was a herculean task. The continuing committee has already accomplished the rezoning of about 15 Los Angeles houses when the original plan failed to work out in practice as it appeared it would on paper. The committee will continue its meetings regularly for consideration of all complaints and requests for rezoning because of peculiarities of individual cases.

Seattle Working On Protection

Los Angeles—Seattle, Portland and then San Francisco, in the order named, will work out new zoning arrangements similar to the plan covering Southern California.

Lola Gentry, secretary of the Film Board of Trade here, is now in Seattle aiding exhibitors and exchangemen to draft the new form for that territory. Following its completion, Miss Gentry will stage repeaters in Portland and 'Frisco.

Illinois Exhibs in Co-operative Combine

Chicago—Another unit of Allied States Ass'n, the Illinois Independent Theatre Owners, has formed a co-operative to buy pictures for it membership. The buying combine will operate as Illinois Co-operative Theatre Service Corp. At a future date, the new company may undertake co-operative buying of supplies also. Twenty-three exhibitors are initial subscribers to the booking service.

Circuit for Stock Shows Planned by Equity Head

Development of a four-town circuit, over which stock plays would appear simultaneously, and establishment of 28 one-night stands is provided for in plans of Frank Gilmore, president of Actors' Equity Ass'n., he declared at a meeting in New York of the Producing Managers' Ass'n.

Meetings to Continue Till Accord Is Reached, Pettijohn Says

Chicago—Rezoning of downstate Illinois was being attempted here Thursday, at a second meeting, called in an effort to break the deadlock, which resulted when Monday's meeting rejected the proposed schedules, tentatively agreed upon last week.

CHARLES C. PETTIJOHN

Submission of the original downstate plan of protection based on the population of key cities met with immediate and violent objections from the independents, despite the fact that it had been announced in advance that representatives of the faction had agreed on major points of the plan, which was interpreted as a vast improvement over the old order of protection in the state.

Major objection to the downstate plan centered about the maximum protection territory proposed by it and the handling of overlapping protection territories. The new plan advocated one mile of protection for every 1,000 of population in key cities (those of 3,000 or over), with a maximum protection territory of 40 miles. Representatives of the independents declared that this radius was too large and defeated its own purpose by giving too liberal protection to the larger cities in their overlapping territories.

JACK MILLER

Few changes, except in consideration of individual outlying theatres, were suggested in the present metropolitan protection system. However, a proposal to prohibit double or triple feature programs unless all of the features are over one year old met with strenuous objections from representatives of the Chicago independents.

AARON SAPERSTEIN

The double feature program is both common and popular here at all seasons. Many of the small exhibitors regard it as their sole hold on paying business. The double feature bill, they protested, would be rendered impotent by presentations over a year old.

Refusal to compromise on this issue in-

Drafting Schedules

Philadelphia—Protection schedules are being drafted by exhibitors and distributors here.

M. P. T. O. Squawks Over Two Points

Los Angeles—"Fair and equitable to all," is how exhibitor leaders describe the zoning protective agreement to MOTION PICTURE NEWS, although Lou Bard, M. P. T. O. chief, takes exception to two "major faults."

"It is the best thing that could be gotten up for a starting point," R. D. Whitson told MOTION PICTURE NEWS. Whitson, who is an ex-president of the exhibitors' association, stated.

"It's as fair as could be drawn with the interests of all parties involved considered. The basis of continuing committee operation provides means for settling future difficulties and complaints, besides changes and readjustments deemed necessary in view of rapid changes in conditions."

Harold Franklin said he believes the new zoning plan meets with every requirement and is fair and equitable to all.

Committee an Important Factor

Fundamentally, I believe in a zoning proposition as a fair method," declared Lou Bard, president of the Theatre Owners Ass'n, "as far as individual theatres are concerned.

"The zoning plan is better than no zoning at all. Time will have to allow for functioning so defects can be discovered and steps taken to remedy them. One important factor for smooth operation of the plan is the power of continuing committee to straighten out individual cases that arise as a whole. The plan should work out, and success is assured if the representatives of distributors and Fox West Coast theatres circuit approach problems with a fair attitude for common good.

Charges Discrimination

"Continuing committee adjustments allow more time for consideration of individual cases of zoning than could have been given when the plan was originally formulated. Some exhibitors are not satisfied, but most of these cases will be adjusted satisfactorily through individual and careful consideration by the zoning committee. I feel that second, third and fourth runs downtown are being discriminated against through the clause in the zoning plan which fixes admission price classification on the average of matinee and night prices, whereas all other zoning is based on night prices only.

"The 14 differential for subsequent first runs to book available product, together with a seven-day clearance of another similar price house in the same zone, appears too heavy protection and penalizes certain houses. If these two major faults are corrected, together with minor individual zonings on account of local conditions prevailing, the plan will be practically perfect and operate as desired."

Limit Protection?

Chicago—Overlapping of protection is the big point of difference in the zoning committee conferences. It now is being proposed by independents to limit protection to a maximum of 40 miles. This would give towns of 3,000 and over a radius of one mile of protection for each 1,000 of population.

Stage Shows Growing in Popularity; Paramount Gathering Units on Coast

Rarin' for Garyn

Pat Garyn and his sales force at National Screen Service are being brought closer together through the medium of a house organ recently started. "The En-Ess-Ess Family" is the name of the new publication, four issues of which have been published. The latest issue is devoted to Jack Fier and his Californians.

Publix Restores Stage Shows to Fight Depression

San Antonio—Publix has extended its stage shows to the South. Because of a flop in box-office receipts, which most theatre managers believe is due to the business depression, but which the higher Publix officials attribute to elimination of stage shows, it has been determined to return to them.

Officials of Publix theatres in the four key cities of Texas—San Antonio, Dallas, Fort Worth and Houston—have been notified that stage shows will be resumed. The Texas in San Antonio is advertising the resumption of stage shows, starting Friday.

The Empire in this city, an independent house, also hit by the business depression, has installed a symphony orchestra. It is composed of Mexican musicians, a number of them having been former members of the Mexican national orchestra.

Fox 17-Week Earnings Leap Nearly $2,000,000

For the 17 weeks ended April 26 Fox Films report net earnings of $5,722,000, before interest and charges, compared with $3,904,000 in the corresponding period of last year. Net was computed after writing off $6,966,000 on negative and positive film for the year 1930, against $4,765,000 in 1929.

Byrd Shots to Be Used in New Bancroft Film

Paramount is planning to utilize the overage on the Byrd South Pole film. There are some 70,000 feet of film left over, it is stated, following editing of the picture by Julian Johnston. This footage probably will be used in George Bancroft's new talker. Because of reported story difficulties, the picture will be a story of the Arctic, rather than the Antarctic, where it was filmed.

Botsford Finds Tendency Toward Flesh Draws on Tour of Western Houses

San Francisco—Return of stage shows to popular favor is a tendency being noted throughout the country, A. M. Botsford, publicity chief for Paramount Publix theatres, declared on his visit here. The publicist, accompanied by Charles C. Perry, new western director of company houses, was on an inspection tour of Coast theatres.

At present, Botsford said, but four theatres are getting Publix stage shows, but it is expected that further additions will be made. Under the plan, units are to be produced on the Coast for showing in western houses.

Perry, a veteran of the Saxe and Finkelstein & Ruben circuits, replaced R. E. Crabill as head of the western houses of the chain. E. A. Smith, another Twin City showman, has been appointed Perry's division manager.

Publix Officials Watch Stage Show Resumption

Seattle—In advance of the return of Publix stage shows to the Paramount theatres in Pacific Coast cities, seven executives of the Publix Theatres Corp. visited this city to be present at the Seattle Paramount theatre's opening stage show next week.

Included in the group were C. C. Perry, newly appointed Coast division manager; J. W. Fraser, division director of maintenance; Maxwell Shane, Pacific Coast director of advertising; A. M. Botsford, General director of advertising and publicity; A. C. Ackerman, Pacific Coast booking manager; Ed. A. Smith, Pacific Coast division manager; and Harry Rubin, general manager of projection.

The visiting executives conferred with Robert Blair, Pacific Northwest division director; William A. Hartung, manager of the Seattle Paramount; and Robert Armstrong, manager of Publix's local Metropolitan theatre.

Monte Blue Flies to Indiana for Exercises

Knightstown, Ind.—Making the trip by airplane from Hollywood, Monte Blue, film actor, attended commencement exercises at the Indiana Soldiers and Sailors orphans' home here. The actor, who is a graduate of the home, arrived in the morning for the commencement and remained during the entire exercises. He also visited Indianapolis.

Bader Bets

"The Newsy News" is the way Dave Bader, veteran Universalite, describes it in dropping a line about "winning a couple of bob" on the English derby. He attended with John Drinkwater, who is to write the biography of Carl Laemmle.

Fear Kontingent

Berlin—Conferences now are under way to determine the new German kontingent regulations. Exhibitors are declared almost unanimous in demands for free trade, so far as films are concerned. Despite this, there will be restrictive measures, the new regulations scheduled to become effective by July 1.

Gen'l Jilts "Vet" Sound Machines For New Devices

General Talking Pictures will no longer sell the DeForest clinic models, the "Special," "Challenger" and "Monarch," junking these types in favor of new machines.

The "Hollywood Junior" is made available under the new plan for theatres seating up to 1,000, selling via three plans, a no down, $37.50 weekly, two-year proposition as the initial offer, or 10% partial payment with order, 15% upon installation and the rest spread over 52 weeks. The third offer is cash, 25% at signing and balance when installed.

For houses over 1,000 seats, the "Hollywood Standard" is to be sold on a no down proposition, charging additional where disc is required.

Collins, Sullivan and Duffy in Agency Field

Hollywood—Collins, Sullivan and Duffy, Inc., are latest agents and representatives to open offices on the coast, with quarters in the Roosevelt Hotel. Collins was associated with the New York RKO vaude booking office; Sullivan was a New York agent and Duffy has owned various night clubs in New York, besides being the manager of Primo Carnera, Italian heavyweight.

Cut in Rentals Seen in Canada As Permanent

Toronto—Film rentals are being decreased by distributors, independent exhibitors report. They say that rentals have been cut one-third in recent weeks, with a pronounced easing off in second and third run rentals.

Short subjects have decreased appreciably in price, it is stated. Exhibitors are enthusiastic over the lowering of prices and feel that rentals will not be boosted to former levels in fall.

Sudekum Deal For 61 Houses in South Confirmed

Nashville—Crescent Amusement Co., which operates 61 theatres in Tennessee, Kentucky and northern Alabama, has been taken over by Warners, states Spyros Skouras. Deal for the circuit, headed by Tony Sudekum, was announced exclusively last week by Motion Picture News. The deal includes leases and fees to 45 of the properties. Sudekum is to be general manager of the houses.

In addition to the Crescent houses, Warners have acquired a site at Church St. and Fifth Ave., on which will be built a 3,000-seat theatre, which will be part of a 12-story office building project.

Nine theatres comprising the Sudekum group are located here; four are at Bowling Green, Ky.; three at Huntsville, Ala.; three at Hopkinsville, Ky.; three at Dyersburg, Tenn.; three at Decatur, Ala.; three in Gadsden, Ala.; two at Florence, Ala.; two at Fayetteville, Tenn.; two at Madisonville, Ky.; two at Columbia, Tenn.; two at Cleveland, Tenn.; two at Murfyville, Tenn.; two at Union City, Tenn.; two at Alabama, Ala. Other houses are located at Sheffield, Athens and Tuscumbia, Ala.; Tullahoma, Winchester, McMinville, Pulaski, Shelbyville, Lewisburg, Clarksville, Harriman, Murfreesboro, Springfield, Morristown and Ridgely, Tenn.

Other acquisitions by Warners included the Appell Chain of 12 houses in Pennsylvania, the Manos Circuit in Greensburg, Pa., numbering the Manos, Strand and Grand, from Manos Bros., and the Middlesex and Palace of Middletown, Conn. The company is now in complete control of amusements in Middletown.

The Appell circuit includes the following theatres: In York, Pa., the Strand, Capital, Rialto, York and Scenic; in Hanover, Pa., the State, Opera House and Strand; the Majestic in Gettysburg, the Lion in Red Lion, the Dallas in Dallastown and the Seltzer in Palmyra.

Warners have also purchased six lots adjoining the Apollo in Washington, D. C. It is planned to raze the old theatre and construct a new one.

Philadelphia—Warners is reported buying the Seville and Third St., Easton, and to have acquired an option on the Wil-Bor at Wilson Borough. Auditors now are going over the books, it is stated.

25 Per Cent of New Fox Line-Up Ready Sept. 15

Hollywood—Twelve pictures of the 48 on the Fox program for 1930-31 will be completed by Sept. 15, under the production schedule of Sol M. Wurtzel. Five new year pictures have been completed, eight are in production, three are ready for starting and six more will be under way within three weeks.

Daylight Saving Opposed

Syracuse, N. Y.—Theatre managers here are putting up a strong campaign against a proposed daylight saving ordinance.

JOSEPH M. SEIDER

Seider Slated To Resign at N. J. Meeting

Atlantic City—With President Joseph M. Seider determined to carry out his intention of resigning, New Jersey exhibitors are slated to hold their convention here Sunday. Protection is expected to be the highlight of the discussions.

Last year, the New Jersey unit instructed its leaders to launch a Federal suit to determine the legality of extended protection. This move was forestalled by the government's investigations into the situation. The Department of Justice is reported to have requested the association to hold off its suit, pending the outcome of the government inquiry.

8 Merit Awards Decided Upon by M. P. Academy

Hollywood—After first deciding to widen the distribution of annual awards of merit for outstanding achievements in the field of production, the Academy board of directors reversed itself by limiting the total yearly awards to eight.

Achievements to be voted on by Academy members comprise actor, actress, director, art director, cinematographer, writer, outstanding production and "the most valuable scientific contribution to the industry." The latter award is added to the list as voted on last year.

Limitation of the number of awards for each year was decided upon after it was pointed out that wide distribution of the trophy presented for an outstanding achievement would tend to lessen the value of the awards.

Select "Miss Indiana"

Indianapolis — Miss Lorraine Wolf of Evansville was named "Miss Indiana" at the pageant of beauty held in the Indiana theatre here. She will appear in Galveston, Tex., in August. The new Miss Indiana will appear as a special feature of the Indiana stage show for one week.

Warner Buy of Durkee Circuit Now Dropped

Baltimore—Deal of Warners for the Durkee circuit here, which was believed to be closed, has fallen through, it is understood, due to [illegible] terms. This is being evidenced by the fact that the Durkee houses are buying product for next season.

Warners is not planning to acquire or build houses in Maryland, says a statement issued by the company.

Marks Bros. to Operate Warner Chicago Theatres

Chicago—Marks Brothers are [illegible] from buying and building Chicago theatres under terms of their contract with Publix-Balaban & Katz, but there is nothing in the reported agreement to prevent them from operating theatres for some one else, so Louis and Meyer Marks are joining Warners as their theatre operators in this territory.

Warners are lining up a number of theatres in this territory, including the Coston and Federated circuits, and the appointment of the Marks brothers as the company's operators here is in line with this program. The Markses demonstrated in the operation of the Marbro and Granada just how well they know the local situation. These two houses caused plenty of discomfiture to Publix-B. & K. while under Marks management. At the time they sold out to Publix, it was reported, Meyer Marks was to go to the Coast for Publix.

Warners Plan De Luxe Theatre for Newark

Warners have announced plans to erect a de luxe house, constructed expressly for talkers, in Newark. It will cost approximately $2,500,000 and will seat 4,200, according to the plans drawn by Architect John Eberson, who has chosen the Austrian-Baroque style of architecture. The site is Broad and Lafayette Streets.

Twenty-one inch seats, and unusually large space between rows, will be an important feature of the proposed theatre, which will be one of the most spacious in the Warner chain. Acoustical plaster, for the complete absorption of sound, will be placed in all electrical fixtures, and the shape of the auditorium will automatically eliminate sound bounce-backs.

Right Again

Considerable discussion was caused throughout the industry by announcement by Warners that the company is planning to produce sound-on-film pictures. It was last May that MOTION PICTURE NEWS tipped off the industry that the Warners were planning such a step.

No Trend Toward Cut Prices, NEWS Survey Reveals

and tied in with a policy change, the World hiked its scale to 60 cents with vaudeville rounding out the film end of the show. At the State, the 40 cents top is often boosted to 50 cents when the picture warrants it.

Business generally is holding up satisfactorily. No slashes are under consideration.

Matinee Drop Only Change in Baltimore

Baltimore—One change in admissions and that tells the story for Baltimore. The theatre is the Hippodrome, which, as it dropped vaudeville, dropped matinee prices to 25 cents for all seats. The evening scale is 40 cents for the run of the house.

Business Skids in Seattle; Hold Prices

Seattle—Despite the fact that grosses generally are below normal in both chain and independent theatres in the Seattle territory, there have been practically no cases of reduced admissions for several months.

In January, the Fox Coliseum went to a second run policy and reduced top prices from 50 to 35 cents. In February, matinee prices were cut from 50 to 25 cents at Hamrick's Blue Mouse and Music Box. In March, Publix's Metropolitan dropped its top from 60 to 50 cents with no increase in business as a result.

In April, the Orpheum reduced its top price from 75 to 50 cents under the guise of a new summer policy. Since that time no further changes have been made by any theatre of importance, indicating that local prices will remain as is throughout the summer.

Spokane First Runs Cut Scale 15 Cents

Spokane, Wash.—All first-run houses in Spokane have reduced their prices about 15 cents. Individual theatres have trimmed more than that, but in averages, the 15-cent figure holds true.

Stanley Trims in Philly; Indies Standing Pat

Philadelphia—It's difficult to tell which way the situation will jump. The Stanley Company has trimmed admissions in several theatres because of poor business. Independents are standing pat at the minute and no price reductions on their part have been made.

Tacoma Stands Pat

Tacoma, Wash.—No change planned along the Tacoma front. Chain theatres and independents will stand pat on prices. The sliding scale that changes with the hours of the day has considerable to do with the decision. Admissions are lowest from 11 to 1 o'clock, after which matinee prices prevail until five. Then the night scale goes into effect. The Blue Mouse is the only exception which tried the sliding scale, reverted to the straight, fixed admission policy and isn't sorry.

Patronage is off, but summer is held responsible.

Squawking in Dallas, But Cuts Only in Spots

Dallas—Squawks everywhere in this neck of the woods. Box-offices are suffering from financial anaemia and, to hear exhibitors describe it, the disease is virulent.

Robb & Rowley have cut prices in several lemon spots, but reductions are not general. Smaller circuits and independents have standardized on 35 cents from a former scale topped at 50 and 60 cents. Publix and the Griffith Bros. have made some cuts, but these date back some weeks. These two circuits have taken no new action along these lines.

Milwaukee Showmen Ban Price Slashing

Milwaukee—Price slashing is not being considered by local showmen. The only move that savors of such a step is the 25 cent scale prevalent at R-K-O Palace Orpheum, which has been featuring 1,000 balcony seats at that price for matinees.

Heat Hits Canadian B.O., But No Cut Due

Ottawa—There has been no trend toward lower admission prices among the Canadian theatres because of business depression. Dominion exhibitors have been more or less congratulating themselves that trade conditions are no worse than they are.

Intense heat waves have socked box-office receipts, but theatres are crowded on cool days. The solitary instance of reduction in admissions is the case of B. F. Keith's, where the policy had been to show five acts of vaudeville three days a week. When the vaudeville was dropped for the summer, which was a regular procedure, prices were cut 10 cents to conform with the scale for the picture half of the week, the top price becoming 50 cents.

Patronage has dropped, but the weather is held responsible.

Business Seen Holding Up in Oklahoma

Oklahoma City—Oklahoma seems to be free of any move to trim admissions. Conditions being what they are, it is nevertheless the general opinion that theatre business is holding up.

San Fran Showmen To Maintain Scale

San Francisco—They recognize that general business conditions are not good in this city, but exhibitors propose to keep admissions exactly where they are. This applies generally to theatres in San Francisco and the bay cities as well.

Theatres Hit by Golf And Heat in Portland

Portland, Ore.—Chain and independent houses are, in some cases, lowering prices. In others, the lure to attract patronage is taking the form of increased shows at the old scale. Theatres are feeling the slump what with warm weather and competition from miniature golf courses, which are drawing heavily afternoon and evening.

Hamrick's Blue Mouse, a first run, is closing, while some suburban theatres have trimmed to three-day weeks. Others are putting in Tom Thumb golf courses adjacent to their theatres in an effort to keep business going. Vacation time has sent thousands to the seashore, a factor which is contributing its share to the unsatisfactory condition now prevailing here.

Normalcy in Houston; No Slashes Planned

Houston, Tex.—Exhibitors may have slashed or plan to cut admissions elsewhere throughout the country, but no such move is contemplated here, a reporter for MOTION PICTURE NEWS discovered after a survey of the city. Business is described as normal in view of general economic conditions.

Local Conditions Governing Cuts, Poll Discloses

Status Quo to Rule In Providence, R. I.

Providence, R. I.—Exhibitors here have not and do not intend slashing admissions. Business here is regarded as normal for this time of the year.

Charlotte Reports Average Business

Charlotte, N. C.—"Average business" is the consensus of opinion of conditions in this territory. Theatres are not cutting prices and, so far as surface indications tell the story, none will.

Double Features, But No Drop in Albany

Albany—No theatres here have cut admissions. The Ritz, Warner first-run, is swinging into a double feature policy for the summer at no change in admissions, marking first time this house has changed from its policy. It is a week stand.

Reach Only Talking Stage in Kansas City

Kansas City—There have been discussions of price cutting here, but no action has been taken, as yet.

No Cuts Planned In Salt Lake City

Salt Lake City—There will be no reductions of admissions here. None has been made or planned.

Eddie Cantor Appears In "Cock-Eyed News"

The first of a series of novelty one-reel pictures, called "The Cock-Eyed News," in which Eddie Cantor appears, has just been completed by Paramount. This short feature is a take-off on the regular Paramount Sound News, with a variety of travesty scenes, each one ending with a comedy tag.

Business Near Normal

Harrisburg, Pa.—Important houses in this section, both chain and independent, are maintaining winter admissions. This holds true for Reading and vicinity, too.

Theatre managers here declare there is no indication admissions will be cut as the summer progresses. The State, Harrisburg's largest house and operated by Wilmer & Vincent, was closed all of last summer but is operating this year with no shut-down in sight. General theatre business is only slightly under last year.

Attacks Vestal Copyright Bill As Monopolistic

Washington — Un American and monopolistic are charges leveled against the Vestal copyright bill by Rep. Busby of Mississippi, minority member of the patents committee. He contends the measure will bring the United States under domination of other nations with respect to copyright matters. The congressman is opposed specially to the divisible provisions of the copyright measure, under which, he contends, there might be a copyright divided among as many as 28 people, affording opportunity for extortionate demands. Despite this opposition, the bill is expected to be passed by the House at the current session and by the Senate next winter. The United States has only until next August to exercise its privilege of joining the Berne copyright convention.

Paramount Shorts On 30-Day Advance Schedule

A production schedule for 30 days in advance of current production will be maintained constantly by the short subject department under the direct supervision of Larry Kent, it was announced after a meeting of executives of Paramount's New York studio.

Scheduled for early appearance on this new program are Willie and Eugene Howard, the Rythm Bell Hops, Willie West and a number of Paramount featured players, including Ginger Rogers, Charles Ruggles, Frank Morgan and Marion Harris.

Television Feature of N. Y. Amusement Center

Television is to be provided for and developed in the new amusement center to be built for lease to RCA by John D. Rockefeller. The buildings are to run from 48th to 51st Sts., between Fifth and Sixth Aves., New York. The center will represent a reputed investment of $250,000,000 and will contain four theatres, chief of which will be a 7,500-seat picture house, which will be in charge of S. L. (Roxy) Rothafel. The building is to be completed by the fall of 1933.

Allied-Sentry Co-op Deal Is Declared Off

Deal for the co-operative buying of Sentry Safety device by Allied States Ass'n. has fallen through. Under its terms, Allied members were to receive an appreciable reduction on the cost of the fire prevention device, in exchange for urging its membership to use the equipment. Allied units also were to receive a cut to help finance organization work.

Attack 'Solvency' Verdict Favoring Chamberlin Chain

Scranton, Pa.—Verdict that the Chamberlin Amusement Co. is solvent is not in accordance with evidence introduced at the trial of receivership proceedings against the company, is alleged in a petition for a new trial filed by three creditors of the circuit. The petitioners are the Horlacher Delivery Service, Triangle Poster and Printing Co. and William C. Alexander, the latter for the Penn Show Print Co.

The petition contends that witnesses were not properly qualified in the jury trial of the issue at Williamsport and that the trial judge erred when he permitted counsel for the stockholders to say that the jury should "hand back" the property to the stockholders, some of whom are widows and orphans.

Fay and the Warners Bid Each Other Fond Farewell

Hollywood—Frank Fay will leave Warners upon expiration of his present contract within the next few weeks, Motion Picture News learns. Fay, stage comedian and master-of-ceremonies, was brought to the Coast about 18 months ago for feature comedies and musicals.

Censorship Gets Editorial Slams, Hays Digest Shows

Opposition to censorship is shown in a digest of editorials printed by 200 newspapers throughout the country. All are opposed to governmental regulation of films in any form, states the Hays association, which made the survey. The editors believe such regulation unconstitutional, impractical and undemocratic, and point out the industry's regulation from within is more effective than legal interference.

Air Circus to Exploit "Hell's Angels" in N. Y.

Wayne Pierson, handling "Hell's Angels" for Caddo Co., is preparing to stage an air circus over New York City as an exploitation stunt for the forthcoming metropolitan opening in July. During the week of the premiere the circus will perform various stunts over Manhattan, some of the aviators to perform being among the 78 pilots used in the air scenes in the picture.

Ross Sues for Publix Deal on "Unborn Child"

Minneapolis—Suit against Windsor Pictures has been instituted by Mark Ross, who owns 75 per cent of distribution rights to "Her Unborn Child" in this territory. His action follows a national deal on the picture with Paramount Publix.

This deal, it is alleged, made necessary a settlement of Ross' claim against the circuit for $5,300 as Ross could not prosecute for alleged violation of copyright without authority from Windsor. Ross is seeking the difference between the settlement figure and $12,600. Meanwhile, he is holding Windsor's 25 per cent of the receipts from the local run in escrow, pending settlement of the suit.

Some time ago it was stated that Paramount was due for a battle over "Her Unborn Child" at Minneapolis, due to alleged failure of the circuit to post the paper for the picture, under terms of its sharing contract. This was said to be due to reported action of the Hays office in frowning upon runs of the film in theatres of its members.

Anderson Returns to "U"; Handling Newsreel

R. V. (Dick) Anderson is "back home" at Universal. The veteran sales executive is taking over charge of distribution of Universal's Newspaper Newsreel. Until recently he was sales manager of M. P. Congress, company formed by Frank J. Rembusch, Indiana exhibitor, which has not released any pictures, although in operation since last fall. Anderson formerly was sales manager for International Newsreel, when that subject was released through Universal.

Cincy Critic Ill

Cincinnati—William Smith Goldenburg, dramatic editor of "The Cincinnati Enquirer," recently re-elected president of the Stage and Screen Scribes of America, is absent from his desk on account of illness. Part of his time is being spent at a nearby health resort.

C. E. A. Planning Booking Combines In Great Britain

London—Federation of booking combines among member units of the Cinematograph Exhibitors' Ass'n is reported planned. Exhibitors Booking Service, Ltd., has been organized to buy product on a co-operative basis for British exhibitors.

Fifty in Combine

London—Fifty exhibitors are declared to have joined in Exhibitors' Film Service, Ltd., booking combine. Present activities are confined to Lancashire and adjacent counties.

Stage Shows for Warner Houses In Hollywood

Hollywood—Stage shows go into both Warners' Hollywood and Warners' Downtown theatre next month. Larry Ceballos will have charge of staging the revues and dance numbers that will be presented at the two Warner houses locally.

Ceballos introduced his particular revue routine at the Warner Hollywood when it first opened two years ago, and the stage show was given much of the credit for putting the house over at that time. When business continued at a phenomenal gait with talker productions, the Ceballos stage show was discontinued without apparent effect on grosses. Ceballos was switched to the studio at that time.

At the present time, practically all Los Angeles first runs are feeling the slump in business, with general attitude to revive the stage performances to regain patronage.

Ceballos shows go into Warners' Hollywood on July 4, with the stage revue being inaugurated two weeks later at the Downtown.

Films at N. Y. "U" Branch

Motion pictures, silent and sound, will be used by N. Y. University during the next academic year in conjunction with the course on "Manufacturing Industries," included in the curriculum of the School of Commerce, Accounts & Finance.

During 1929-1930, a number of advertising and industrial films produced by Visugraphic Pictures were shown as an aid in illustrating different subjects of a commercial and merchandising trend.

troduced some bitterness and at least one instance of near violence into this week's sessions.

Pettijohn, who returned to New York following the failure of Monday's meeting to bring about an agreement on any major issue, returned to Chicago today prepared to assist a second time with a settlement.

"The committees will continue to meet," he said, "until an agreement is reached."

Serving on the downstate committee are: Alex Manta, Whiting, Ind.; John Anderson, Morris, Ill., and Jules Ruben of Publix. On the metropolitan committee are: Jack Miller, Chicago exhibitor unit head; Aaron Saperstein, Floyd Brockell and Max Balaban of Publix; James Coston of the Coston circuit; Arthur Schoenstadt of Schoenstadt Theatres; Sidney Meyer of Fox; Emil Stern of Essaness and others. Distributors are: Eddie Grossman, United Artists; Roy Alexander, Columbia, and Harry Leach of Pathe.

Million Dollar Supers Are Few On New List

they would reach considerable totals. Paramount's budget for last year was set in advance at $20,000,000, but production expenditures topped that amount by $2,000,000. Runover was due to sound readjustment and unforeseen developments in expense thereby.

M-G-M's budget for the new season is increased by $1,000,000 over previous years. In addition, about $2,000,000 will be expended for foreign versions of Spanish, French and German talkers.

Similarly, estimated budgets in the accompanying table do not include cost of any foreign talkers, which will undoubtedly be produced in Hollywood. Authorization for negative cost of each foreign version is made individually by practically all companies until foreign production becomes a settled proposition that can be scheduled in advance.

Although United Artists will release a total of 19 features, estimated budget is liable to considerable change. This is occasioned by fact that most producers making pictures for United Artists work with flexible production budgets, which are determined by progress of the picture in most instances. For example, "Whoopee," currently in production, has passed the $1,500,000 mark, and Sam Goldwyn himself does not know what his final cost will be.

side tip which appeared in this publication some weeks ago that the Raskob interest in the two companies might be expected to bring them together on a co-operative working basis if not something more substantial.

Zukor, Warner Rift Widened

It further emphasizes how wide is the rift between Adolph Zukor and Harry M. Warner and, by the same token, stresses the coalition which has sprung up between Paramount and Fox. Last season, Warners and Paramount worked hand in hand on theatre deals and split booking time all over the United States. This year, Fox replaces the Warners as a result of the deal closed during the week. Exactly how much is involved is being held as closely as a secret of state, but one keen observer of trade developments figures the transaction will shoot the Fox gross up $5,000,000 on the 1930-1931 line-up.

Tangle Over Patents Cripples Germany: Theatres Wiring Slowly, Business Off

American Films Not Faring Well—General Conditions There Worrisome

Washington—The German market is in the throes of turmoil. Bickerings over patent rights between Klangfilm-Tobis and Electrical Research are stagnating the industry there.

American sound films, with the exception of Warner product, are consequently not available and Germany has made very few of her own to date. As a result, those exhibitors who have wired their houses are having a difficult time. Others are now playing silent films booked as far back as two years ago.

These are the highlights of the Department of Commerce's report on conditions in Germany covered in an exhaustive survey of the continental markets for 1929. In some instances, names of specific companies are not mentioned, but any student of trade developments will find it easy to read between the lines.

The Germany analysis, prepared jointly by Douglas Miller, Assistant Commercial Attache in Berlin, and George R. Canty, American Trade Commissioner with headquarters in Paris, follows in full:

The delay in settling the patent controversy between German and American electrical concerns is having a stagnating effect upon film conditions in Germany. Obviously, the German industry is falling far behind world progress in sound film developments, and, as a consequence, silent and sound film exhibitor demand are so disproportionate that market conditions are in a state of flux.

German first and second run cinemas are but slowly being wired with German reproduction equipment, the patent controversy precluding sales of American equipment. On the other hand, unwired houses are in so great a majority in Germany that a supply of quality silent films would seem to be necessary for the coming year if profitable demand is to be met. The situation would seem to affect the first and second run houses more than the others, principally because of the lack of sound films and because provincial houses are now receiving films which were arranged for during the past two years, thus making their bookings secure for some little time to come.

German wired theatres are finding it difficult to secure sound films. With one exception the American companies are not releasing their sound product, domestic sound product is slow in making its appearance and other foreign sound films are hardly yet marketable.

The German market is thus restricted to silent features. However, there is a distinct dearth of quality silent films. The Americans have very few of these available, while the German and other product seems to be inferior and are not much in demand.

The German situation continues peculiar. Many American successful silent films, a talkie made in New York in the German tongue and featuring recognized German actors, a doubled version in German of an American all-talkie, and several costly domestic productions, have proved dismal failures, while on the other hand, certain cheap domestically made silent features have attained exceedingly great financial returns.

The consensus among the American film leaders in Germany is that the silent film will have no profitable future once the patent troubles are settled and that its demand now is merely due to the inability of exhibitors to make satisfactory headway in the installation of reproduction sets, together with the exclusion of American features recorded with American processes. The gradual technical improvement shown in the few German-made films so far exhibited, using Tobis Klangfilm equipment, is a sign that the future German sound-film output will stand competition from foreign sources, at least in its own and neighboring markets. The American problem, therefore, will be to furnish a superior product, which should be solved in part by the successful use of color in films.

There were 123 motion-picture theatres (exclusive of reconstructions or renovations) with approximately 80,000 seats built in Germany during 1929, as compared with 157 theatres with 105,000 seats in the previous year. This slackening of cinema construction is due to a glut of small-sized cinemas holding favorable sites in many of the larger German cities. Of these 123 new theatres, six have a seating capacity of 2,000 or more, these being the Lichtburg and Stella Palast in Berlin, the Emelka Palast in Dortmund, the Thalia in Elberfeld, the Ufa Palast in Hamburg, and the Capitol in Cologne. Five have a seating capacity of 1,500 or more; the Eisenhof Lichtspiele in Aachen, the Luxor Palast in Chemnitz, the Schauburg in Gelsenkirchen-Buer, the Schauburg in Hamburg, and the Ufa Palast in Stettin. In addition, 27 have a seating capacity of between 1,000 and 1,500, 6 between 750 and 1,000, and the rest under 750.

Settlement Soon?

Berlin—Dilemma of American talkers in Germany may be solved by conferences of European and United States producers to be held soon at St. Moritz, Switzerland. There has been strong sentiment here against American talkers, culminating in court action against Western Electric by the Klangfilm-Tobis group, on charges of infringement of patents. This action has blocked showing of talkers recorded by the Western Electric system, with the exception of films made by Warners, who negotiated a separate deal with Klangfilm-Tobis.

223 Wired by End of '29

According to a German trade publication, only 223 cinemas in Germany had been wired at the end of 1929 for the reproduction of sound films. This represents but four per cent of the cinemas in the country and only 10.5 per cent of the number of daily operating houses.

Quite naturally, the number and proportion of sound-film cinemas vary in the different German districts. For example, eastern Germany possesses the largest number of wired cinemas, with 58, while northern Germany boasts of the highest proportion of such houses, with 13 per cent. In central Germany, which has a total of 453 cinemas, the ratio of wired houses is lower than in any other part of the country. This is probably due to the fact that most of the theatres there are small ones which can not afford to gamble on the purchase and amortization of the sound apparatus now on the market. As the size and seating capacity of a cinema is an important factor in the purchase of this expensive installation, it is interesting to note that of the 714 theatres in Germany seating less than 300, only nine, or 1.2 per cent, are wired. Of the 678 with 300 to 500 seats, 32, or 4.7 per cent, are wired; of the 383 theatres seating from 500 to 750, 48, or 12.4 per cent, are wired; of the 199 theatres with seating capacity of 750 to 1,000, 60, or 31.3 per cent, are wired; while of the 132 theatres with seating capacity above 1,000, 74, or 56 per cent, are wired. These figures include only the houses operating daily, as those operating irregularly can not, in general, be considered as prospects for sound equipment.

Only 223 German Houses Wired By End of 1929; Industry Is Stagnating

The following table shows, by districts, the wired German theatres.

GERMAN THEATRES WIRED FOR SOUND FILMS

Southern Germany.....	1,195	413	41	10.0

The group comprising theatres with less than 300 seats each has the largest number of cinemas and smallest proportion of wired houses (1.2 per cent)—principally the original and now rapidly becoming inadequate Tobis installations—while the group comprising theatres with more than 1,000 seats each has the smallest total number of cinemas and the largest ratio of wired houses (56 per cent). The smaller houses, unable to support the expenditure for an adequate reproduction system, generally purchase an inferior type because of the price factor, whereas the larger ones, first and second run houses especially, will gradually become wired with better equipment.

Big Town Houses Equipped

Of the total number of 3,136 German cities having cinemas, only 93, or about three per cent, possessed wired houses at the close of 1929. Obviously, the best prospects for an increase in the sound film theatre net are in the larger cities. Of the cities with a population of 100,000 or more, 95 per cent have wired cinemas. These 47 cities have 1,234 daily operating houses, of which 168

Only 4 Talkers, 4 Synchronized, Made Last Year

were wired at the close of 1929. Of the cities with 50,000 to 100,000 population, 50 per cent have theatres equipped for sound films, while only one per cent of these less than 10,000 have such houses.

The ratio of wired houses to the total number of daily operating cinemas also decreases according to the seating capacity. Of the total number of wired houses throughout Germany, 168, or 75 per cent, are in the group of 47 cities with a population of 100,000 or more.

On the other hand, of the total number of daily operating theatres (1,234) in these 47 cities, only 13.6 per cent are wired. In this first category of cities, the largest number of wired houses is in the eastern part of Germany, where 51 of the total of 168 wired, or 30 per cent, are located. Western Germany, with 17 large cities and 198 cinemas, has 34 wired houses. Southern Germany, with 12 large cities and 228 cinemas, has only 27 wires, while northern Germany, with six of the larger cities and 156 cinemas, has about the same number wired. Northern Germany has a greater number of cinemas with over 1,000 seats more than the southern part.

Eastern Germany maintains its leadership in sound-equipped theatre development chiefly because it includes Berlin and four other large cities. Of the total of 488 cinemas in the district, 382, or 78 per cent, are in Berlin, while of the total of 51 sound-equipped houses in eastern Germany, 42, or 82 per cent, are in Berlin. Of the 2,106 daily operating houses in Germany, Berlin has 382, or 18 per cent, and of the 223 wired houses throughout the country, Berlin has 42, or 18 per cent.

Four Talkers Made Last Year

There were 192 films produced in Germany in 1929 by 92 separate production units. Ufa, with 13, produced the largest number of films; Aco followed with 8; and three companies—Homfilm, Aafa, and the German producing branch of an American company—share third place with seven each. Werofilm, Hegewald, Emelka, and Albo show 5 each, and Terra produced four. Thirteen companies produced three films each, 18 companies two each, and 48 companies one each.

Only four sound films and four with synchronization were produced. Of these Ufa produced one in each category; F. P. S., Froelich, and Aafa each produced one sound film and Greenbaum, Terra, and Eichberg each produced a film with synchronized musical effects.

There were 130 German films with a total length of 313,285 meters produced in the first nine months of 1929, and 90 sound pictures with a total length of 23,353 meters, or less than one reel average length. Three short silent films with a length of 379 meters were produced in the entire year, and 728 educational films with a total length of 412,803 meters; most of the latter were industrial or advertising films of various types. Of the sound films only a comparatively small number, probably not more than 10 or 15, were dialogue films; and hardly any of them could be called standard talking pictures.

With the beginning of 1930 the Ufa brought upon the market five sound features with German dialogue and English and other foreign versions, which are of a much more ambitious nature and correspond roughly to the sound features produced by the American companies.

The average cost of the silent features was very low and could be estimated at not more than 120,000 marks. The great majority of the sound films were also made cheaply and would probably not average more than this figure. However, the Ufa sound features previously referred to are reported to have been made at a total cost of $2,000,000, or an average of $400,000 per picture, the most expensive one being "The Blue Angel," which is reported to have cost $700,000.

As stated above, the production of sound shorts has not yet begun in Germany. Only three silent shorts were made last year, and sound shorts aside from educational films will also be unimportant in German production. The German film industry has never had much success with comedies or animated cartoons.

Only two German studios are now equipped for the production of sound features, the Ufa studios at Neubabelsberg and Tempelhof. It is true that attempts have been made to produce sound pictures elsewhere, notably the efforts of the Tobis and some shorts produced by the Klangfilm in their laboratories for experimental purposes. At the present time, however, no other first-class studio exists in Germany outside of the Ufa. The Neubabelsberg studio is the larger and better equipped. It consists of a large building divided into four units with the machinery and control apparatus regulated from the center. These studios have all been constructed entirely for sound-film purposes. In addition, four other studios in Neubabelsberg have been converted to sound production, but they are not so satisfactory. The Tempelhof sound-film studios are smaller and much less important.

American Hold Props

During 1929, 426 feature films were censored in Germany, as compared with 520 during 1928, 521 during 1927, and 515 during 1926. Of those censored during 1929, 192, or 45.1 per cent, represented domestic production, as compared with 221, or 42.5 per cent, during 1928 and 241, or 46.3 per cent, during 1927. American films censored during this period totaled 142, or 33.3 per cent, as against 205, or 39.4 per cent, during 1928, and 192, or 36.8 per cent, during 1927. Other foreign films totaled 92, or 21.6 per cent, as compared with 94, or 18 per cent, during 1928 and 88, or about 17 per cent, during 1927. Thus the German share of the total market supply for 1929 increased by 2.5 per cent, the American share decreased by 6.1 per cent, and the other foreign share increased 3.6 per cent over 1928 figures.

Canadian Schedule Set

Toronto—Regal Films has completed distribution arrangements for the Pathe and M-G-M product for 1930-31. In addition, the company will handle a number of independent films.

This table reflects a gradual decline in the American supply which is a result of the German film-control decree, yet slightly more than 78 per cent of the market supply in 1929 was furnished between domestic and American production. Czechoslovak films seem to be gaining in strength in Germany, but these are seldom shown in first-run houses and are imported more or less on exchange agreement between the professional trades of the two countries, much similar to the manner by which Austrian features get showings in Germany. British films are slightly on the ascendancy in Germany because of German-British joint-production efforts of the past few years. The French film showed a slight decline as compared with previous years. The Russian film has a small but enthusiastic appeal in certain parts of Germany.

The total of German-made features decreased 19, or 13.1 per cent, under the domestic production of 1928. The American total of 142 features reflected a decrease of 63 films, or 30.7 per cent, under 1928 figures. Other foreign films more or less hold their own with the previous year.

Feature Supply Under 1928

The following table shows the total number of features censored during the year by months as divided among German-made, American-made, and other foreign, together with the German monthly percentages.

Grand Total	192	142	92	426	45

It is interesting to note that the German feature supply for the first six months of the year was 54 films less than during the second half. This may be explained by the fact that, during the first half of the year, producers were hesitant in view of the indefinite demand for silent features, and by their inability to produce sound features. At the end of the half year, however, it became apparent that the German-American patent litigation was hindering sound-film developments, and producers, consequently were forced to renew their previous silent-film activities, a situation which should continue until more German cinemas are wired.

So far as actual distribution is concerned, the number of films distributed is somewhat higher than the number of films censored, since it represents certain carry-overs from films censored the previous year. The total number is 439 as against 426 films censored in 1929; 237 films were of foreign origin and 202 of German make. This total compares with 514 films distributed in Germany in 1928, of which 217 were German and 297 foreign.

No less than 79 companies distributed pictures in the German market in 1929. Of these, six distributors handled 20 or more features each, three from 15 to 20 features, five from 10 to 15 each, eight from 5 to 10 each, three handled four features each, nine handled three features each, 13 handled two features each, and 32 one feature each.

Theatre Business Slack

The general film situation in Germany was discouraging during 1929. The number of films produced was less than the preceding year. Imports also fell off, and exports of German films showed a very bad slackening. The total box-office receipts of film theaters in Germany were decidedly less. The main reason for this state of affairs is the introduction of the talking pictures.

With the market practically barred to American talking pictures by the patent litigation already discussed, there was little incentive for German theater owners to install reproducing apparatus, because German talkies have expanded slowly and only at the beginning of 1930 is there evidence that talking pictures will be produced in the German language which will be able to fill German theaters and do a profitable business. Accordingly, the year was practically lost so far as the German film industry is concerned. While the local apparatus companies, Klangfilm and Tobis, have been making some progress in the manufacture and sale of their equipment, their progress is slow because they can not sell many machines to German exhibitors until it becomes evident that there will be a steady supply of good German talkies available.

Trade opinion in Germany has been some what adverse to the sound film. One reason for this is that the market has been barred to most of the American productions, and judgment of the trade in Germany is based upon those few pictures which they have seen and which are long out of date in America.

Certainly only a small number of English-dialogue pictures can be shown in Germany profitably. When the novelty wears off, only German dialogues will be financially possible. It is highly doubtful whether German versions of the English-dialogue films made in the United States will be successful, as the public is quick to detect any flaws in the pronunciation or speech of the actors.

It seems doubtful also that the Germans will be able to export German-dialogue films very far outside their own boundaries, even to small neighboring countries where German is well understood. Local political feeling may bar the use of the German language in such countries. Under these circumstances, it will be seen that the export prospects for German-dialogue films are not too bright, although if they are made on a modest scale and do not cost over $500,000, they can possibly recover their cost under present conditions and show a little profit.

The Klangfilm syndicate is going ahead with wiring German theaters in the coming year. The Ufa theaters are all being wired with this system, and considerable progress will be made in all the other larger cinemas, which will not be able to obtain silent features simply because they are not being made, although many of them would prefer to keep on with the silent films.

The small country theatres will probably be extensively wired with cheap disc systems; for example, the Kinoton, which is claimed to sell for around $1,500. Whether the German film audiences will be satisfied with the reproduction on equipment of this character remains to be seen.

To Produce 60 to 80 Talkers

Production plants for 1930 call for a maximum of between 60 and 80 sound features, of which 20 or 30 will be made by the Ufa, according to present plans, and the others divided among such companies as Emelka, Terra and the smaller producers, with a number financed by foreign companies. One American firm is now going ahead with plans to produce some six to 12 talking features in Germany next season. There is no likelihood that American apparatus will be allowed to enter Germany in the near future.

On February 1, 1929, the German government announced that the present import regulations on motion picture films would be prolonged for one year—that is, up to June 30, 1931. This allows 210 foreign films to come in, of which import permits for 160 are given to German film renters in proportion to the number of German films they released during 1928 and 1929. The remaining 50 import permits are distributed among companies which have exported German films in the last two years.

The film commissioner, in issuing these regulations, made the reservation that special regulations might be issued at any time regarding the importation of talking pictures. At the request of the office of the American commercial attache, a promise was given by the film commissioner that up to June 30 1931, sound features would be treated just the same as silent features in the handling of import permits, but the reservation still applies on sound shorts, and it is possible that special regulations may be made regarding their importation. These regulations, will not come for several months, however.

Italy, Belgium, the Netherlands and Denmark are the next countries to be discussed in the Government report on European film conditions.

The Smallest?

Sceptre, Sask.—This prairie town claims to be the smallest in Canada which has talking pictures. Western Electric equipment is installed at George Ridler's Palace. The population is 203.

Chains Combatted By Independent Theatre Owners

Milwaukee — Tendency of the independent theatre owner to combat chain competition is well exemplified in tie-ups being made here by independent theatre operators with merchants.

The Zenith, neighborhood house managed by E. F. Maertz, has advocated patronizing its theatre because of the fact that it is owned by Milwaukee people. This fact has been featured in its newspaper advertising from time to time.

Recently the theatre, which is a member of the Lower Hopkins Street Advancement Ass'n., offered the use of its house for the appearance of "Snippy" Doodle, stage actor, who spoke on chains and chain store competition. A series of 12 lectures were given by Doodle on successive Saturday nights, treating of the various phases of the chain problem.

Merchants Give Prizes

In addition, each merchant donated a merchandise prize of $1 value each week, which was given away at the Saturday performance. These prizes each week totaled approximately $50. Numbered coupons for the prizes were distributed by the merchants to their various patrons.

A drawing was then held on the night of the show and talk at which time the winners received their awards. Tickets and literature in connection with the weekly event were furnished by Doodle. The speech is offered in addition to the regular photoplay program.

The tie-up also was staged in connection with the Vliet Street Advancement Ass'n., and the weekly lectures held at the Colonial, another neighbor independent house, operated by Ernest Langemack.

The chain problem in Milwaukee has assumed considerable importance and merchants over the entire city are striving to combat them.

Desormeaux Adds Another

Madison, Wis.—The Majestic here has been taken over by Arthur Desormeaux on a 15 year lease from Michalson Amusement enterprises. Desormeaux will remodel the house into a fire-proof, sound-equipped, modern theatre. He also manages the Eastwood here.

Mitchell Publix Manager

Waukegan, Ill. — John L. Mitchell has been made manager of the Publix theatres here, operating three houses. He succeeds B. D. Hooton, resigned.

St. Louis Grand Dark

St. Louis—Grand Opera House has closed for the summer, reopening in September.

"Officer O'Brien" Cops K. C. High On $21,000 Take

Kansas City—The Mainstreet landed first place this week, with a $21,000 intake, or 140%. The picture was Pathe's "Officer O'Brien," although much of the credit must go to the stage performance of Olsen and Johnson. Next in line was the Newman, celebrating its anniversary week, and drawing $13,500, or 135%, with Paramount's "Devil's Holiday." The Uptown, playing M-G-M's "His Glorious Night," was up to 110%, or $6,600.

At the Midland, where "The Florodora Girl" (M-G-M) played, box office receipts were $14,200, or 95%. The Royal dropped to $3,375, or 75%, on "Mamba" (Tiffany), while the Pantages stood at 75%, or $7,600, on Fox's "On the Level."

Florida Confession

The fact that "Hell Harbor" was made here, and was a d—— good picture, brings up the question, "why can't they make pictures in Florida?"

They CAN make 'em here and they did, BUT, pretty much everything used in the picture was sent from Hollywood and all film had to be sent to New York for development. So, there is the answer; we haven't got the "things" they need.

Booking Co-op Rules Agreed to in England

London—Rules of procedure for the booking combine planned by British exhibitors have been agreed upon. A subcommittee is being appointed to work out details.

"Young Desire" The Big Thing In S. F.—$12,500

San Francisco—Stage presentations in picture houses are doing a come-back, drawing a larger attendance at the Paramount than pictures. The Embassy is scheduled to offer presentations for the first time beginning June 25.

The week in San Francisco has been a very poor one, with but two theatres doing good business. The Casino had a rating of 135% and gross receipts of $12,500. The picture, "Young Desire," was considered excellent, as was the manner in which it was displayed. The fourth week of "All Quiet on the Western Front" continued to draw. Its gross for the week was $21,000 and its rating 110%. The other houses doing an average rating of 85%.

"All Quiet" Premieres In Two London Theatres

London—Universal's "All Quiet on the Western Front" had two premieres here June 14, when the war picture opened simultaneously at the Regal and Alhambra, the event arousing considerable interest. The Regal is London's big downtown house and the Alhambra, in Leicester Square, formerly a well known vaudeville theatre. In the Regal the picture is shown on a wide screen with a new process of colored light effects. Admission is $2.50 top in both.

The idea of the dual openings was conceived by the owner, John Maxwell, while attending the premiere in New York. Capacity houses are the rule in both houses, it is said. British press opinion was extremely favorable.

Heat Socks Loop; "All Quiet" Leads On $25,000 Take

Chicago—Mediocre business all around the Loop last week, with "All Quiet on the Western Front" (Univ.) at McVickers retaining the profit lead with $25,100 near the wind-up of its fourth and final week. The picture was replaced in mid-week by "Arizona Kid" (Fox). The only other real money picture was "Paramount on Parade," which dealt the United Artists a nice gross with $24,700 (112%) in its second week and was held over.

The Palace, with "Fox Movietone Follies of 1930" and RKO vaudeville, maintained a good pace with $24,200 (100%) for its second week of vaude-film policy, but its competition continues to be felt at RKO's other vaude-film spot, the State-Lake, which managed only $19,800 (75%) with "Runaway Bride" (Radio) the feature, and Alma Rubens in the flesh.

"Ingagi" (State Rights) dropped to $5,600 (75%) in its ninth week at the Garrick and was jerked. The house takes the hokum picture, "Unguarded Girls," on a men-only policy after the picture's two unimpressive weeks for women only at the Majestic. Ann Pennington gave the Oriental a moderately profitable week with $40,900 (96%). "In Gay Madrid" (M.G.M.) was the feature.

Weather: Cool with showers. Average week.

Opposition: "Across the World," Castle; "Devil's Holiday," stage show, Chicago; "Ingagi" (9th week), Garrick; "Lady of Scandal," Loew's State; "Lights of New York" (4th week), Majestic; "All Quiet on the Western Front" (4th week), McVickers; "Hot for Paris" (2nd time in Loop), Monroe; "In Gay Madrid," stage show, Oriental; "Dumb-Bells in Ermine," Orpheum; "Fox Movietone Follies of 1930," RKO vaude, Palace; "Mammy" (2nd week), Roosevelt; "Runaway Bride," RKO vaude, State-Lake; "Paramount on Parade" (2nd week), United Artists; "Safety in Numbers" (2nd week), Uptown; "Hell Harbor" (2nd week), United Artists.

"ACROSS THE WORLD" (Martin Johnson-S.R.)
CASTLE—(300), 60c, 7 days. Other attractions: Universal newsreel, Columbia novelty short. Replaced by "Mamba" (Tiffany). Gross: $3,300. Rating: 100%.

"DEVIL'S HOLIDAY" (Para.)
CHICAGO—(3,900), 35c-85c, 7 days. Other attractions: Stage show, orchestra, comedy, newsreel, novelty short. Gross: $41,000. Rating: 80%.

"INGAGI" (State Rights)
GARRICK—(1,259), 50c-75c, 9th and final week. Gross: $5,600. Rating: 75%. "Unguarded Girls" (Indie), which played two weeks to "women only" trade at the Majestic, comes here as a "men only" program.

"UNGUARDED GIRLS" (Indie)
MAJESTIC—(1,900), 50c, 3rd week on "women only" basis. Picture improved slightly over its first week but still poor. Moves to the Garrick where it will show to "men only." Lecture, with chorus girl models on the stage, accompanies picture. Gross: $6,400. Rating: 40%.

"ALL QUIET ON THE WESTERN FRONT" (U)
McVICKERS—(2,284), 35c-85c, 4th week. Other attractions: Comedy, newsreel, novelty short. Took a nose-dive but still good considering house gets 7 shows less per week than with normal program. Will be replaced in mid-week by "Arizona Kid" (Fox). Gross: $25,100. Rating: 120%. (Percentage rating on basis of 43 instead of house's usual 50 shows per week.)

"HOT FOR PARIS" (Fox)
(2nd time in Loop)
MONROE—(962), 50c-75c, 7 days. Other attractions: 30 minutes of newsreel. House showing a little improvement. Gross: $4,800. Rating: 90%.

"WHITE HELL OF PITZ PALU" (Univ.)
WOODS—(1,166), 35c-75c, 2nd week. Other attractions: Comedy, newsreel, cartoon. Switched in to replace "Lights of New York" (Warner) which was replaced in mid-week. Gross: $11,500. Rating: 100%.

Off Page One

Hollywood—Mae Murray has been in court so many times on deals and contracts during the past two years that such cases no longer provide front page copy for local sheets.

Rogers Rockets Boston Take to 36 Grand—130%

Boston—Business was rather spotty and had it not been for heavy rain during the early week the seashore exodus would have dropped Boston theatres to considerably lower marks than were reached. Commencement programs were in full swing at almost all colleges, adding to the dulness. In spite of these conditions, the larger in-town houses showed up remarkably well.

Metropolitan, with "Devil's Holiday," rated $36,500 for 130%, but the film itself probably was not so much responsible for this high as was the appearance in person of Will Rogers. Fox's "On the Level," Keith Memorial, may be said to have been the best "BO" film of the week with $25,000, or 112%, to its credit.

Keith-Albee with "Around the Corner," Loew's State with "Lady of Scandal" and Loew's Orpheum with "In Gay Madrid" barely pulled above average for a week, which trails along at the end of a highly successful spring's business.

Weather: Fine, warm.

Opposition: "Devil's Holiday," with Will Rogers in person, Publix's Metropolitan; "Around the Corner," Keith-Albee; "On the Level," Keith Memorial; "Lady of Scandal," Loew's State; "In Gay Madrid," vaude, Orpheum; "Ladies in Love," as half of a double feature bill with "Ingagi," Park; "All Quiet on the Western Front," road show in its third week, Majestic.

"DEVIL'S HOLIDAY" (Paramount)

All Omaha High; "Cuckoos" Leads With 16 Grand

Omaha—"Cuckoos" sent the Orpheum receipts up to 125% on strength of the picture alone, unaided by the rest of the vaude bill, grossing $16,500 for the week as against the World's $10,500, brought by "New Adventures of Fu Manchu," which was held only six days instead of seven due to an opening day change.

The Paramount took third position with $9,350, or 110%, on "Safety in Numbers." State had an average week with a seven-day run of "Hell Harbor" instead of customary split week. Grossed $4,750 for a 100%.

Weather: Fine.

Opposition: "The Cuckoos," Natacha Nattova, Orpheum; "Safety in Numbers," Wesley Lord, Paramount; "Hell Harbor," "Around the World with the Graf Zeppelin," State; "New Adventures of Fu Manchu," vaude, Ted Mack and band, World.

Indicted on Fraud Charge

Edwardsville, Ill.—Charged with diverting $143,000 of the bank's funds to finance theatrical enterprises here and at Wood River, Frank B. Sanders, cashier of the Bank of Edwardsville, has been indicted by the Grand Jury. He has restored most of the money, it is stated.

Baltimore Top To 'Big Pond' on Take of $26,000

Baltimore—This was a spotty week for business at big houses. Some did far better than expected, while others dropped way down. If anything, despite two days of rain and a hot Saturday, the Firemen's Convention should have helped business during the four-day session from Tuesday to Friday.

In grosses the high spots were Loew's Century and Stanley, with the former taking $20,600, rating 98% with "The Big Pond" and "Frolickers of 1930," and the latter getting about $16,000, making a rating of 91%, with Clara Bow in "True to the Navy."

"Across the World with Mr. and Mrs. Martin Johnson" went over big at the Little Theatre (267 seats) with a gross of $1,300 and a rating of 130%. Animal pictures always go well at this house.

Three houses in particular struck very low averages, each with an estimated rating of 40%. They were the Auditorium, with "Cuckoos," and the Metropolitan and Rivoli showing "Golden Dawn," simultaneously. Perhaps the $1 top price for "Cuckoos" had something to do with the small business, but with "Golden Dawn" it appears that audiences did not seem to like this style of operetta, although finely done.

The Hippodrome came back with a good week, doing a $8,500 gross, or 85%, with "Light of Western Stars," and four acts of vaudeville.

Weather: Monday and Tuesday, rain; then clear and cool to hot on Saturday.

Opposition: "Cuckoos," Auditorium; "Big Pond," with "Frolickers of 1930" (Loew-Capitol stage unit), Loew's Century; "Light of West Stars," five vaude acts, Hippodrome; "Be Yourself," Keith's; "Across the World with Mr. and Mrs. Martin Johnson," Little; "Golden Dawn," simultaneously at the Metropolitan and Rivoli; "Alias French Gertie," New; "True to the Navy," Loew's Stanley; "Caught Short," simultaneously at Loew's Valencia and Parkway after one week at Loew's Stanley. No stage attractions.

Ottawa Swelters In Heat; All Runs Fall Under Par

Ottawa—Old-man heat put a real nick into box office receipts during the week, and the fans fought shy of screen entertainment in spite of "cool talk" on the part of managers. What helped to kill business at the Imperial, too, was the poor print of "Puttin' on the Ritz." Manager Ray Tubman put in a rush order for another print, but it was not available and patronage fell off after the first two days.

Weather: Fair and very warm.

Opposition: "Cuckoos," Regent; "True to the Navy" (3 days), Keith's; "Green Goddess" (3 days), Avalon; "Divorcee," Centre; "Puttin' on the Ritz," Imperial; "Let's Go Places" (3 days), Keith's; "Chasing Rainbows" (3 days), Avalon.

New British Formed to Handle Multi-linguals

London—Louis Zimmerman, who recently resigned from British International, is head of D. & H. Prod., which plans to produce six British pictures during the new year. In addition, the firm, under title of Sterling Film Co., will handle six Continental and six American pictures during the year. The company is planning production of multi-linguals, sending units to the Continent for the purpose.

L. A. Runs Fall Behind "Angel's" 32 Grand Intake

Los Angeles—Local exhibs are casting envious eyes in the direction of Grauman's Chinese theatre, where "Hell's Angels" still flies high, this week to the tune of $32,700, rating 204%, one of two attractions playing appreciably above par.

The State, with its nineteen grand take on "Not Damaged," fell to the lowest figure in many moons. Universal's "Captain of the Guard" embarrassed the boys over at the Orpheum—and how! The picture flopped on a $9,200 gross, finishing the week with a measly 58% rating.

Only other run to show plenty of black on the books was the musical, "Paramount on Parade," sending $11,000 into the coffers of the Egyptian, which rated the picture 147%.

Only a Few N. Y. Runs Hold Up As Big Group Wilts

Long run attractions playing New York's main stem were walloped to bits, with but few exceptions, while three of the big time continuous runs, Capitol, Roxy and Paramount, hit an even keel in the ever-hot race to bag the shekles offered by Broadway's throngs for picture entertainment.

Astor suffered with "Rogue Song" taking only nine grand (approximate), pretty low and indicative of the approaching end of a long run. "Journey's End," likewise nearing the last few days of a stand at the Gaiety, fell down to $8,000.

The Capitol took $68,945; Roxy, $97,296, and the Paramount a healthy seventy-three grand. Temporary darkening of two Warner $2 houses, Hollywood and Warners, is expected to grease the ways for stronger takes at nearby stands.

"ROGUE SONG" (M-G-M)

ASTOR (1,120), 50c-75c-$1-$1.50-$2, 7 days, 30th week. Other attractions: Newsreel and overture. Gross: Approximately $9,000, and plenty low.

"IN GAY MADRID" (M-G-M)

CAPITOL (4,700), 35c-50c-75c-$1.50, 7 days. Other attractions: Overture, Hearst Metrotone news, Capitol news presentation ("Steel Blues"); organ. Gross: $68,945.

"ALL QUIET ON THE WESTERN FRONT" (U.)

CENTRAL (922), 50c-75c-$1-$1.50-$2.50, 7 days, 8th week. Other attractions: None. Gross: $20,251; still clicking on high.

"SILENT ENEMY" (Paramount)

CRITERION—(850), 75c-$1-$1.50-$2.50, 7 days, 4th week. Other attractions: Short, ("Harvest Reverie"); cartoon, ("Wise Fly"). Gross: $7,000, running badly.

"JOURNEY'S END" (Tiffany)

GAIETY (858), $1-$1.50-$2.50, 7 days, 11th week. Other attractions: Short, ("Voice from Hollywood"). Gross: $8,000, falling off as end of run nears.

"BRIDE OF THE REGIMENT" (Warners)

HOLLYWOOD (1,660), 50c-75c-$1-$1.50, 7 days, 3rd week. Other attractions: Shorts, "The Nagger" "Holland," "The Japanese Bowl," "Matinee Idol," newsreel. Gross: $10,413, so-so.

"SHADOW OF THE LAW"

PARAMOUNT — (3,700), 40c-50c-65c-85c-$1, 7 days. Other attractions: Overture, selections from "Chocolate Soldier" directed by Paul Ash; vaudeville, ("Lanterns," an all star chinese review); newsreel. Gross: $73,300, great.

"THE BIG POND" (Paramount)

RIALTO—(1,904), 40c-50c-65c-85c-$1, 7 days, 4th week. Other attractions: Golf short, ("Match Play"); Floyd Gibbons ("Come Take A Trip In My Airship"). Gross: $19,000, miserable.

"ONE ROMANTIC NIGHT" (U.A.)

RIVOLI—(2,103), 35c-50c65c-$1, 7 days, 2nd week. Other attractions: Comedy ("Revolution");song cartoon ("In the Good Old Summer Time"); overture, ("The Wizard's Apprentice"); newsreel. Gross: $23,-200, floppy.

"BORN RECKLESS" (Fox)

ROXY—(6,200), 50c-75c-$1-$1.50, 7 days. Other attractions: Newsreel, vaudeville, overture ("Dieschoene Galatea"). Gross: $97,296, great—considering the main stem slump.

"MAMMY" (W. B.)

STRAND—(3,000), 35c-50c-60c-85c-$1, 7 days. Other attractions: Shorts, "Let's Elope," "Absentminded," "The People Versus," Max Schmeling short, and "Streets of Mystery." Gross: $19,934, bad, very.

Publix in Deal with Dalite

Chicago—F. F. Sturgis, sales manager of Dalite Screen, has returned to company headquarters from New York following conclusion of negotiations under which Publix has designated Dalite screen as standard throughout the circuit.

Fox Units Centered In Movietone City

Hollywood—Exclusive prediction of Motion Picture News that Fox would concentrate all production at Movietone City has been confirmed by Winfield Sheehan, vice-president and general manager of the company. The firm, he says, will spend $5,000,000 in the next six months to develop the studio property.

'Lady of Scandal' Clips Mpls. High With 31 Grand

Minneapolis—With a list of big screen attractions making competition close, the Minnesota managed to shove into the lead for the week's highest gross. "Lady of Scandal" brought the house $31,200 and gave it a 90% rating. Closest money competitor was the State, which brought in a 100% rating on "Young Man of Manhattan," grossing $20,190.

The Orpheum, making its big attraction "The Divorcee" over five members of the Roxy Gang headlining their vaude program, grossed $20,000 for a rating of 95%.

Leading the class "B" field, the Century managed to ring up 90% on "Big House." The gross was $9,400. The Pantages, offering as its last bill of the summer Marjah, the mystic, and "Temptation" as a screen presentation, put $8,500 into the sack to check an 85% rating. The Lyric lost ground on "Free and Easy." The picture grossed $2,700 to a rating of 70%. The Aster made "Men Are Like That" bring the house the coin. The picture did $2,950 to a rating of 90%.

One of the most significant features of the week was the type of pictures shown. This is the first week that Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer stepped into the fore. Of the seven theatres doing business, five showed Metro pictures. The Pantages, as a result of poor business, closed its doors Thursday. The house may open in the fall. No definite plans, however, have been mentioned.

Weather: Warm.

Opposition: "Lady of Scandal," "Aladdin's Revels" (Publix stage show), Minnesota; "Big House," Century; "Divorcee" (five members of Roxy Gang) headlining vaude, Orpheum; "Young Man of Manhattan," State; "Temptation," (Marjah mystic, headlining) vaude, Pantages; "Free and Easy," Aster.

High and Low On Music Row

GIVING vent to an uncontrollable charitable complex, your chronicler is going to give away—no, not an option on the Brooklyn Bridge nor the Woolworth Building, but a legitimate—be patient—we're going to give away a song title. That's what we said, a song title. To the first songwriter who shows proper credentials and identification we will present the title which we believe would be a great sequel to "A Cottage for Sale." The title is "Sold." The line forms on the right.

At last the urge to merge, which is always responsible for the "and they lived happily ever after" gag in most of our contemporary literature, has been glorified in song. Blame Mack Gordon and Abner Silver. The song is entitled "Let's Get Married" and despite the fact that therein we find the hortatory subjunctive (professor, thank you for the en—ency—encycl—aw—thanks for the dictionary) the song will be published by Irving Berlin. And that's that.

We noticed One-Eyed Connelly swaggering along tin-pan-alley t'other day (he was here for the fight, you dope) and we pulled a Pinkerton act on him. He walked past the Cunningham building, the new home of M. Witmark & Sons, then along Broadway past Irving Berlin, Inc., past the Hilton building, housing several publishers including Donaldson, Douglas and Gamble, Bibo-Lang and Denton & Haskins, and then continued towards Times Square without once attempting to crash one of the aforesaid publishers. Some songwriter must have informed him beforehand that it was impossible to place any songs these days.

Music publishers forgot the woes of publishing the nation's songs and "outinged" to Briarcliff Lodge, where they played golf, both versions, international and African, winding up with a baseball game between the dealers and publishers which ended in a tie, both factions displaying diplomacy to the 'nth degree. Phil Davis of Bibo-Lang was master of ceremonies.

At the convention of the General Federation of Women's Clubs, held in Denver, it was unanimously decided that the music robot could never replace the living musician. And now, to get back to our subject, Santly Brothers have started to get some real action on "Rollin' Down the River," written by Thomas (Fats) Waller and Stanley Adams, and "Promises," which promises to make itself popular. We won't pull anything like that again. We promise.

Richey, Lenn J. Oare and Nathalie Hoffman.

Before the "Mike" In N. Y. Studios

WITH the announcement that production in Varieties is to be concentrated at the Warner eastern Vitaphone studio, Sam Sax, general production manager, and Murray Roth, director-in-chief, are preparing what is claimed to be the largest short subject schedule of any production plant in the world. Accessibility to Broadway stars and writers is one of the main reasons for prompting this move.

The boys over in Warners' Brooklyn plant were given the air—no, we don't mean fired, not by a long shot. Sam Sax sent out three companies to shoot exteriors for forthcoming Varieties. Roy Mack took street scenes for "The Jay Walker," Arthur Hurley took the "Emergency Case" unit to Owls Head Park and Harold Beaudine ozoned out to direct a few news clips for "The Snooze Reel."

Appropriately enough, the title of the variety shot on Friday the 13th at the Eastern studio is "The Emergency Case," featuring doctors, nurses, cops (blue-uniformed guardians of the peace and nurse-maids) and patients. Hugh Cameron, "Simple Simon" comedian, who was last seen in "Nay, Nay, Nero," another Vitaphone short, is the star.

The following will prove how hard was the lot that befell Shaff. Before Stewart left Monty weighed 165 pounds. When Stewart returned Monty's weight had shrivelled to a mere 164¾.

Then, down two flights of stairs, through the carpenter shop, out into the aforesaid court and—the casus belli—Willie and Eugene Howard making another short, "Simply Killing," for Paramount, under Norman Taurog's direction.

The heat wave was only superceded by the wave of apprehension which engulfed the entire unit each time that one of the soldiers, tipping the scales at about 370 pounds, rumbled towards the water tank. Opinions on Pictures

Three Faces East

(Warners—All Talker)

Interesting Spy Drama

(Reviewed by Walter R. Greene)

THERE is plenty of suspense and many thrills in "Three Faces East," a melodrama of the workings of the German and English espionage systems.

This is a good melodrama that should hit substantial grosses in the week run spots and prove popular entertainment in the split weeks and smaller towns.

Eric Von Stroheim and Constance Bennett, both well cast, provide plenty of conspiracy that keeps suspense at high pitch. The story is somewhat complicated, with many mistaken identities, until the final fadeout which comes rather fast without clearing up several loose ends.

Von Stroheim is a German spy who has won a commission in the Belgian army for bravery. After recuperating from wounds he returns to his former position as butler for a vice admiral of the British navy. Here, with Constance Bennett, an English spy who is a member of the German intelligence corps, the plans for movement of the American convoy to Europe are discovered. Just before they are sent to the German government by Von Stroheim, Bennett discloses her real identity and kills Von Stroheim, thus saving the American fleet from being torpedoed.

William Courtenay as the suspicious friend of the admiral, William Holden, precipitates a number of tight situations by his investigations and helps to increase story suspense.

A love story is woven into the plot and counterplots, but is neither convincing nor plausible. Anthony Bushell, as Holden's son, is in love with Constance Bennett. She, in turn, loves Von Stroheim, who returns her affections. Love, however, is surplanted by duty and when the test comes, duty wins and Von Stroheim dies, a victim of the girl's gun. On his deathbed he tells her she did what was right and that her deed proved her love. All of which is rather trite.

Von Stroheim is his usual teutonic self and Miss Bennett is most capable in the part of the English operative. Anthony Bushell and Crauford Kent do small bits ably, as does Charlotte Walker as Holden's wife.

Good sound cartoons and musical novelties are needed here.

Once a Gentleman

(Sono Art-World Wide—All Talker)

Pleasing Comedy

(Reviewed by Bill Crouch)

EDWARD EVERETT HORTON is presented in another mistaken identity story that nevertheless loses none of its charm through the splendid portrayal of the star and most capable direction of James Cruze. "Once a Gentleman" is a clean, entertaining picture that is brimful of laughs and humorous situations. Rates attention as a strong program attraction for the week runs and following bookings, having definite values for all classes of audiences.

Horton, butler to the rich Mr. Van Warner, is mistaken for Colonel Carmichael of the secret service, while he is on a vacation, and is entertained royally at the home of a millionaire, Francis X. Bushman. Here he falls in love with Lois Wilson, the housekeeper, and becomes a helpful companion to Emerson Treacy, Bushman's somewhat wayward son.

High spot in the story shows Horton's dabbling in the stock market and his plans for spending the first million he makes from the investments. Then he loses everything and his real identity is disclosed. Instead of ridiculing Horton for the masquerade, the society folk take the entire affair as a good joke on themselves and admire Horton's ability to play the role of a gentleman.

Horton's acting and his hesitating style in delivery of lines add materially to the humor of the situation build-ups. This fact, combined with the excellent direction by Cruze, provides a fast tempo comedy with plenty of entertainment.

Lois Wilson as the feminine lead shows up well and is appealing as the sweetheart of Horton. Emerson Treacy, Francis X. Bushman, George Fawcett and King Baggott are well cast and carry their parts with sincerity.

Musical and cartoon shorts will go well here.

Girl of Golden West

(First National—All Talker)

Old Western with Noise

(Reviewed by Don Ashbaugh)

"GIRL of the Golden West," as produced by First National, is one of those enigma pictures—anybody's guess is good. It's a sure-fire plot—one of the old westerns with villains being confounded and the usual fadeout of the hero and heroine riding off into the sunset. The name will attract and, if your audiences like westerns, they'll go for this one.

An excellent group of players have been definitely miscast in this picture. Ann Harding plays the one feminine role, the part of the girl goddess of a mining camp. She plays it delightfully and with humor, but the delicate poise and classical sophistication of the blonde star can not but seem out of place. The girl is the type who keeps all the rough men at their proper distance and who understands the niceties of life, while at the same time admits "having only about thirty-two dollars' worth of education." This, one gathers, isn't a whole lot of learning when it is considered that eggs sold across Ann's bar in mixed drinks cost fifty cents each.

All through the cut-and-dried old plot, of the girl falling for the good-looking stranger, who turns out to be a road-agent, until the lad is saved from a lynching at the hands of the irate fellow citizens because Ann prays over him, one gets the idea that the entire group of characters is attempting to make the best out of nothing much. Just a little more stress and we might suspect they were playing the good old tale with their tongues in their cheeks.

John Francis Dillon directed the story and, in addition to Miss Harding, the cast includes James Rennie as the hero road agent who seems to lack verve, and Harry Bannister, who is gorgeously convincing as the sheriff. Like the star, however, Bannister and Rennie might appear to better advantage in a dramatic story rather than a melodramatic yarn.

Others in the large cast are J. F. McDonald, Bert Roach, Johnnie Walker and Arthur Stone. Miss Harding adds some humor with her occasional profanity, which even the nice old women in the audience accepted with grace because it seemed so natural under the circumstances.

Her "Hell" was a masterpiece of expression. Unless this reviewer has the wrong hunch, it's a safe gamble she did some during the filming of the picture.

The settings are beautiful and appropriate. The scene in which the girl and the sheriff gamble for Ramerrez' life is well played.

After the Verdict

(International Photoplay Distributors—All Talker)

Very Dull

(Reviewed by Charles F. Hynes)

ENGLAND will have to do better than this if it wants to make a dent in the talking picture market. The film is another one of those things, containing little of merit or interest. It is dragged out and the story has plenty of loopholes and absurdities.

The story is about the love affairs of a young Englishman who had been intimate with a countrywoman in India. She follows him to London, and when he refuses to give up his fiancee for her she commits suicide. He is tried for her murder and acquitted when the woman's husband, foregoing vengeance, gives the court his wife's confession of suicide.

In the murder trial the accused adopts a policy of silence, refusing to give any testimony on the supposed murder. His course proves an almost-disastrous one until the introduction of the dead woman's confession of suicide.

The cast of the picture is negligible, none of the work being outstanding. It is headed by Olga Tschechowa, Russian player, and Warwick Ward. The story is by Robert Hichens.

As a double feature offering this may get by, but there are so many better American films on the market that this hardly merits a play. It's recorded by Phonofilm.

This needs plenty of short subject help.

Produced by British International Film Dist. Distributed by International Photoplay Distributors. Directed by Henrik Galleen. Story by Robert Hichens. Adaptation not credit. Dialogue not credited. Common Clay

(Fox—All Talker)

Popular B. O. Card

(Reviewed by Red Kann)

THE opener on the Fox program for 1930-31 and a good one for box-office.

It's quite a number of years now since Cleves Kinkead wrote the play that won him a Harvard prize, and, while the situations have been done time and time again in pictures, they will still ring true for women patrons up and down the land. The yarn is made to order for the housewives, clerks, stenos and all the other species of the gentler sex that flock to picture shows.

The sophisticates will probably guffaw at the story of "Common Clay" and mark it down as old stuff. It is, but unquestionably the type of material that enables women to get busy with their handkerchiefs. That's enough info for any showman.

Constance Bennett is the young girl who gets off to a checkered career at the early age of eighteen and finds herself rounded up one night when the police raid the speakeasy at which she is a hostess. She is booked on the blotter for vagrancy and frequenting a disorderly house, yet the treatment of the story would have you believe she is still pure. At any rate, the judge evinces an interest in her and points out the short life that faces her if she persists in following up her hectic beginning. She determines to start anew, secures a position as maid in the house of the Fullertons, where everybody tries to make her, from the butler clear up the line to house guests and the son of the family, played by Lew Ayres. But Constance explains she is on the level now and the boy falls for her. They have an affair which culminates a year later when the baby is born.

By this time, the socially-elite Fullertons are panicked lest the situation finds its way into the court and determine to make a settlement. But where they offer money, Miss Bennett merely wants to see the father of her child. Her police record is dug up and the girl, spurred into action, determines to fight. In the court room it develops her mother is not her mother at all, but that the girl was the daughter of an unmarried woman who had committed suicide rather than stand in the way of the child's father, later established as Fullerton's lawyer and the defamer of the Bennett character. Finally, the boy comes through, admits his mistake and the couple walks off.

There are several punch scenes, in both of which Miss Bennett gets her only chance to perform. She does nicely. Beryl Mercer, as the girl's foster mother, crashes through with a fine sequence in court and establishes herself as the best trouper in the cast. Ayres is satisfactory.

Lighten your program since feature is heavy. Use comedies and cartoons.

The Medicine Man

(Tiffany—All Talker)

Good Program Fare

(Reviewed by Charles F. Hynes)

JACK BENNY does the hero role in this and does it well. He's the shiller in a medicine show and as such has opportunity to get off a rapid fire line of patter. Betty Bronson is the heroine, and has plenty of it as the country girl who falls hard for the itinerant showman.

The picture has a trite story, but has an abundance of laughs, supplied by Benny and Tommy Dugan. The latter is a medicine salesman and card sharp who takes in the natives, only to be forced to give a costly demonstration of the honesty of the game for the benefit of the sheriff.

The story is about a country girl who finds romance in the principal attraction of a visiting medicine show. Her dad, who runs a general store, nurses a strong prejudice against show people, and seeks to force his daughter to marry a farmer friend when it becomes apparent she is in love with the medicine man. Although the sheriff is on his trail, the medicine man risks arrest to marry the girl, outwitting the farmer in doing so.

Scott Pembroke directed this production and did a good job of it, in spite of the story handicap. The cast is a well-balanced one.

Sell this on its comedy value, offering it as a fair program picture. As such, it will please.

Trigger Tricks

Hoot at His Best

(Reviewed by J. P. Cunningham)

PRODUCED as a western programmer should be—intelligently and divorced of obvious blah.

Not a single Gibson follower should find disappointment, even to a limited degree, in Hoot's new opus, in which is effectively fused a likeable style of outdoor romance into six reels of unmistakable entertainment of that sorely needed box-office variety. Of course, the "tony" downtown first runs must cross it from their list of possibilities, but surely not so with the neighborhood and second run stands, where outdoor stuff has a calling.

The story has been done many times before, but no more intelligently than on this occasion, thanks to the commendable directorial twists by Reaves Eason, the splendid support of a well picked cast, all of which is enhanced by clarity of sound and voice, adding a realistic touch to the entire presentation. Photography is of a high rating, particularly the long shots on the deep plains where hundreds of cattle and sheep are grazing.

Betty Dawley, played by Sally Eilers, is fighting a tough tilt against Joe Dixon (Jack Richardson), cattle owner, who is intent upon ousting the Dawley interests from the west. Hoot steps into the picture at this spot and, by clever maneuvering, bests the Richardson gang of 26 bad hombres. Comedy relief by Walter Perry and Max Asher is splendid.

A two reel slapstick yarn, a sound cartoon, newsreel and you have a tip top show for Hoot's fans.

Beau Bandit

(R-K-O—All Talker)

Just So-So

(Reviewed by Charles F. Hynes)

ROD LA ROCQUE as a Mexican bandit on the order of the role played by Warner Baxter in "The Arizona Kid." La Rocque's dialect is not so hot. Some of his lines are terrible.

Doris Kenyon is the heroine and does fairly well with the role, with her characterization enhanced by a song, "Just a Little Kiss," composed by Harry Tierney. The song has an important part in this western offering.

The story is about a "gentleman bandit" who falls hard for a girl when he hears her singing, so much so that he neglects to carry out the bank robbery on which he is engaged. When he finds that the girl is engaged, he devotes his energies to helping out her and the boy friend. He forces a renegade banker to supply the needed funds for the couple's honeymoon, after a series of adventures and escapades.

There isn't a lot to sell this on, for it hardly measures up as a fair program offering. From the outdoor angle, it may get by without difficulty, but otherwise it hasn't much to recommend it. Mitchell Lewis' work is good.

Needs plenty of short subject support.

Produced by Radio Pictures. Distributed by R-K-O. Adapted from "Strictly Business," by Wallace Smith. Directed by Lambert Hillyer. Edited by Archie F. Marshek. Photographed by Jack Mackenzie. Length, 6,169 feet. Running time, 59 minutes. Release date, March 2, 1930.

Rough Romance

(Fox—Talker)

For Outdoor Fans

(Reviewed by Robert Hage)

IF your patrons like outdoor dramas filled with action, grab this one, for it's shot full of thrills, blood and thunder, fights and villainy. There's nothing original about it, but it steps along at a fast pace and will satisfy those who like their screen fare raw.

Director A. F. Erickson didn't seem to take the story seriously and Hero George O'Brien and Villain-Chief Antonio Moreno breezed through their roles in a hope-you'll-like-us manner, smearing the heroics all over the landscape. They don't make heroes any better than George, for, although shot in the chest, he fights and disarms Antonio, finishes him by pushing him into a river, then swims for half an hour through a log-filled stream to rescue the heroine. There must have been hop in that bullet.

Helen Chandler, as the heroine, was pretty, but miscast and failed to convince. Noel Francis gave a good performance as a dance hall hostess. Eddie Borden got a few laughs in a slim comedy role. He had some good lines, but his voice does not register well and many of the words were indistinguishable. The rest of the cast was adequate for a Western. Three songs are spotted in, but they miss fire badly. Neither O'Brien nor the rest of the yodelers can qualify as singers.

The shots in the forest were exceptionally good, showing the felling of giant trees. The story was stereotyped, with the sheriff picking on George and letting the villains get away with murder. George eventually kills both of them and then grabs the girl for the clinch fade-out. You can fill in the rest of the story from the formula.

The picture may get over in the better houses as a relief from society stuff, but its appeal is chiefly to the devotees of action dramas and kids.

Needs good comedy shorts and musicals for balance.

Top Speed

(First National—All Talker)

Laugh Comedy

(Reviewed by Walter R. Greene)

WITH plenty of spicy lines and clever comic antics, this is a filmusical with plenty of vim, vigor and vitality. Catchy songs and dances, of which there are not too many, also add to the entertainment qualities.

Director Mervyn Leroy kept the story moving in tempo with the title and even the few songs in the picture are shortened to keep the action fast. The speed of the tempo is mainly responsible for the success of the comedy.

Joe E. Brown takes top honors in the acting line and gives his oversized mouth all the leeway possible. Brown's mode of delivery in songs and dialogue will get many laughs. Jack Whiting, Brown's pal, has a good voice and his songs with Bernice Claire go over okay. Laura Lee, a girl somewhat on the Winnie Lightner order, teams well with Brown and the laughs they get when together are plenty.

The story, while slight, is filled with action and thrills. Brown and Whiting are a couple of bond clerks out on a vacation. They decide to spend a night at a ritzy hotel and here they run into a pair of rich debutantes, Claire and Lee, who fall for Brown's line that the boys are Wall Street sensations. Whiting is not keen about the deception but thinks it best to let it pass. He is asked by Claire's father, Edwin Maxwell, to drive his motor boat in the big race the next day. Whiting agrees, but before the race is bribed by Edmund Breese to lose. However, love conquers and he wins, exposing the bribe plot and clearing up other entanglements.

The boat race is matched in thrills by a wild boat ride which Brown and Billy Bletcher take while under the influence of too much champagne. This incident is perhaps the high spot of the picture. Other amusing scenes are Brown's fishing at a government hatchery and a sheep counting episode which is done in the typical Brownesque manner.

"Top Speed" rates even better than Brown's recent comedy, "Hold Everything." It's a sure-fire audience picture and rates consideration for top price runs in the key cities.

Small roles are ably handled by Edmund Breese, Frank McHugh, Rita Flynn and Wade Boteler.

Novelty shorts and dramatic sketches required here.

Golden Dawn

(Warners—All Talker)

Another Operetta

(Reviewed by Bill Crouch)

SHOWING jungle life in song and color, "Golden Dawn" is another operetta adapted to the screen with ordinary results. As a screen operetta it is average, but a flimsy story fails to impress through constant interruptions of song numbers which hold up tempo and action too long.

"Golden Dawn" grooves into ordinary program classifications, with chances far above average appeal in large cities where audiences have heard about the stage show. Otherwise it will have to depend upon the name draws and production values. Technicolor is well above average and the colorful jungle settings carry an eye appeal.

The action takes place in Africa during the World War. The Germans take control of a British camp and have all they can do to keep a native uprising from becoming a reality. The natives plan to marry Golden Dawn (Vivienne Segal) to the Moon God, a tribal custom. This is done but not before Walter Wolff states his love for the girl and attempts to take her away with him. Failing in this, he is sent back to England with other English prisoners in exchange for German prisoners. Later he returns—just at the right moment—for the natives are planning to sacrifice their goddess in order that the Moon God will send immediate rain. Drought has swept the country and famine confronts the tribe. Wolff saves Segal by establishing her identity as a white girl which allows for final clinch.

Production value and the musical entertainment are the assets here and make the picture. The voices of Noah Beery and Alice Gentle are especially appealing, but Vivienne Segal fails to go over as well as in previous productions. Walter Woolf has a delightful voice and his song numbers are the best received of the many musical offerings.

Lupino Lane with a song and dance number had a fine bit which was well executed. Noah Beery as Shep Keye, African leader of the natives, is particularly menacing and helps hold up story interest by a fine performance.

Novelty and dramatic shorts will go well here if strong.

Plenty of Laughs

(Reviewed by Charles F. Hynes)

JACK OAKIE has been traveling at a rapid pace since Paramount picked him as stellar material, and this newest offering has plenty of laughs. Oakie surely will add to his following by his work in this.

Jack starts out as a ham fighter who gets knocked for a row when his opponent tells him his shoelace is untied. He's wild about a society bud who is playing him for the laughs she and her friends can get out of him. However, it develops that he is a wizard at polo, so the society gang drafts him for a place on their team. The popularity goes to his head and he rides for a heavy fall, learning that his real love in the hat girl at the country club. When the latter is fired for telling the society bunch her thoughts for stringing Jack along, he walks out on the polo team. However, rather than be labeled a quitter, he goes through with the game, giving a dazzling exhibition of prowess. Then he tells the gang his opinion of them.

Straight comedy selling will help put this over, for it sparkles with many laughs. It has plenty of production values, which include a first-rate cast. Mary Brian plays opposite Oakie, and Skeets Gallagher provides plenty of comedy. Olive Borden, Charles Sellon and E. H. Calvert are among other members of the capable cast. Direction is uniformly good.

Sell Oakie and use musical shorts with this.

Terry of the Times

(Universal—Sound)
(10 Episode Serial, Each 2 Reels)
A Fast-Action Serial, Well Done

THRILLING adventures of colorful newspaper life, its reporters and the enemies they meet in their daily routine while combating crime is a mighty strong backbone for a serial story. And that's exactly what Universal has in "Terry of the Times," a yarn which packs interest ap'enty.

There isn't a single doubt in our minds but that serial followers will keep on the trail of this one, fighting the fights of Terry, feeling the horrible grip of the "Mystic Mendicants" who are the leeches on American journalism—the racketeers, cutthroats, gamblers, ever on the alert to put an enemy on the spot.

There isn't any dialogue, but appropriate musical synchronization, and well timed sound effects go hand in hand with the thrilling action to uphold interest, which rates high. In each of the first three episodes which this reviewer previewed there is a fair amount of repetition, however, aside from this, it's splendid seral fare. Hal Hodes wrote the story. A good job.

Henry MacRae is to be commended for direction, and the well-placed cast, centering around Reed Howes and Sheldon Lewis, turned in a fine performance. Lotus Thompson, John Oscar, Wm. Hayes, Marry Grant, Norman Thom and Kingsley Benedict—many new names—help Howes put it over. Running time, each episode about 20 minutes.

Spot this with a feature comedy, or an outdoor romance.

Egypt, Land of Pyramids

(FitzPatrick—Talker)
Interesting

THE lure of far-off places makes this travel subject attractive. The audience at the Capitol, New York, where this short was caught, thought so much of it that the final fade-out elicited a generous smattering of applause.

James A. FitzPatrick supplies a line of dialogue describing and divulging interesting historical facts about various world-famed sights such as the pyramids and the Sphinx, while the camera has been successful in catching many beautiful photographic studies. Running time, 8 minutes.

Sound cartoons and two-reel comedies will go well here.

Great Sport Reel

DEPEND upon Grantland Rice for thrilling sport reels. Very seldom does he fail to click with his "Sportlights." This new subject upholds his reputation admirably.

Fiddlin' Around

(Columbia-Disney—Sound)
Fair

THERE is very little action in this Mickey Mouse cartoon, most of it being devoted to close-ups of Mickey playing classical music on a trick violin. The clever cartoon work, however, makes up for the deficiency in ideas and Mickey's shadow, thrown upon the backdrop by the spotlight, moves in unison with him, giving an effect of depth unusual in cartoons. Running time, 7 minutes.

Use it with a melodramatic feature.

Short Subjects

Celeste Aida

(Vitaphone Varieties No. 953)
Good

GIOVANNI MARTINELLI, operatic tenor, sings the famous aria from "Aida" in such a splendid manner that he evokes applause from the audience. Preceding his appearance on the set, a reproduction of one of the scenes from the opera, Aida is carried through on the shoulders of slaves, with a procession of maidens leading and following. All are in costume. Technicolor would have doubled the appeal of this subject. Running time, 9 minutes.

Ideal when playing a comedy drama.

Evolution

(Vitaphone Varieties No. 1,022)
Will Click

THE evolution of the motion picture is depicted in this short, starting from the little book which one thumbed to get the illusion of action to the all-talking production in color, and the contrast is amazing and entertaining. One wonders how the early movies, with their spotty photography and jerky acting, could have appealed at all. Many of the old-time favorites, such as John Bunny, Flora Finch, Maurice Costello and Wallace Reid, are shown. Then there's a flash of Norma Talmadge in a bit and a scene showing Anita Stewart as the mother of Dolores Costello. Interspersed are the old-time slides, "Ladies will please remove their hats" and "One minute to change reels," and later scenes from present-day pictures are shown. A synchronized spiel, filled with gags, gets lots of laughs. Running time, 10 minutes.

Spot it into any kind of bill. Everybody will like it.

Rawther Arty!

ART personified. And mighty interesting, at that. Several minutes are spent with "mike" and camera on Albert Payson Terhune's Jersey estate. Terhune, surrounded by a dozen fine dogs, many of them the heroes of Terhune's popular stories, makes interesting screen material.

Supporting this highlight are shots of an old castle in France and an oddity by Nicholas Cavaliere, who has secured some unusual sky material. Okay for a booking. Running time, 10 minutes.

Suitable for a comedy bill.

Son of Courage

(Universal—Silent)
Kid Stuff

BOBBIE NELSON in the usual line-up of Western action, shooting up the hills and countryside in a fight with the bad hombres who are trying to oust the sweetheart of young Bobbie's pal from a rich stake in the mountains. Running time, 20 minutes.

Give them a slapstick comedy, a sport reel and a light comedy feature.

Broken Wedding Bells

(Dane-RKO—All Talker)
Funny—and How!

THE comedy team of Dane and Arthur put over plenty of laughs and howls in this short created for Vitaphone. In the roles of radio installers they bust up the wedding night of a newly wedded pair, through delivery of a radio to the wrong house. It's farcical slapstick comedy, but a type which is certain for continual laughs. The picture is geared at a fast tempo and rates attention where a sure-fire laugh-getter is required on the program. It is a suitable attraction for the first run houses because of its merit, with the added factor of the drawing power of Dane and Arthur for lights and advertising.

For balance for dramatic feature — where draw comedy is needed.

America or Bust

(Pathe—2 Reels)
Quite a Few Laughs

DAPHNE POLLARD tries to crash Ellis Island in this comedy, which contains quite a few laughs. She starts out from an English pub and contributes plenty of Cockney gags to get laughs. Her Ellis Island experiences are greatly overdone, but they're funny, serving the purpose for which this is intended. Miss Pollard is pretty much the whole show. Running time, 26 mins.

Particularly good for musical bill.

Audio Review No. 24

(Pathe—Sound)
Finely Constructed

EACH of the four units embraced in this new Audio Review has an appeal for as many types of theatregoers, so that none should find a lack of interesting screen material.

The first is of Niagara, suitably keyed to music, and with a refreshing touch of coolness in this torrid weather. Following appears a camera study of garden estates at Bermuda, well done, but just a trifle boresome in those spots where the cameraman concentrated on closeups of the structures of leaves.

Third in the short is an interesting array of shots taken in Washington, and the night stuff made on the new "Infra D" sensitive stock has a particular touch of beauty and naturalness. The closing section is for women only! In it, Marguerite Agniel interprets motions suitable for reducing and shapely curves. They'll like it. Running time, 10 minutes.

Novelty stuff for a light musical comedy bill. Run a cartoon, too.

Screen Snapshots

(Columbia—Talker)
Interesting

BETTER than average in this series of shorts and containing more than the usual number of screen personalities in off-stage settings. Among those appearing are Frank Fay, Betty Compson, William Boyd, William Beaudine, Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., Leo Diegel, Buddy Rogers and Little Robert Coogan, brother of the famous Jackie. Fred Kelsey is the master of ceremonies. Running time, 7 minutes.

Okay anywhere.

Bugville Romance

(Pathe—Sound)
A Pip of a Cartoon

TUNEFUL songs and musical synchronization, coupled with ace-high pen-and-ink work, go to make this reel crackerjack cartoon fare, with a continuous round of hearty laughter running from end to end. Running time, 6 minutes.

Nice light stuff for relief of a heavy feature.

Chicago Theatre Tax Levies Get The Once Over

Two more Chicago theatres have come under the scrutiny of state tax auditors who are examining reductions in assessed property valuations made by the Cook county board of review. The Manor and Tiffin, jointly owned, are the latest to receive attention. Previously, the building housing the Regal was cited as an instance of unwarranted assessment reduction by the auditors.

The Manor, the auditors find, was assessed originally at $97,160, based upon a measurement of 608,820 cubic feet at a unit price of 40 cents. On complaint, the board of review decreased the measurements to 446,012 cubic feet and the unit price to 35 cents per cubic foot. The assessment on the theatre was thus reduced to $66,753.

The auditors later found that the correct measurement of the building is 635,763 cubic feet, which, even at 35 cents per cubic foot, gives the building an assessed valuation of $100,908.

The Tiffin was given an original assessed valuation of $128,060, based on a measurement of 883,872 cubic feet at a unit price of 40 cents per cubic foot. The board of review later decreased the measurement to 818,352 cubic feet and the unit price to 35 cents per cubic foot, thereby reducing the assessed valuation to $110,521.

After a check-up the auditors declared the correct measurement of the building to be 911,540 cubic feet, which, at a 35-cent unit price would make the assessment $129,007, instead of the reduced assessment of $110,-521.

Both reductions were granted, the auditors state, in spite of the fact that the owner, V. T. Lynch, did not appear before the board of review for the hearing in either case.

Assessment reductions by the board of review are receiving close scrutiny here due to the fact that the current financial straits of both the city and county originated with the reassessment of property values in 1928, no taxes having been collected for the past two years.

Industry Plans Exhibit at 1933 Chi World's Fair

Fox Movietone News began its celluloid recording of the Chicago 1933 World's Fair with its shots of the ground breaking at the Administration Building site, the first construction work to be undertaken in connection with the Fair. Shots will also be made of subsequent construction work and other significant evidences of progress in staging the Fair. The footage in its entirety will be a complete record of the 1933 World's Fair.

Motion picture exhibits depicting the development of the industrial art from its inception are being planned for the 1933 Fair, its sponsors state. Carl Laemmle, during a recent visit to the city, pledged his assistance in obtaining the co-operation of the industry's leaders in making such exhibits representative.

The Chicago Historical Society relates that a talkie exhibit comprised the only motion picture exhibition at the Chicago World's Fair of 1893. An Edison kinetograph was exhibited in conjunction with a phonograph at that time with a synchronized sequence reproducing conversation.

Its business there was decidedly unimpressive, but the Peeping Tom population of the city is reported to be considerable.

The Thinker

A local exhibitor's favorite story, perenially told, concerns the over-enthusiastic salesman who came into his office and raved for ten minutes without pause about one of his company's new releases.

"Vell," interrupted the exhibitor at his first opportunity, "how much do you vant for it?"

"Can't you wait," the salesman rebuked him, "until I finish telling you about it?" Whereupon he proceeded with added eloquence and unrestrained superlatives to delineate the picture's merits.

"Vot's de name of it?" the exhibitor inquired when the salesman finally paused for breath.

"'Something to Think About'," the high pressure man told him.

"Hmm. Dot's a goot title. How much do you want for it, did you say?"

"Three thousand dollars."

"Oi! Even better iss dot title. Dot's someding to dink about, all right."

Chevalier's Leading Lady Chicago College Girl

Frances Deane, recently signed by Paramount to play opposite Maurice Chevalier, is the latest addition to the ranks of local girls who made good in the hill section of Los Angeles.

"Frankie's" real name is Frances Dee. She is a graduate of Hyde Park high school and attended the University of Chicago for two years. At Hyde Park she was prominent in dramatic activities, while, after her freshman year, beauty and popularity contests were discontinued until after her graduation. At the Midway institution she was featured in all the activities of Mirror, the girls' musical comedy organization. About a year ago she left for Hollywood and was given "bits" in a number of pictures. Her recognition came, it is said, after she had survived exacting screen tests on the Paramount lot.

"Frankie" is now 20 years old, and the daughter of F. M. Dee, a civil engineer of this city. Her mother and a sister are with her in California.

Theatre Gold Spilled

The streets of Brookfield, a southwest suburb, were paved with gold one night this week. A Brink's money express truck, making the rounds of the west suburban theatres, including Balaban & Katz outlying houses, was struck by another automobile at a busy intersection and knocked over on its side. Money bags were strewn about and a number of them burst open, scattering their contents over the street. A near riot ensued, but the entire Brookfield police department—seven in all—arrived quickly and soon had the situation well in hand.

New Palace Vaude-Film Policy Cue for Fight; Pennington And Rogers Signed

With the Palace on a vaude-film policy, R-K-O has a new lever on Loop business. B. & K. is meeting the new competition with flesh name draws in both the Chicago and the Oriental, making up for the added expense by reductions in the stage shows in outlying houses. Paul Ash was first on the name list at the Oriental, where feverish tryouts to find a new m. c. who will prove a draw have been in progress for the past several weeks. Ash was followed by Ann Pennington. The Chicago gets Will Rogers this week at a reported price of ten grand. R-K-O retaliates with Alma Rubens at the State-Lake and Lou Holtz at the Palace.

B. & K. denies, however, that the bookings are in answer to the new competition. The Oriental, admittedly, has been one of the circuit's biggest worries for some time and the flesh draws, a representative of the company stated, are regarded as essential in keeping the house out of the red. Name draws at the Chicago, it was said, are designed to offset a hot weather slump.

Nevertheless, the Palace, with a series of average programmers and unimpressive name draws, has been playing to better than average business despite weather handicaps and strong competition throughout the Loop.

Lost in Chicago

Ann Pennington, billed here for a week at the Oriental, arrived in town and taxied to the Chicago by mistake. The little lady was distinctly shocked, upon alighting from her cab, to find her name missing from all marquee and theatre front advertising. Fortunately, there was someone handy to rectify her mistake before she regained breath.

"Pennie" was held here for an extra week to assist B. & K. in observing a third anniversary at the Marbro.

A Wise Guy

Someone, apparently, is playing the superstitious to put over a boost for "All Quiet on the Western Front," which is the subject of an endless chain letter now in circulation.

The communication contains a plea for outlawing war, and asks the recipient to help the cause along by seeing the picture and urgently persuading others to see it.

The film, it is declared, "will serve as a potent influence in dissolving those prejudices, antipathies and hatreds that have caused these periodic orgies of human destruction."

And, curiously enough, the letter is tagged "Yours for Universal peace."

Damn clever, those Chinese.

Daylight Saving In Milwaukee in Spite of Squawk

Milwaukee—After a six months' campaign by the Civic Alliance, representing a number of Milwaukee's outstanding organizations, daylight saving will be inaugurated June 29, despite strenuous protests by Milwaukee theatre owners. Theatres, however, will operate on standard time, according to Fred S. Meyer, president of the local organization.

Both Fox and RKO theatres flashed trailers on their screens attempting to discourage the adoption of the plan. A law was passed by the state legislature in 1923 prohibiting cities, villages, counties and other governmental units from adopting a daylight saving plan and from setting official clocks ahead an hour. There is, however, no penalty for disobeying the law.

Coupled with the daylight saving announcement, warm weather and only fair business, two other theatres, one a legitimate house and the other a burlesque theatre, have been showing pictures in recent days. The Davidson played "White Cargo" under the management of Albert Dezel, while the Gayety showed the sex picture, "Why Girls Go Wrong."

Both these pictures tended to lighten already slim box-office receipts for the week. The best bets of the week were "Journey's End" which opened at the Garden May 30, and "The Big Pond," at Fox's Wisconsin. Neighborhood houses for the most part have also been playing to slim crowds and operators predict still lower receipts after the daylight savings plan goes into effect.

Circuits Seeking Control of Kas. Missouri Unit

Kansas City—Chains will be given additional voting power in revision of the Kansas and western Missouri exhibitor unit's constitution, scheduled for the meeting to be held June 24 and 25 at Topeka. This will place the affiliated houses in practical control of the unit, it is stated. Heretofore, each chain has had but one vote in organization affairs. The clause has been in the association's constitution for several years.

Whether R. R. Biechele, veteran president, will be permitted to carry out his annual determination to resign is problematical. Vice-President Charles Burkey has declared he will not be a candidate, but there is possibility he will be drafted for the office if Biechele carries out his announced plan. The association, he told Motion Picture News, needs new blood so far as officers are concerned.

CONDUCTED BY AN EXHIBITOR FOR EXHIBITORS

"The Other Fellow"

WHAT the other fellow is doing constitutes a most important topic for every live-wire showman the world over. Things happen and change much too fast for any one man to exist solely on what he can think of and do in his own limited area.

The day of "one man's ideas" ceased when the chains started to blanket the country, bringing into the business a class of show-merchandising and high-powered exploitation never heard of before. It put every man on his mettle and compelled him to keep stepping at a pace that required fast thinking and acting, or else he would be left far behind in the race for a future and advancement.

Glancing through some of the very first issues of the Club pages from over two years ago we came across many items pertaining to this phase and we marvel at the fact that today, more than ever, they are of such great importance. You boys who have kept your copies of our pages since we started need only turn to them for proof of this statement.

But the point we started to stress is just this: Can't you possibly manage to visit the theatres in surrounding towns and cities? It doesn't have to be done every time you can get away from your own house, but surely you can so arrange your affairs to allow you to make these little journeys occasionally. Often enough to see what "the other fellow is doing" and how you can improve your own work.

The advice is certainly right in line with the policies of the outstanding chain organization today. Their house organs constantly preach the doctrine of keeping your eye on the other men in the field and try to profit by their activities and experiences.

Then there is another, and important, side to this suggestion. The much-needed change of scenery, if for only a few brief hours. It gives you and your mind a chance to relax and puts you in a more receptive mood for ideas that ought to prove mighty valuable.

Sitting down and chatting with another manager will broaden your point of view. It will surprise you to learn how many slants you may be passing up. It will reveal dozens of angles that you never gave a thought to. It will permit you to store away a vast amount of knowledge. Drawing from that reserve fund whenever the proper time and condition presents itself.

We know what it means to be buried away in some spot. But just as fast as we realized this condition we set about to correct it, and were so tickled with the added pep it gave us after each little trip to visit some other showman, that we never let ourselves get into the rut again.

Try it yourself and see if you don't fall for the idea too.

"Chick."

All Was Honey For Harry Herman On "Honey" Campaign

When Harry Herman sets out to put over an exploitation campaign at the Paramount Theatre in Cedar Rapids, Ia., it is so complete that if it were all put down on paper it woud take a couple of trucks to cart the layout to us. He bombarded the town with an avalanche of exploitation material on "Honey" that had them sitting up and taking notice.

4,000 heralds were distributed to girls, daring them to bring their honeys to see HONEY on Monday night, at which time each girl could búy a regular admission ticket for herself and a 10c children's ticket for her beau, provided she bought the tickets herself at the box office.

To build up Monday night's receipts even more, a Lane Cedar Hope Chest, donated by a co-operating merchant, was given to the person holding the lucky number in the theatre. The basis of this tie-up was the song hit, "In My Little Hope Chest," heard in the picture.

A tie-up was also made with a local photographer whereby a coupon was given to the mother of every child between the ages of 1 and 6, who attended the Paramount Theatre during the showing of the picture. This coupon entitled each child to a free photograph at the local studio.

100 cards measuring 11x14 were placed in grocery store windows. The copy on these cards read, "Honey Week—buy your honey today and see Nancy Carroll at the Paramount for four days starting Saturday, March 29." 75 cards of similar size were used in all drug stores in Cedar Rapids, advertising the Honey Sundae and the motion picture.

A tie-up was arranged with the largest department store in Cedar Rapids, the Killiam Company, whereby they included in 10,000 April letters going to their accounts an insert of the coming attractions at the Paramount Theatre, among which was included the Nancy Carroll picture, HONEY. The only expense the theatre incurred was the cost of printing the inserts.

There were many more angles covered along with this but it would take a couple of extra pages to set them forth. However we'd like you to know that Cedar Rapids was treated to one of the finest campaigns it has ever been its pleasure to witness and, by the way, they witness some showmanship. Right, Harry? You should know, you give it to them.

And All The Gobs Came Out In Mobs Ahoy Dames! Ahoy!

Just a little while ago we gave you an example of the way David Silverman, manager of the Belmont Theatre in New York City sold his shows and so well did he sell them that the police reserves were called into action to keep the crowds, who were watching the parade (Dave's stunt), orderly. And now he has another.

When the fleet arrived in New York for its visit, it happened that Silverman was playing "Dames Ahoy" which film deals with the adventures of three gobs. He decided to cash in on the fleet, so he wrote to the commander of each ship and informed him that he was showing the film at the Belmont. He invited every gob on the ships to bring a lady to see the show. The lady was admitted free.

Well, to make a long story short, on the opening night the sailors started to come in, accompanied by their lady friends. They came in parties of threes, four, sixes, eights and nine and a halfs by nautical time and two heave hos! They walked in the theatre, were dragged into the theatre, dragged by females and walked in by females. The handsome gobs sported two of the latest models (one on each arm). The less handsome ones sported three. This deviation from the usual order of things being due no doubt to the well known sex appeal possessed by all tars and the equally noted "lure of the blue" (uniform).

By the time the last show started the interior of the house resembled a sailors' convention. As the actor-sailors would attempt to hitch their trousers in the true and approved nautical style, snickers of derision from the "salts" witnessing the procedure would greet them. And "Spike" McGurk, gunner's mate on the "Holdfast" would whisper hoarsely to Mamie La-Vere (Mazie Lavery, late of the Columbia Wheel) "Dat guy's got no technique."

The sailors enjoyed themselves immensely and it is safe to say that Silverman found that despite the free admission for the ladies that business jumped up a bit during the showing of the picture. And the stunt meant too, that the sailors would remember the house the next time they put in port at New York and perhaps go up there again. We want to thank him for passing this along because we are sure that the Club is interested in knowing how the New York showmen sell their shows.

MANAGERS' ROUND TABLE CLUB

John McKenna Was Wise; He Gave Women Reducing Tips

If you're looking to cash in on business from the ladies then it's up to you to read this account of how John McKenna, manager of the Lyric Theatre in Jackson, Tenn., put the feminine penchant for reducing to good use.

To plug "They Learned About Women" he brought Bessie Love's 1930 Beauty Form Chart into play. The chart carried copy which informed the patrons that the celebrated star of "Broadway Melody" and "Chasing Rainbows," who was noted for her youthful vigor and vitality, had evolved the set of rules listed, for the purpose of helping other women retain their vim, vigor and vitality.

The chart went on to say that the star, who was appearing with Van and Schenck in "They Learned About Women," was a strong advocate of physical culture and deemed it necessary for women to exercise daily in order to retain the "perfect figure," omitting all weekly diets and similar fashionable methods. A listing of the chart then followed for women from five feet in height to five feet six inches.

No question about it, the women just ate it up, and if there's one sure way of getting them interested in your shows, this one might easily be it. We think we're drawing a pretty close conclusion when we say that McKenna sure knows his showmanship, for only real showmen take advantage of these sure-fire opportunities to cash in on business and good-will such as he does. And so, Mr. McKenna, as long as we know you're a very capable showman, there's no reason why you shouldn't pass along your work so that the rest of the Club can look it over. What do you say? Let's hear from you real soon.

There is always a premium in business on the man who does his work painstakingly, with completeness and finality; he is the man who will be trusted with more and more responsibility, up to the limit of his capacity.
—J. Ogden Armour.

Al Smith Crashed Society Page With This Corking Idea

How many showmen know that they can crash the society page of a local newspaper at a very small cost? Al Smith, the manager of the State Theatre in Winona, Wis., did it on "High Society Blues," and the results were so good that we felt the stunt merited representation on these pages.

In connection with this article we are running the ad that he inserted on the society page of one of the local newspapers. The cost of the ad was only ten cents a line and when you figure the number of persons who read it, then you'll realize what a break he got in the way of securing publicity for the picture. We would like to state that if you haven't any use for this gag just at present, that you file it away until such time as your booking will permit its use. What we want to point out, though, is the fact that here's a new line for you to work on. If Smith hit the society pages with this sort of ad, why can't you work it on the sport page or the women's page. DON'T FORGET—THE STUNT IS NEVER MARRIED TO THE PICTURE!

Announcement

Miss Janet Gaynor and Mr. Charles Farrell will entertain their many friends and admirers at the State Theatre, Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday—May 13, 14 and 15—with their latest musical success entitled "High Society Blues," superb successor to "Sunny Side Up."—Advertisement.

We would suggest that you take this and give it a break, as the results will more than prove its worth, and it's a certainty that you're not going wrong on it. We want to hand Smith a compliment on his use of the stunt and we know that it will meet with favor in the Club. Keep up the good work, Al, and don't forget that we'd like to know what else you are doing to keep them coming up to the box-office. P.S.—How about your picture, Al? We're sure that the Club would like to meet you "Face to Face."

YOU CAN'T SINK A FLEET WITH ONE BROADSIDE!

If there is any branch of business where determination, pertinacity and plain every-day stick-to-it-ive-ness is needed, it is in advertising.

The business man who goes into advertising with intentions of firing a salvo and returning to port is all mixed up in his battle plans. It takes more than one broadside to sink a fleet!

Advertising, to be successful and profitable, should be prudently planned, designed to fit the business, backed by good merchandise and service, and the whole carried out faithfully and continuously!

Zigmond Featured Novel Slants On His Merchandising

The town of Grand Junction, Colorado, certainly went up in the air over the balloon stunt that Jerome Zigmond, manager of the Avalon Theatre, pulled in conjunction with "Young Eagles."

He released over eight hundred balloons, some of which contained passes, on the morning of the picture's opening day. The stunt had been advertised through newspapers and word-of-mouth to such an extent that there was a huge crowd on hand—hoping to get one of the balloons containing a pass.

Every one of the 800 balloons carried the imprint about picture, theatre and play-dates.

The top of the marquee housed a locally-made glider as well as a loud speaker which emitted aeroplane motor noises from a special recording record. Both the sound of the apparent motor running and the sight of the glider on top of the marquee proved an excellent attention-getter.

These few stunts, which are so typical of the showmanlike work Zigmond turns out, helped a lot towards putting the picture over and it's a cinch that the house came in for plenty of good-will on the various angles. Good work Jerome, and listen, when you pull any more of them don't forget to keep us posted so that we can pass along the results to your fellow members in the Club.

In all things do your best. The man who has done his best has done everything. The man who has done less than his best has done nothing.

So Near And Yet So Far Away—But Beer Too Was Near

They are still laughing out in Waterloo, Ia., at the way E. L. Kidwell, manager of the Strand Theatre, cashed in on the Literary Digest wet-dry poll idea and pulled a stunt in connection with "Roadhouse Nights" by tying up with a local drug store.

The tie-up was with a drug store which offered free beer to every one presenting a ticket stub signifying they had seen "Roadhouse Nights."

The drug store announced the free beer stunt by printing and distributing 3,000 heralds at their own expense. The theatre also helped the stunt along by running a trailer on the screen.

Many comments were heard on the beer stunt, and from the consensus of opinion, Waterloo is wet. The stunt not only helped decide the wet-dry issue locally, but it proved an excellent medium in advertising the picture as well.

Of course we don't know what the town drys thought of the plan, but our opinion is that they realized Kidwell's showmanship, and for that reason could appreciate the stunt. Why don't you give us a little more dope on it, "E. L.," so that we won't be all wet with any predictions or surmises? Drop us a line now and then and let the rest of your fellow members see what you are doing to sell them in Waterloo, because from what we know of your showmanship you have yet to meet your "Waterloo."

This next is, in our opinion, an example of beautiful salesmanship. It concerns a young man who was proposing to his best girl.

"And, sweetheart," he finished, "I'll lay my whole fortune at your feet."

"It isn't a very big fortune," she reminded him.

"I know, dear," he replied, "but it'll look awfully big beside your little feet!"—Progressive Grocer.

Hicks Showed Them How They Put On Ritz 25 Years Ago

Using four very attractive ways to inform the people of Atlanta, Georgia, that "Puttin' On The Ritz" was to be played at the Paramount Theatre, Manager Robert Hicks was well rewarded with much free space on the feature pages of the Atlanta Georgian.

A classified ad contest was held, offering cash prizes for the readers finding the "ritziest" ad in the classified columns. The three best ads, meaning those with the essential clarity and detail, to be returned to the contest editor, won the first prize, while there was also a second cash prize and forty guest ticket prizes to see the picture.

A 1905 model Buick was paraded up the main avenue containing two hayseeds, dressed appropriately, and the sides of the car carried banners reading, "Puttin' On The Ritz In 1905." Immediately behind followed a new flashy model Buick containing a liveried chauffeur, and a very dignified looking person in full dress clothes, white gloves, walking stick, monocle and all. The sides of this car bore, "Puttin' On The Ritz in 1930."

Reproductions were made from a page in the Liberty magazine of March 29th, which had a splendid review and a picture of Richman and Joan Bennett. The margin on the bottom of the page was used for the theatre and playdate, and one page was inserted in each of the current Liberty magazines.

In the busiest section of Atlanta, a man in evening dress, bearing a "Puttin' On The Ritz" sign on his back, walked up and down the streets. To add to the attraction, the studs on his shirt were replaced by tiny bulbs, which flickered on and off.

McNeill Painted Town All Colors As Picture Plug

When we remarked a while back that "Stan" MacNeill, manager of the Capitol Theatre in Smith Falls, Ontario, Can., was going to be active it was because of his flare for pulling novel ideas.

When he played "Happy Days" he went to work and painted the town—not red, but well—. A can of paint and a brush enabled him to tie up a bunch of local dealers in a manner that bespoke showmanship. Though the photo we are showing is rather poor for reproduction, we guess you can make out the lettering he painted on the windows. For the jewelry stores it read, "'HAPPY DAY,' if you wear a Bell Diamond." The same idea was carried out in all of the other stores. After playdate the paint was washed off the windows.

To tie up the local automobile dealers he secured a number of window stickers which stated that it was "'HAPPY DAYS'—if you own a new "Chrysler." This was changed so that it would fit all of the other makes of cars, too. The slant proved very valuable towards building up business on the picture and was met with favor by the auto dealers. Oke, Stan, and no one can tell us that business isn't going up by leaps and bounds around your territory, because when a showman works the way you do, results are sure to be good. Let's hear more from you, and if they're any of our boys around your way who seem to be "on the lax" show them why they belong on these pages.

Horse Race Scene In Lobby Proved Good For Wallace

We have presented many lobby plugs on coming attractions through the medium of these pages and we know that every one agrees that they were pretty clever examples of showmanship. We have had stage settings, animated displays and many other forms. Now, to Hugh Wallace, manager of the Kitsilano Theatre in Vancouver, B. C., we have to hand a compliment for the corking display he created for "The Hottentot."

From a six-sheet he made a cut-out of a jockey and a horse. A three-sheet furnished another cut-out. He painted a race track scene on the wall of the lobby and built a race track on the floor; 11 x 36 frames were placed on both sides of the display and above the horse. When the entire work was completed and assembled the result was a knockout duplicate of a race track with a horse rider unseated, thundering down the homestretch. Though the photo we are reproducing is small, we are sure that if you examine it closely you'll be able to make out the finished product.

Patrons filing in and out of the lobby would stop for minutes at a time and gaze at the special display and when they took the time to rubberneck, there's no question but that the picture was going to be sold to them good and plenty. By the way, the results of Wallace's campaign were really shown in the subsequent business boom on the picture. We are glad to see that Hugh is still keeping right up in front with the rest of the Canadian showmen and we know that he'll continue the active interest he is showing.

CIVIC CONTACTS

(From Fox West Coast "Now")

LESTER J. FOUNTAIN, District Manager, San Diego, Calif.

While prestige and goodwill go hand in hand, there is a difference. If they are not handled judiciously and intelligently a manager will find he is obligating himself beyond his capacity, laying himself open to impositions and an unreasonable demand on his time and the resources of his organization. Goodfellowship is often confused with this elusive item. That good old hand-shake, slap on the back and honeyed words of his greatness is a type of good-will that does not always carry with it that other necessary adjunct, Prestige. And the others forget this type of good-will when the manager finds himself in a position where he has no alternative but to refuse some unreasonable request.

Many times I have heard the name of some individual or business organization mentioned with someone cutting in and putting them on the grease, when the individual or business mentioned was really a power in the community interested and active in all affairs of importance, occupying positions of trust and responsibility, their names solicited for important directorates and committees and quoted in the papers for the wisdom and authoritativeness of their remarks. Their names are a synonym of Prestige, but as for Goodwill it might be hard to reconcile their names with the accepted meaning of the term. Still with all this not really considered, builders of Goodwill through not giving Cheerful Consent or permitting exploitation of their time and resources to become a Custom with every spasmodic affair to which the least identity of charity or civic interest can be associated.

The point I am endeavoring to bring out is that a too ready and willing response to the multitude of contacts and requests made of the theatre for gratuitous participation and contribution of its time and resources brings about the condition of an endless chain which tends to cheapen the effectiveness of its operation and participation in the affairs of a community. Creating a lack of respect and proper consideration of the theatre's Prestige and cooperation, eventuating into a habit of taking advantage of OUR Goodwill.

The day is past when we should feel in the position of a suppliant when asking consideration of any official or organization to which we are justly entitled, but that mistake is still too often made. We are representatives of the third largest industry—a part of the largest theatrical organization in the world, holding memberships in Chambers of Commerce and should take an active interest in them—make the classifications in the various Service Clubs command respect upon our merits as a reputable business, contributing substantial payrolls and purchasing power to the community—through these classifications cultivate the real Prestige personalities of the community—see to it that we are included in the important affairs the papers are talking about—know the official family and the strings that count. Above all cultivate the Women's Clubs—they wield influence not alone in the public eye, but at the home councils around the family table.

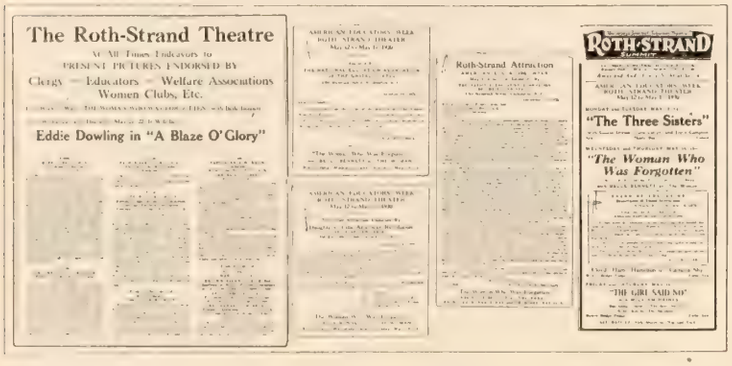
"FOURTH-OF-JULY"



Whatever it is that you intend doing for the Independence Day Celebration will have to be polished off mighty soon or it will be too late. We are assuming that you have planned some sort of a tie-up with your local American Legion Post, Chambers of Commerce, etc.

Details of theatre gags for this holiday are sorely needed by other showmen all over the country and if you have your arrangements all planned, why not shoot us the "dope" so we can pass it along. Some of the stuff received in response to our written request to a few dozen members has already been forwarded to those who requested information for this particular holiday.

By all means, see that the Flag is prominently displayed and the front appropriately decorated. Trailers for the occasion are available at every trailer service office. Special screen attractions can be secured to work in with the spirit of the holiday.

Mumford Uncorked Some Showmanship Selling This One

More than ever before, sound and talking picture productions of to-day offer showmen opportunities for displaying work that will have the public gasping. By this we mean that in the general trend of productions, both of yesterday and to-day, certain professions are being concentrated on and presented via the audible screen. For instance, take the railroad man, glorified by Lon Chaney, in "Thunder"; the aviator in "Flight" and "The Flying Fleet," the Navy in "Submarine," the Army in "West Point." As a matter of fact almost everything is being elevated to stellar heights by the movies. The latest is the School Teacher, who is being immortalized on the screen by the title "The Woman Who Was Forgotten."

As is only natural, it was to be expected that when Leon O. Mumford, managing director of the Roth-Strand Theatre in Summit, N. J., booked the picture into his house he would engineer a campaign on it that would cover, in every detail, all phases of the picture. He concentrated first on the schools and planned an American Educators' Week at the house. For one of his moves he made up an advance herald that, so far as make-up was concerned, proved a whiz. Feeling that he had to get away from the regular run of theatre heralds, he made this up in black and white, in the form of a four-page booklet. The front page, carried a message "SIGNIFICANT! Every Educator—Every Student and Every Public Spirited Citizen In America Should See And Hear—(The two middle pages were devoted to copy on the picture.)" And what copy it was! Mumford compared the film to "Humoresque" and "Over the Hill." He stressed the fact that the picture was a tribute and an epic. The copy had to sell them, it was bound to.

On the last page he put lots of class on by reprinting Henry Van Dyke's "A Tribute to the Unknown Teacher." In case any of the Club members who, having this picture booked would like to know more about this angle they need only to go to the Public Library and the librarian will give them some dope on it.

The herald was only one of the stunts. He next printed up three thousand special tickets which invited all teachers to witness the show at half price. The tickets were mailed to every school within a radius of 25 miles, and from the number that came into the box office it was seen that they were more than appreciated. This stunt was followed up with a newspaper campaign the like of which Summit had never before seen. We are reproducing a lay-out of some of the ads and you can note how he made use of the testimonials he received. His showmanship is very evident in the testimonials which are dated a couple of years ago. It seems that the picture had been pre-viewed by some of the country's leading educators and they forwarded their endorsements to the producers. Mumford remembered this and made use of the testimonials.

We would like to call your attention to the ad plugging the theatre, that works in "Blaze of Glory." By studying it closely you will note how he followed up his past week's triumph with this masterpiece of showmanship. In the ad heading he states that the theatre at all times endeavors to present pictures endorsed by prominent persons. And if you don't think that this means something in a small town you're "singin' in the rain." The ad carried testimonials on "Blaze of Glory" from many prominent persons.

A couple of pages wouldn't suffice to set forth the many benefits Mumford has reaped by using the showman angles he displays on every attraction he is selling. So the only way we can let you in on what else he is doing is by having Leon's work talk for itself and we certainly like to hear loud shouting of this sort, Leon.

Soft jobs come to those who have done hard jobs well, and easy money is postponed payment that comes to the man who has earned hard money.

—Wm. Feather.

McKoy Passes On A Trailer Tip Of Especial Interest

We've constantly hammered away at the idea that when you use a trailer to plug an attraction that you think will be of special interest to your patrons, it is advisable to work in a couple of extra effects. To this extent has James H. McKoy, manager of the Olympia Theatre in Miami, Fla., worked as witness the way he plugged "Young Eagles."

A very soft blue medium was used on all air scenes during presentation of the trailer with light red medium on opening and closing titles.

Immediately at the close of the trailer twice a day, twenty-five balloons were released from the top of auditorium to float all over the theatre. Attached to each balloon was a tag selling "Young Eagles" and Buddy Rogers. The house lights were brought up a little at this point to put over this stunt better.

The trailer stunt was used for a week in advance and caused all sorts of favorable comments and made excellent publicity for the picture.

Thanks for passing this along "J. H." as we are sure that it will be of more than ordinary interest to the Club members. Let's have some more like it. (Or perhaps, since you are an active member, we don't even have to ask for it.) Right?

Here He Is! Ben, Sperber, Bklyn's Newest Exploiteer

To the old dyed-in-the-wool exploitation men, this is going to sound rather entertaining and maybe just a wee bit far-fetched. But, "believe it or not," Ben Sperber jumped into the show-business in just one week. How this all happened and what he is now actively engaged in doing, is what we are starting out to tell you.

Ben is a close friend of Lou Goldberg, whose high-powered publicity stuff has given Brooklyn plenty to talk about, and through Lou he first became interested in the show racket. Having plenty of spare time on his hands while engaged as Vice-President of the National Optometric Ass'n, Sperber devoted most of it to acting as a sort of "silent" publicity hound for Goldberg, and with that as a starter he soon learned all the ropes and the game began to get into his blood.

Feeling that such work fitted his style of doing things, it was only natural he should seriously consider tackling it on his own hook. (No pun.) And once he made up his mind that way it was just a case of finding the means to that end. (Not meaning finis.) Such means came about through another great friend of Ben's, Bob West by name, and as Sperber describes him: "a great showman at the organ."

West took him in hand and after deciding that exploiteers of his type were needed he hauled him before Mr. Watts, manager of the Fox Brooklyn. Result: he is now Director of Promotion and Exploitation. An imposing title, sez we, but Ben must be living up to all that it implies, else, how could he be getting to where he is at so fast a gait?

His very first efforts resulted in some mighty fine stunts and right then and there it was the unanimous opinion of the "powers that be" at the Fox Theatre, that Sperber belonged to that crowd and that work. As witness the attached photo showing how he engineered a meeting between Al Lyons, reigning Master Of Ceremonies at the Fox house, together with some of the current Fanchon & Marco girls from the stage show, at Ebbets Field, the home of the Brooklyn Baseball Club, where they met right on the field of battle (not so far from right at that), none other than the nationally famous Babe Herman, champion slugger for the Dodgers, and "Dazzy" Vance, star pitcher and strike-out artist for the same Club.

It might be well to say, at this time, that Sperber has had a fitting background for his present work by reason of his position as Assistant Salesmanager for a great business-builder publication, "System." In his last connection, before going into the Fox Theatre, his chief work consisted of complete charge of all sales work. These jobs fitted him for now selling theatre attractions to the public. He is now twenty-nine years of age, married and (surprising) happy.

We feel confident that in Ben Sperber we have enlisted and enrolled the type of member whose activities, when recounted on the Club pages, will attract widespread interest and comment. That it will also serve as a basis for other men's exploitation promotion remains to be seen and whatever recognition such results will bring should be a source of great satisfaction to Ben as well as the Club as a whole.

The Real Club Spirit! "All For One And One For All"

THE SHOWMAN'S MISSING LINK

There is no single text-book for the showman. The business is developing so rapidly and the public's preferences are so fickle that a machine-made routine is a failure. However, there are certain principles which will always apply, and, fortunately, this business has unequaled up-to-the-minute helps in the form of a Manager's Round Table Club, meeting in Motion Picture News every week for mutual benefit and progress. Truly a great service is being rendered to the industry. In any issue, anyone striving for perfection will find an idea which, when applied, will pay big dividends.

Successful showmanship or amusement merchandising is not the sale of tickets to regular customers, but the real profit comes from holding these and selling other new patrons. I have found The Round Table Club an indispensable aid, and would think no more of being without Motion Picture News than I would to write tomorrow's ad without pen or pencil.

It has been said, "The successful man in any business is the man with the most information," and in line with this thought I frankly admit I don't know where I could hope to find a greater wealth of information than I find each week in The Round Table Club.

In striving to measure up to the responsibility entrusted to me I find the Club a great help and agree that it is the most helpful department ever sponsored by any trade paper. I am glad to see it an outstanding success and extend heartiest congratulations on the Club's recent second anniversary.

Hindu Was Used By Short As Stunt On "Green Goddess"

The casual observer looking at the lobby of the Tampa Theatre in Tampa, Florida, would have thought that a Hindu cult or some other sect was in session, for Paul Short, the manager, had hired a man, dressed him up as a Hindu and was using him as a plug on "The Green Goddess."

This man had had some experience at playing character parts on the stage and was particularly adept in putting over the lobby stunt. He was dressed as a Hindu with all the trimmings and sat in a miniature temple with oriental background reading the crystal—and stopping and telling the patrons who entered the theatre how intensely interesting "The Green Goddess" was and not to miss it.

During the showing of the picture, this man worked on the streets, passing out teaser envelopes on which was printed in bold type, "Are you superstitious?" Inside the envelope were 25 reasons why one should see "The Green Goddess."

Paul is one of the live-wires who figures prominently in the Tampa show merchandising, and with so many of the up-to-the-minute Round Table members in his city, the friendly competition that is aroused is always productive of showmanlike angles and we would like to announce that by watching our pages closely you will observe from time to time who is leading the "aces" in Tampa.

Fulton Recruited High School Jazz Band For Ballyhoo

Everybody in town certainly was happy when R. K. Fulton, manager of the Broadway Theatre in Council Bluffs, Ia., promoted a jazz band as part of his ballyhoo for "Is Everybody Happy?"

As his first move he gathered together five High School boys who played a piano, drums, clarinet, trombone and cornet.

Next he promoted a new Ford truck for the newly-formed orchestra to ride in, and bannered the truck with signs reading, "Ted Lewis and His Band in IS EVERYBODY HAPPY?"—Broadway Theatre Thursday and Friday." The truck cost nothing inasmuch as there was a small banner on the rear giving credit to the Ford dealer who furnished the truck.

The clarinet player who was supposed to represent Ted Lewis wore a tall silk hat such as Lewis wears in the picture. The hat was promoted from a clothing store for passes.

A small cabaret piano was used on the truck—this being promoted from a music store who had tied up on the theme songs.

Arrangements were then made with every music store of prominence that the truck would stop and play a few numbers in front of their stores at a certain time during the day. The band would also play in front of the theatre at different times during the day—then after a few trips up and down the main streets would parade the residential districts, taking in all parks, etc.

The band was used one day in advance and during the two-day engagement of the picture.

The cost of the stunt was very trivial—four passes being given to each musician. They rather enjoyed the ballyhooing and also figured the practice and the publicity they derived was well worth the task.

And, by the way, "R. K.," we'd like a photo of yourself and a little dope on your career in the business. You know we have a great many of your fellow managers on the Publix circuit and they all sport the membership certificate of the M. R. T. C. on their office wall. Let's have the photo so that they can meet you via a regular "intro." Oke?

A man's job is his best friend. It clothes and feeds his wife and children, pays the rent and supplies them with the wherewithal to develop and become cultivated. The least a man can do is love his job.

Tie-up With Local Plumber Effected This Novel Display

With so many screen revues scheduled for the summer season, we felt that this stunt engineered by M. E. Rosenberg, manager of the Diamond Theatre, and his assistant, Gene Allen, of Oakland, California, would bear reproducing on these pages, as it will probably fit in with some scene in a future picture.

The tie-up was a plug for a theme song, "Singin' in the Bathtub," which was featured in "Show of Shows." The local plumbing and supply house furnished the tub and the accessories and helped erect the display in the lobby. The display itself, as you will note from the photo, consisted of a bath-tub, tile effect background, pedestal wash basin, water heater, shower and all attached plumbing fixtures. A very life-like beaverboard figure graced the inside of the tub. The fixtures were of a beautiful pink designed to attract the feminine eye.

Concealed behind the tile background, a loud speaker, mounted on a baffle, was connected with the manager's office. In the office the record, "Singin' in the Bathtub," was played on a portable victrola, then amplified by a regular radio set and broadcast through the display. THE KICK OF THE WHOLE AFFAIR WAS THAT A MALE VOICE SANG THE SONG WHILE A FEMALE FIGURE WAS IN THE

TUB. The radio hook-up was arranged by the local radio man with the only cost to the theatre being the art work plugging the song, picture and dealer.

What do you say, boys—how about leading the Oakland delegation of the Club in activity?

Ed. Hiehle Also Takes Advantage Of Graduation Day

All over the country, showmen are taking advantage of the approaching Graduation Days to secure publicity and good-will for their houses, and are making school tie-ups by the thousands.

When Ed Hiehle, manager of the Midland Theatre in Newark, Ohio, read in the Managers' Round Table Club that "now is the time for all good showmen to cash in on graduation," he put on his Panama and walked over to the local schools. Over there he arranged a stunt whereby the various classes would select by ballot the most courteous member and the winner would be entertained by Ed as the theatre's guests. As the school season is drawing to a close, he worked this slant just in time and it might be well also for you to try it before the school session is finished.

As a surprise for the Graduating Class, Ed is planning to send a telegram to each member congratulating them on the conclusion of their school studies and inviting them to attend the theatre at the most convenient time. This stunt, need we say, will more than pay for itself in the subsequent goodwill and publicity that will follow and we would advise that if you haven't planned anything of this sort that you start on it now. Of course, if you wish to keep your nut low it is not necessary for you to send a telegram, but the telegram gag does maintain a dignity all its own, just send them a card congratulating them and inviting them to the theatre.

Oke, Ed., we figured that you'd do something along this angle and we are very glad to pass along what you have done and are planning to do. Let's know what the final results are will you, and we hope to be tramping over the greens with you early this summer, so you'd better practice up on those eagle-eyed eighteen-foot putts of yours.

Business is like a battlefield and the men who win are those armed with knowledge, new ideas, and superior methods.

And Song Writing Is Only One Of McDonald's Sidelines

We predict that a new name will flash across the poetical horizon in a little while; and then will the Bard of the Westlake Theatre, Tom McDonald of Los Angeles, Calif., come into the front ranks of the verse fashioners, like Shakespeare, etc.

As one of his many contributions to the recent Harold Franklin Moth, Tom and Miss Natalie R. Yeo composed the splurge that we are reprinting below:

THERE'S EVERYTHING IN A NAME

(Words and Music by Miss Natalie R. Yeo and Tom F. McDonald, Fox Westlake Theatre)

Now Shakespeare said "What's In A Name?"
And We Can't Say He Was To Blame;
However It Might Have Been That He Was Wrong,
For Though We'll Have To Admit,
That He Was A Bard With Wit,
We've Found A Name With "Everything In It,"
That's Why We Sing This Song.

(Chorus)

"H" Is The "Heart" Of The "Head of Our Game,"
"A" Is "Attainment," "Ambition" and "Aim,"
"R" Stands For "'Ruling' With 'Reason' and 'Right,'"
"O" Is For "Outward" and "Open" In Fight,
"L" Is For "'Learning,' The 'Light' To Proceed,"
"D" Is "Determined, Decision,"

"B" Is The "Brains" That It Takes To Succeed,
For The Doing Of Things With Precision.
"F" Is The "Faith" That He Has In Our Game,
"R" Is The "Record" Which Helped Him To Fame,
"A" Is For "Author," "Accomplishment," "Art,"
"N" Is For "NOW" Which He Helped Us To Start,
"K" Is For "Kindness," And
"L" Is "Loyalty,"
"I" Is For "Ideas" of Fame,
"N" Is For "Noted," It's Easy To See,
"There's Everything In A Name."

WESTWARD-HO!

Realizing the importance of gaining every slant in showbusiness, Motion Picture News just informed me that it would be O. K. to take a trip to the cost this summer.

To your chairman, this is naturally a source of pleasure, not only because of the trip and the enjoyment it will give us, but because it affords us the much-needed opportunity of studying conditions first hand out in the Northwest, the Pacific Coast and as much of Canada as our limited time will allow.

For over a year we have looked forward to making a cross country journey so as to visit as many theatres and meet as many showmen as such a trip would permit, but to attempt it at this time on so complete a coverage would entail many months and this being out of the question we shall make the trip out to Los Angeles as direct as possible.

Returning, we shall stop at San Francisco, Portland, Seattle, Vancouver, Regina, Winnipeg, Duluth, and other points, jumping back into Canada to take in Kitchener, Toronto and Montreal.

Our many members and readers have paid us the compliment of following our opinions and suggestions as being written by one who knows the different conditions that exist throughout the country and this trip will give us plenty of angles to discuss in future issues of the Club pages.

There are, no doubt, many slants which apply to the east which do not fit in as far the west is concerned and as it was many years since we last visited out there, we can bring our ideas right up to date.

We shall grasp every opportunity of meeting those hundreds of boys whose letters have been the source of inspiration to the Club pages and our only regret is going to be the impossibility of meeting them all.

Our observations shall be incorporated into a series of articles, interviews and stories dealing with show-angles in every spot we visit and we feel certain that the Club pages will benefit greatly by this trip.

It ought to be interesting for an exhibitor to visit Hollywood and the various studios to see what is going on at the production centre of the industry. That it will open the door to things that we never considered before will, no doubt, be true. But at any rate, we shall see for ourselves what it is all about.

"Chick"

We don't doubt but that this was well received and for that reason we made the prediction in our opening paragraph. And while we are about it we want to state that the birthday party Tom pulled not so long ago went over very well. Listing among his friends many celebrities of the stage and screen, Tom knew their birthdays, so when his rolled around, he found that a number of his friends were also celebrating the occasion, as their natal date was the same. A party was arranged; and what a party it was.

In the photo we are showing you will see the immense cake that was especially baked for Tom, by Henry, one of Hollywood's leading restauranteurs. The guests numbered among them Charlie Chaplin, J. Farrell McDonald, Claire Windsor and many other film celebrities. The party was a huge success and from the way it went over it appears like it is going to be an annual event.

Well, Tom, with summer rolling right along and our car nosing in the direction of Los Angeles we hope to drop in and see you before long. Congrats on your Franklin Month stunt and do't forget we're always glad to hear from you.

MANAGERS' ROUND TABLE CLUB

NEW ASSOCIATE MEMBER

Introducing Max Herschmann. Here is a man who, though not actively engaged in theatre operation proper, has been in the show business for a number of years, and in view of his fine record in the past we have enrolled him as an associate member of the Managers' Round Table Club.

He was connected with the Loew organization for many years, being assigned to the home office. At present he is putting new life in the trailer business by applying the showman principle to all his work. His connection with a local concern right here in New York has enabled him to turn out some good work.

Okay, Max, we're glad to welcome you into the Club, and we know that when any ideas come your way that will prove of benefit to your fellow members you'll pass them along, because an associate member is supposed to be active, too.

Fox N. J. Division Is Still Showing Plenty Of Activity

With the advent of summer, we find that there is no let-up on the work being turned out by the hustling showmen on the New Jersey side of the river.

This group of live-wires, representing a part of the Fox Metropolitan Theatres have had their efforts chronicled on our pages many times in the past and now we present a few more pictures of what they have been doing recently. The first photo shows a display that Al Unger, manager of the Fulton Theatre in Jersey City, used as an institutional plug. Al promoted a number of sample packages of Life-Savers from the manufactures and placed them in the window of a local dealer. A card announced that anyone guessing nearest correctly the number of packages would be entitled to free tickets to the theatre, and from the thousands of answers received the value of the stunt was proven.

The other photo shows what Charlie Mann, manager of the Pascack in Westwood, N. J., did to sell "High Society Blues." He promoted window space in a local department store and prevailed upon the owners to feature a special "Janet Gaynor High Society Blues" dress. The display was worked about attractive stills and cut-outs of the stars in the picture and did a great deal to arouse interest. Another stunt he used that helped him boost goodwill for the house was a tie-up with a store selling cameras along with other merchandise. The dealer agreed to give away twenty cameras to all Westwood children whose twelfth birthday occured in 1930. The stunt was a whiz. In fact, the dealer liked the idea so well that he threw in ten more cameras to cover the other ten kids who applied.

On Fox 100% Month, Meyer Cohen, manager of the Strand Theatre in Jersey City, secured a cake from one of the local bakeries and gave it away to a person holding a special number on tickets that were distributed at the theatre and bakery. The cake was placed on display in the lobby together with a sign announcing what it was for, and plugging the bakery and the special month. The photo of it, which we are showing, will give you an idea of what it looked like. We want to thank Jack Hobby, the wide-awake publicity man for the division, for keeping us up on what the "gang" is doing and we know they will more than continue the big time showmanship they are displaying.

Frias Introduces A New Idea That You Can Use Too

Carlos Frias of Ellanay Theatre, El Paso, Tex., received splendid newspaper co-operation in publicizing "Paramount on Parade."

The El Paso Post ran a sixty-inch ad on the picture; at the same time announcing how 25 free tickets to see the picture could be obtained. Scattered throughout the classified pages, five of the song hits from the picture appeared. The first 25 submitting correct answers received a ticket to see the picture. This large ad was run three days in advance of opening of picture.

The night before picture opened, Frias secured an hour of solid "Paramount on Parade" song hits being broadcast in the nature of a contest. The contest consisted of radio listeners phoning in their telephone numbers and at the end of the broadcasting, twenty lucky phone numbers were picked—entitling those persons to tickets to see the picture. There were 318 telephone calls during the hour and the station reported that three phones were being answered constantly the minute contest was announced.

A special horseshoe cut-out with stars all around it and heads of the Paramount stars in center with electric lights as border was placed in the lobby two weeks ahead of playdates. This display was very attractive and was the cause of many comments.

PRACTICAL PATRIOTISM

An example of constructive patriotism of the type that asks no reward for sacrifice other than accomplishments, was set by the Palestine R & R Theatres in the recent Help-the-Census campaign.

A total of 394 admittances to the theatre worth 50 cents each, were given away in an effort to get out a full census count for Palestine. This represents a donation of merchandise worth $197 in this campaign. And the people who received the passes are mostly all regular theatre goers who pay their money to be entertained.

But the result of the campaign is worth this sacrifice, for the census shows a gain in population rather than a loss. If the census had shown a loss in population, Palestine would have been stigmatized. People would have said, "The town is going backward." Enterprises would have felt a hesitancy in locating here because no one desires to live in a town that is losing size rather than growing.—Palestine (Tex) Press.

'Mammy' Was Song Of Joy When Frank Boucher Sold It

Rather than tell you ourselves about Frank Boucher's showmanship we decided that to start this article off we would let the Hagerstown Globe, one of the dailies published in Hagerstown, Maryland tell you what they think about his work. The story was published under the heading, "Hagerstown Day by Day," and ran:

"Frank Boucher, head man at the Maryland Theatre, is here by awarded the crocheted soup silencer for being the greatest press agent we know of, next to Dexter Fellowes, of circus fame. There may be others quite as good, and if there are we want them to accept our apologies, but we have never met them.

"Frank brought Al Jolson's latest hit, 'Mammy,' to town, and so that everyone would know that America's premier blackface comedian were here in a talkie, he put on one of the biggest ballyhoos that this old city on the Antietam has ever seen. And when Frank puts on a ballyhoo, he does it right, make no mistake."

The story then went on and told what Frank did to sell "Mammy" to the town. But since we are in receipt of everything that was called into play to sell the film we felt that our members would rather have it presented to them in the approved Club style. The campaign we are presenting below is, of course, in addition to the usual weekly advertising, newspapers and billboards, which take in a radius of thirty miles, covering the surrounding towns.

A tie-up with one of the local papers enabled Frank to secure special copies and imprint the front page in red with a message that "Mammy" was coming to the theatre. A note underneath advised the reader to watch out for the big street parade that was to form part of the campaign. The parade was a corker. The photos will more than prove what Frank did to make it a success. He promoted the aid of the local National Guards, fife and drug corps, boy scouts and nearly every other faction he could tie-up with. Banners proclaiming the worth of "Mammy" were carried. A car, transporting a man in blackface, made up to resemble Al Jolson, headed the procession. Police were pressed into service to keep the lanes clear and the whole effect was that of a trans-oceanic flyer returning to the homeland.

In addition to the photos, we are reproducing a sample of the full page co-operative ad he secured from the local merchants. Since so many fine pictures were booked into the house, he decided that he would accomplish two things at once and to that end he labeled the events "Blue Ribbon Month" and presented "Blue Ribbon Hits" in the ensuing "Blue Ribbon Weeks." With the first picture "Mammy" as the month's representative he felt that the campaign had to be good in order to excite the interest of the town.

Instead of using window cards on the picture, he secured a number of special blackout faces of Jolson and distributed them to the dealers. This new form of window plug was greeted with open arms by them and they were more than glad to put it in their windows. Tire covers were distributed to all taxicabs in the city. Small stickers plugging the picture were stuck on cars, trucks, poles, etc. Small cards, impressed with cut-out letters and made in black and white were placed to good advantage in the dining rooms of the leading hotels.

Frank endorsed the picture and used the appeal in the newspaper ads and on the screen. Horns were placed on the marquee and wires were connected to the non-sync in order that the theme songs could be plugged. Flowers, flags and pennants decorated the lobby and the whole tone throughout was one of minstrelial gaiety. The completeness of the campaign was seen in the crowd of standees packed at the back of the theatre during the run of the film.

We would like to go on and tell you about another campaign he engineered on "Hold Everything," that, too, was one of the most compact examples of creative showmanship which has ever been presented to the people of Hagerstown, but since you know what he did on "Mammy" we are sure that you will agree with us that his campaign on the other picture must have been good. Some of the highlights included personal telegrams to the residents, special heralds, special tie-ups and newspaper ads all of which tended towards bringing them to the box-office.

JUST A SUGGESTION!

Maybe if you analyzed and rid yourself of some foolish prejudices, you wouldn't have to rid yourself of some excellent co-workers.

—Personal Efficiency

A short time ago we presented an account of Frank's special "Gift Night" that he tells us was one of the best stunts he has ever engineered. Now he has another in the form of a "Treasure Contest" that is run off along the same lines. If you wish more complete details we would recommend that you refer back to the article under discussion and you'll get an idea of how he is putting his latest one across. That he knows his patrons' likes and dislikes is evident, for his showmanship proves that this follow-up is what the people want and so long as it brings in extra business we know that Frank is going to give it to them. And whenever he puts over these stunts you can be sure that he is going to let his fellow Club members in on them. Right, Frank?

On the great clock of time there is but one word: Now!

League Shifts To Avon Theatre In Utica, New York

This is intended to inform his many friends that Walter League is now managing the Fox Avon Theatre in Utica, N. Y., having transferred from the Japanese Gardens in New York City to his present position just a short time ago. As he has been in the show game for a number of years, and, being thoroughly versed in the racket, it is only fair to Walter to state that we believe he will make a record for himself and his house while in Utica.

As we now recall, he was the first manager of the Century Circuit's Sheephead Bay House in Brooklyn, N. Y., and prior to that he had been connected with another well-known theatrical organization. We want to congratulate him on his new position and state that working with men like Tom Olsen and the business executives who guide the functionings of the [illegible]

"The Stunt's the Thing"

Don't develop the wrong impression that the exploitation stunts described on these pages are married to the pictures with which they are used.

When we set forth the details or photographs on an exploitation stunt we do not give it the space because it is on that particular picture which is being exploited.

Rather, our idea is to set forth how the different members and readers are selling their pictures to the public with the thought that you will take the exploitation idea and use it on any picture or pictures which you have booked into your theatre.

Please try to keep in mind the fact that the name of the picture in connection with the exploitation stunt is of very little importance. The chief idea which we are passing on to you is the exploitation stunt itself.

Members will find it a very valuable and profitable pastime to see how many of these gags they can take and convert for use on attractions playing their houses.

Matt Press Managed To Dispose Of Old Stationery On This

Combining an advance plug with a "Mother's Day" greeting was one of the latest stunts that Matt Press, manager of the Saenger Theatre in Hope, Arkansas, used recently.

As most of the members know, Matt has a Kiddie Klub that is one of the finest in the country. An announcement was made at the meeting one Saturday matinee that on the Saturday prior to "Mother's Day" the members would be presented with a Mother's Day card to be carried home and given to their parent. This Saturday was five days before the opening of "Honey," so Matt tied them both in. And here's a slant that went with it. He had on hand a large quantity of the old style envelopes used before Publix took over the houses. Rather than waste them he imprinted them with: "TO MOTHER—FROM HER HONEY! A MEMBER OF THE PUBLIC SAENGER KIDDIE KLUB," and in this manner was enabled to get rid of them in a manner that would do credit to any man's showmanship. And below we reprint the copy on the card, so that you may file away the stunt for future reference.

To give you an idea of how he pulls with the kids in the town we are reproducing a photo of his lobby display on "The Vagabond King." On the week before opening, a request was made at the Kiddie Klub meeting that the youngsters bring live roses to help decorate the lobby for the showing. The response was great and all during the week fresh roses replaced the faded ones. The lobby attracted a great deal of attention and the picture also came in for an additional plug when the kids went home and stated that they wanted the flowers for "The Vagabond King."

Being no stranger to our pages, Matt has given us many fine accounts of his work and from what he is accomplishing daily out in Hope we know that he is going to continue his interest in us. Congratulations, Matt, for the nice showing you are making out there and remember to keep us posted.

Mother

It is the dearest name that mortal lips have spoken,
Glad symbol of love so strong
It never can be broken;
The name that's first upon our lips,
The last we murmur, too—
God keep me worthy of the love,
Mother, I've had from YOU.

The Young Man: May I ask you, sir, if you think that your daughter would make a suitable wife?
Lawyer McNab: No, sir, I don't think she would. Five dollars, please.

Merritt Sold Show In Fine Style To Good B. O. Receipts

With the playing of "Hallelujah" at the Strand Theatre in Birmingham, Ala., Manager D. Merritt chose a most appropriate means of heralding the feature and at the same time attracting people to the theatre to witness the film.

He secured the services of local talent in the form of a colored tin-pan orchestra, composed of a homemade drum contraption, harmonica, ukelele and two dancers, and erected a special platform on top of the marquee, where the performers can be in full view of everyone. Their so-called act proved to be very clever and entertaining, and became the source of considerable attention.

He also displayed some crackerjack showmanship when he set out to merchandise "Lummox." His work on this picture proves how easy it is to get window tie-ups whenever appropriate copy is used This particular window tie-up was engineered with the Birmingham Electrical Company who furnished one of their large windows which was devoted to plugs on the picture and their household appliance products. The copy on all of the products read "Don't Be A 'Lummox' And Wear Yourself Out—Let Electricity Do The Work For You." The articles in the window were connected with the stills and catch line by means of ribbons, and the whole effect was one that would sell products in the most forceful manner.

Watkins Displayed Fine Showmanship On Recent Picture

The only trouble with this account which we are setting forth of the atmospheric front turned out by V. D. Watkins, manager of the Empire Theatre in Montgomery, Ala., for "Honey" is that we haven't a photograph in order to illustrate more clearly what this knock-out display must have created in the way of a novel effect.

All the lattice work used in the front display was made up by the boys in the art shop and the engineer. In making up this elaborate display was a case of smilax, 300 artificial waxed roses of different colors—and on the outside, by the three archways in the opening, were 100 artificial wisterias.

The total cost of the smilax and the 400 flowers was $15.00.

The banners, seven pieces in all, were lettered in red and green against a white background with a scalloped border worked in three shades of blue.

The lattice work had two pillars on each end extending from sidewalk to marquee and another double set of pillars in front of theatre extending almost to the curb. All pillars were arched with more trellis work on which was entwined the flowers and on which appeared cut-out heads of Nancy Carroll.

The cut-out letters of Nancy Carroll above the marquee carried electric lights. The box on top of the marquee under the Nancy Carroll letters was a shadow box made up in three complete sections. One section carried stationary lights shining through yellow transparent cloth. The drops underneath the title of picture were made up in two sections with electric lights behind them. The bottom rows were hooked up in series with the flasher board of the vertical sign. The effect was a perfect illusion of dropping honey.

So with work like this on display, is it any wonder that Watkins had the town talking for weeks after? And it's not only on "Honey" that he turned out fronts like these. We happen to know that he turns out "honeys" on every new show and we hope that in the future he will favor us with some photos so that we can pass them along to his brother members. What do you say "V. D.," you know that they'd like to get a look at them as much as we would?

These Three Ads Of McGeachies May Aid Your Layouts

That representative showman from Canada, W. P. McGeachie, manager of the Algoma Theatre in Saulte Ste. Marie, Ontario, is again with us. Some time ago we passed along some of his advertising layouts and showed you what he turns out in the way of newspaper work, and promised you some more accounts in the future. McGeachie has obligingly dug out a couple of full-page co-operative ads that he used to plug past productions and shot them to us for the rest of the Club to look at.

When you consider that this showman hasn't all of the metropolitan resources to call upon and in view of that fact has managed to achieve the "happy medium" in the form of copy of the most friendly intimacy, you will appreciate more fully his showmanlike knowledge of the public. For his first venture on the co-operative page idea he decided that a little novelty would go good with "Glorifying the American Girl," so he inserted a bunch of news items along with the ads and by scanning the layouts closely you can make them out.

In the second full-page spread on "The Locked Door" you'll find an idea that might be of value to you on your next co-operative tie-up. Note the line heading the page: "Telephone Orders Open THE LOCKED DOOR to Quick Delivery. The Following Merchants Solicit Your Trade by Telephone Orders." By running it like this McGeachie injected an angle into his ad that proved of great value to the merchants and enabled him, as a result, to get away from the regular run of ads. The merchants' phone numbers were placed around the picture plug.

We're certainly glad of the opportunity to pass this work along, "W. P.," and you can bet that first chance we get we'll take the time to visit your thriving metropolis, and the official "Who's Who" of the town, the Algoma. As you infer that you will treat us to hunting, fishing, and WHAT THIS COUNTRY HASN'T GOT, how can we resist the temptation to go HUNTING AND FISHING?

And listen "W. L.," we are going to let you in on something confidential and tell you that in the race to determine which of you go-getters who merchandise attractions in Canada is deserving of a place in the front ranks, you've got a pretty good foot-hold; but in order to stay there you'll have to keep us up on the rest of your ads because your fellow-managers in the Dominion are hot on your trail.

GIVE GUY A GREETING!

His many friends will be glad to know that Guy Kenimer is back in the field again.

When he left the Publix organization not so long ago, with which outfit he had been acting as city manager of Tampa, supervising the Publix Consolidated houses, we sort of lost track of him, but now he turns up as manager of the Palace Theatre in Jacksonville, Fla., and supervisor of four other E. J. Sparks houses.

Knowing what he did with the Publix organization it is only fair to state that if he continues the same brand of showmanship he will go far with this new position that he so richly deserves. The first example of what he is doing to pack the five houses he has under his wing may be seen in the campaign he engineered on "The Cuckoos" that had Jacksonville laughing and gasping for a whole week.

Working along with showmen of the sort that Jacksonville harbors (there's Al Weiss and Jonas Perlberg, Bob Mitchell and Wally Allen, for instance), it's certain that the feeling of friendly competition which will be aroused will be productive of some corking showmanship. We want to compliment Guy on his new assignment and let him know that we look for a lot of good things from around his way.

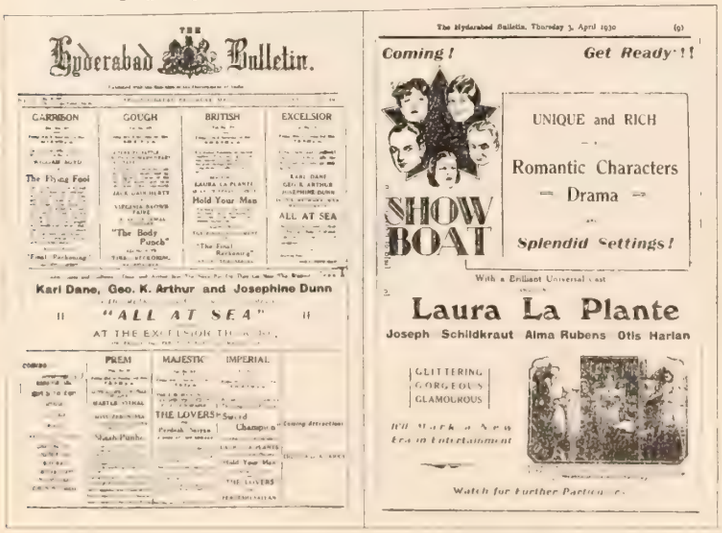
THERESA NIBLER JOINS!

Meet the latest showman to join our organization. Miss Theresa Nibler, manager of the Electric Theatre in Springfield, Missouri.



Coming from the "show me" state, we could say that we'd like to see some of Miss Nibler's work. But how are we going to do that, especially when she has already shown us what she can do. And with a real Club spirit like that, is it any wonder that we make the declaration that she is going to make a lot of showmen look to their laurels?

We want to welcome this peppy show-woman into the Managers' Round Table Club and let her know that we are more than interested in hearing about her activities. Her enrollment swells our feminine contingent still more, and working with Miss Anna Bell Ward, Miss Jean LaRoe, Mrs. C. E. Ledford and a couple of others of like calibre, it stands to reason that they present a pretty formidable aggregation.

Newspapers In India Carry Ads On Their Front Pages

The attractions at local playhouses in far off India seem to be of such importance that they are granted front page advertising space on the local newspapers. In order that this statement may not seem far-fetched to you we are reproducing herewith a couple of pages of advertising from the Hyderabad Bulletin, in Secunderabad, India.

It is a cause for rejoicing when these showmen are enabled to get a hold of any mats to lend more life to their advertising. That they know how to inject "life" into their ads is seen in the full page ad on "Show Boat" that some live-wire turned out. Remember that an ad of this sort is a rarity and you can fully appreciate what those fellows are doing and the struggle they have to use methods away from the usual routine in their advertising. This ad was run on one of the back pages due no doubt to the fact that the rest of the theatres in the locality occupied the front page space.

On the front page of the paper there are seven houses grouped together and each house is plugged in solid type. There's no opportunities either for any one of them to "steal the page" because they are all handicapped by lack of material. So when you start to kick because a compositor makes a little mistake in your ad, perhaps leaves a dot off the i, think what these showmen have to buck up against in the way of selling their shows. And sell their shows they have to. We can say that there is no place at all where a show musn't be sold. We are very glad of the opportunity of passing along this work and we feel that all our members will agree with us that despite working under handicaps these showmen manage to bring them in.

Don't You Agree That The Canadian ShowmenKnowBiz?

If we owned a jewelry store and were handing out cups for every piece of showmanship in the form of window displays created by members of the Round Table Club, we know that among the showmen receiving the silver mugs would be found Pete Egan, hustling manager of the Capitol Theatre in Regina, Saskatchewan, Can.

Not only for window displays would Pete be the recipient of an award, but also because of what he is doing to keep the Capitol Theatre before the public's eye and "day by day, getting better and better." One of the most difficult problems which Pete encountered was that of window tie-ups in the larger stores, especially the music shops. But was he discouraged? We'll say no! And the way we can prove that is to let you look at the window display that he fixed up for "Paramount on Parade."

This window was secured from the largest music dealer in Western Canada and it was certainly a feather in his cap when he received the store's consent to "pep up" their window. Feeling that a different touch was necessary, and also diplomacy, he arranged the entire back of the window to be devoted to a display of the sheet music song hits from the pictures. In the foreground he placed a cut-out plugging the feature and the song hits and if you'll look closely you will note that Pete does not try to have the theatre steal the window, but just the same no one can look at the display without knowing what feature the Capitol is offering for the week.

In closing we stand ready to tell the world that this display certainly knocked them for a loop as far as selling power was concerned, and unless we miss our guess Pete is going to be plugging the Capitol in the window many more times.

MANAGERS' ROUND TABLE CLUB

MODERN POSTER WORK!

J. A. MacDonald tells us that his lobby work is better, or at least as good, as those found on Broadway or the Loop and judging from the two photos we are reproducing, his statement is certainly O. K. "Mac", by the way, is the manager of the Harris Theatre in McKeesport, Pa., and doing a mighty fine job of it too.

But to get back to what we started to tell you. The Harris Theatre recently came across a new type of poster art service, wherein the theatre receives two designs on every picture released. These designs can then be made up into beautiful art posters at a cost far smaller than the ordinary lettering on plain card board. He is quite sold on the idea and the type of work they are turning out appears, beyond all shadow of doubt, to be marvelous. What particularly struck us as forcibly was the likenesses of the stars. Something rarely found in theatres outside of the bigger cities, and when you do find work of that sort it generally is difficult to recognize who the stars are.

We would like to know a lot more about MacDonald and his modern ideas for making his theatre as attractive as those in the key cities. It sure takes a live-wire man to find out what is new and then capitalize on it for his house. In this respect "Mac" need not take a back seat for anyone. What's that you ask? Where can one find a poster service of that kind? Well, you'll have to drop "Mac" a line to the theatre and we are certain he will give you whatever dope you would like.

Tell us some more MacDonald. We like your stuff. And how———!

PATRONS GET A FREE KISS

Tampa, Fla.—A pretty girl in the lobby of the Prince Theatre, backed up by the startling announcement that the young lady would give each male customer a good-bye kiss after the show, caught the eye of the passers and brought excellent business. This little stunt was cooked up by manager Ramos during the showing of "The Good-Bye Kiss," and every man got his kiss, too, a nice candy one all dolled up in waxed paper.

"TIP US OFF"

There is no finer news than an announcement of advancement for any showman in this business and when such an event takes place you should, by all means, drop us a note so we can carry the news on these pages.

Remember, not only the members and readers of these pages want to know about it, but your personal friends and acquaintances in different parts of the country will be equally as delighted to hear such good news.

Personal publicity of this sort is far from "blowing your horn." It is just as consistent from the publicity angle as a news announcement from the heads of a national theatre chain or distributing organization. They use just such means of letting the industry know what is happening in their outfits, so you, too, should avail yourself of this method of passing along good news of your own doings.

'Who-What-Where' Is An Ideal Stunt Sez F. V. Kennebeck

F. V. Kennebeck of the Le Claire Theatre, Moline, Ill., obtained excellent results with a "WHO, WHAT, WHERE CONTEST." The following will give you the idea of the contest and what Manager Kennebeck did to put it across.

A four page newspaper, a bit smaller than tabloid size, called the LE CLAIRE THEATRE NEWSETTE was published containing short articles (average 120 words) about different merchants in town. Each of these articles contained the good points and features of each business. For example, "On Fifteenth St. a little above Fifth is located Moline's leading furrier. This concern will store your furs while they are being repaired, and this alone is an inducement well worth consideration." At the end of each article these three lines appeared. Who are we? What is our room number? What is our phone number? In some cases other questions were asked,—Who is the proprietor? What is the name of the store? Where are we located? (This question when no address was given.)

Two issues of this Newsette were published. 8,000 copies of the first were distributed. Ten days were allowed for answers to come into the theatre. On the 11th day 3,000 copies of the corrected issue giving the answers were distributed at the theatre and homes. The first issue carried the coming attractions for the next three weeks. The second issue stressed the feature and other attractions which were to appear the following week.

Prizes offered for these giving the greatest number of correct answers were 1st $25.00, 2nd $15.00, 3rd $10.00. No employee of the LeClaire Theatre or any member of their family was eligible to enter the contest. All answers were to be in by midnight on a set date, those coming in later were not counted. Answers were sent in by mail.

Manager Kennebeck is confident that this idea can be worked in any theatre at no cost whatsoever. Each merchant was charged $10.00 for entry. A man was hired who could write the articles and sell them, giving him as a salary all above the cost of printing, prizes, distribution and trailers or any other incidental expenses. All money collected in advance or on day of first issue.

Presentation of the prizes took place on three consecutive nights the week following the close of the contest and much publicity was obtained by the theatre and the entire expense was covered by the money collected from the merchants in town.

There are many fine points to this idea of Kennebeck's and we certainly would like every member and reader of our pages to look it through. Maybe the entire layout may not appeal to you or your local situation, but then again, there may be many fine slants that would just work out to perfection for your house. But you'll never know it if you don't follow these things through a little more thoroughly. Let's hear some more from you "F. V." We rather like your style!

MANAGERS' ROUND TABLE CLUB

RITZ PATTER

By ADOLPH PINCUS

(This is one of a series of humorous "chats" used by Pincus in his theatre's program. If they appeal to you, go ahead and use them with his compliments.)

This is the time of the year when the topic of conversation turns to the subject of day-light saving.

The government makes us all push the clock ahead one hour, just to be sure that we lose an hour of sleep, and then it stays light so long at night that we can't go to bed early, and no one knows what becomes of all light that's saved.

There has always been a question as to which was more beneficial to mankind the sun or the moon, and the consensus of opinion is that the moon comes out at night and gives us light, while the sun comes out in the day time when we don't need it.

You never heard of a fellow spooning with his lady fair in the sunlight—it isn't romantic, and then again he would get such a heavy tan on one side of his face that when he got home his wife would know it in a minute—so it's very evident that moon-shine is the thing.

Of course that extra hour of day light does some good, it keeps the cows more contented and the chickens lay more eggs but there is no harm in an egg that's layed an hour earlier, and you don't need day light to tell if the egg is bad, that can be done just as good in the dark.

However, please bear in mind, that if you miss our first show because you have been fooled by the day light in the evening, you still have time to see a complete performance by getting to the theatre as late as 8:45 P. M.

Irving Alexander Puts Birthday Party Over With Bang

When he celebrated Anniversary Week at the Rivoli Theatre in Boston, Mass., recently, Irving P. Alexander, live-wire manager of the house made a real birthday party out of it by tying up all the local merchants he could find who would lend an ear to his propositions.

By securing the co-operation of the Necco Sweets Company he procured 10,000 pieces of their latest confection and distributed it to his patrons in a small pay envelope which besides carrying a credit line for the candy company, bore a notice on the anniversary week and the pictures playing the house at that time.

As a treat for the first 1,500 ladies attending the matinee performances during the week he handed out telephone indexes which bore a front page plug for the theatre. The indexes were very attractively made up and carried a number of pages devoted to ads solicited from the local merchants. The kids, too, were not forgotten and they received autographed photos of movie stars. Another thing Alexander gave away was free drinks, promoted from the bottler of a popular drink and this stunt certainly made a hit with the patrons attending the evening performances.

Besides these tie-ups he had many other surprises in store for his patrons in the way of screen novelties, lobby displays, window displays and other things. The whole week went over great and the house was certainly let in for a lot of good-will. Fine work, Irving, we're glad to see you keeping right in step with that hustling bunch of Boston showmen who make up our delegation from that section of Massachusetts and we know that you are going to continue your activities.

Carl M. Osborne Is Still Turning Out Ads That Sell

A symphony in bold display type and novelty lay-out would be an appropriate caption for the type of newspaper advertising being turned out by the Lima Ritz Theatres for the various houses they operate in that prosperous and beautiful Ohio city.

The top line above the Sigma name slug on the full page ad for "Sally" is used with good judgment regardless of whether the line is original or picked up by them elsewhere.

Carl M. Osborne is one of the men responsible for this type of stuff and in passing it along we feel that we are rendering a service to our many other members and readers because, undoubtedly, these lay-outs will suggest to the many angles to which they can pep up their own newspaper advertising, as well as business.

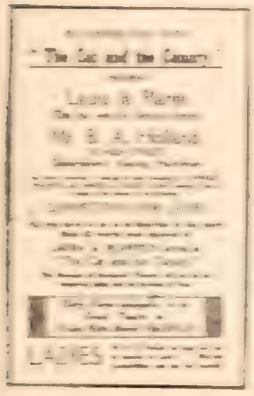
Carl has been one of our most active members and his contributions to the CLUB pages embody many original as well as novel ideas. That this is a fact was demonstrated to us on many occasions when managers all over the United States made use of successful ideas engineered and executed through his engineering.

With the big chains rapidly absorbing all of the small independent groups, it seems to be only a question of time before men like Osborne will find themselves in a marvelous position to demonstrate their ability to organizations who are constantly on the look-out for man-power and brain power capable of filling responsible positions with a much better scope and a far broader future.

It has been unfortunate in the past, that these small independent groups were not giving the house manager the breaks they were entitled to, and in many instances they were the losers, because they would discourage the originality and pep of men who were destined to become outstanding figures in the show business.

We are very grateful to Mr. Osborne for keeping us posted on his more recent activities and we sincerely hope that he will continue to keep up his active membership by posting us further on what he is doing. We are rather proud of the fact that the ROUND TABLE CLUB is so well represented in Lima and between men like Osborne and Sid Lawrence, we know that things theatrical must be mighty interesting for the theatregoers in that city.

MATT PRESS says:



"Permit me to say at this time, the combination of ideas gleaned from members of the MANAGERS' ROUND TABLE CLUB thru the columns of your invaluable publication are a regular 'Open Sesame' to increased box-office receipts."

MANAGERS' ROUND TABLE CLUB

South African Showmanship As Done By Mgr. Nicholls

One of the most astute showmen in our South African delegation is R. Nicholls, who manages the Grand Theatre in Grahamstown. We have endeavored to show you from time to time the methods he employs to bring them into his house and we feel that you will agree with us that he sure knows his business.

Not only on these angles does Nicholls work, but on many others as the photos show. Just look at those corking billyboots he turned out on "Speedy," "Sembe" and "Seventh Heaven." And also the teaser campaign he used in the theatre for "Seventh Heaven by pasting the title on all of the stairs and doors in the theatre. Incidentally, that street billyboo on the picture was so arranged as to accommodate two men. The men carried it about the town and it attracted plenty of attention from everyone.

The same type of copy that he uses for newspaper advertising is used in his house organ and considering local conditions he certainly turns out an excellent program and one which he endeavors to pep up by the use of well blended colors. As Mr. Nicholls no doubt knows, we and the rest of the Club are more than pleased at the opportunity to witness these examples of his work and we want to thank him for the continued interest he has shown ever since joining the Club, and express the hope that he will keep it up.

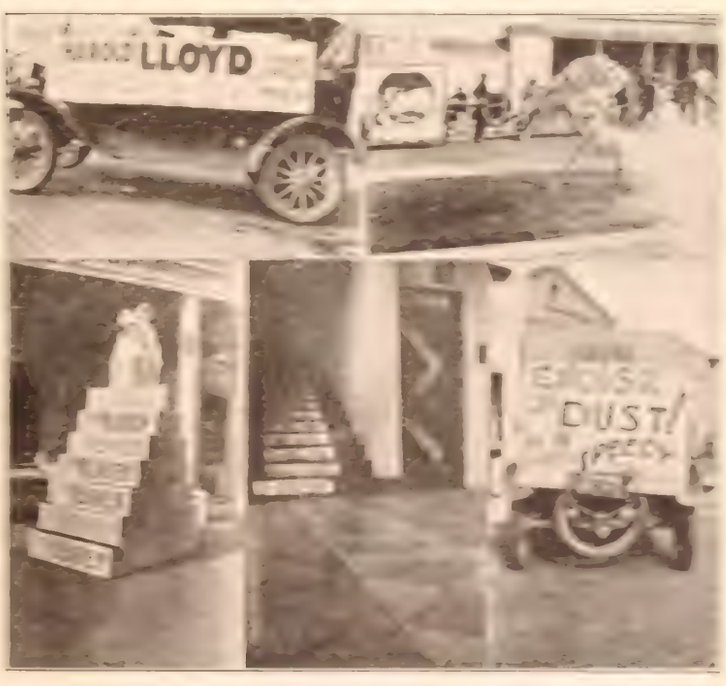
SHERRED WANTED ATTENTION — AND HOW!

Here's another new one, under the which must go to Carl Sherred. Knowing the enormous amount of correspondence that is received daily at Club Headquarters Carl evidently decided that something would have to be done about letting the brother members know about the special stunt he engineered for the run of "Journey's End" at the Majestic Theatre in Altoona, Pa., for he pulled a fast one on us.

Well, see? It was the last week, you remember, [illegible] Carl had a nice dollar to the heavens part of which went into stamps and sent crossing and registering as something which we might not get. Glad a right considerable "Ah, we said, "It's entirely likewise to such necessary." The Boys Brigade." But, no, it was the dickens for his pay. The payment very real since Carney Jackson is a member of [illegible] who were begging along with [illegible] for envelopes. So all appearances to contrary to be sure of the boys would be [illegible] through the mail. We looked at it, turned and wondered what the results would be.

A few seconds later the mailmen cast off the rope from their shoulders and while one wiped his dripping brow with the sleeve of our Palm Beach suit coat the other inquired "Are you Mr. Lewis—Chick Lewis?"



"Yes, I am," we replied. "Then as the mailman passed us he handed us a package. "Nothing we can do for you?"

"Yes, open this." And he pointed to the bale that took up most of the office. We were a little surprised to hear him ask us to open the package and asked him whether it was a post office regulation.

"No," came back the answer, "but after you have it opened you will be glad to do it, and by the way, the guy who sent it says 'hurt'."

Then we looked. On top of the folder, painted in brilliant red letters, screaming their message right at us we read:

"Chick, Open This At Once"

MANAGERS' ROUND TABLE CLUB

Sid Lawrence Made A Play For Goodwill Of Schools

All of the dust being kicked up around the vicinity of Schine's Ohio Theatre in Lima, Ohio, can be laid to the activity displayed by Sid Lawrence, manager of the local house.

As nearly everyone in the Club knows Sid, and the work he is doing, it will not be necessary to launch into a graphic description but we would like you to know that in the brief time he has been back in Lima, he has certainly put over some great stuff. One of the first of his activities was a tie-up with a local laundry whereby he plotted a "Blue Monday" campaign. He made up a herald of four pages, printed in blue and white. The herald plugged the laundry and the theatre and on the back page stated that upon presentation of it at the box-office, the holder would have their laundry called for at home and a discount of twenty-five percent given on the first bundle. The space reserved for the name and address of the prospective customer was also put to use as a mailing plug by Sid and the laundry.

For graduation time he sent out personal telegrams to each graduate, the copy on which read, "HEARTY CONGRATULATIONS UPON YOUR GRADUATION. YOU ARE NOW STARTING OUT ON YOUR REAL LIFE'S WORK WE SEND YOU OUR BEST WISHES FOR YOUR FUTURE SUCCESS AND HAPPINESS AND AS A TOKEN OF GOOD-WILL WE WILL HONOR THIS TELEGRAM AS ADMITTANCE WHEN PRESENTED AT OUR DOOR." The stunt met with unanimous approval from both the teachers and students and Sid found that his house secured plenty of good-will from it.

When he played "Caught Short," he felt that a little novelty in the form of a herald was needed so he imprinted a lot of envelopes (letter size), with "CONFIDENTIAL! TIPS ON A SURE THING BY ONE WHO KNOWS." Upon being opened the envelope was found to contain a number of "Advance tips to investors" which finished up with a plug for "Caught Short." Five DONT'S were enumerated and they were all on the style of the last ones which read, "DON'T Forget the market is a forerunner for business conditions—therefore always read the financial pages of the newspapers. DON'T Overlook The Greatest Amusement Investment Of The Year, etc."

The above stunt was followed up with another laugh herald. This time on "Gay Madrid." Sid distributed a number of cards about the town which read: "NEW PARKING LAW (The copy then went on) Section 611, Article 22 Made Necessary By Sudden Hot Weather. On Sunday, Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday, May 18-19-20-21, young ladies, young men and all classes will change their parking places from street corners, lonely country roads, parlor chairs, etc., to the (Theatre and Picture Plug)." When these heralds first made their appearance they were the subject of a lot of comment until closer scrutiny and it was noted that they were plugging a theatre attraction.

These few activities that we have set forth here are typical of all the showmanlike work that Sid turns out daily in Lima and as he is one of our most active members, the future will no doubt bring many more of his showmanlike slants.

No man should ask for more than employment; when that is given, it is up to him to do the rest.
—Samuel Rea.

AN ORIGINAL FRONT!

Here is an example of smart font display work as created and turned out by Bill Wolfson, progressive manager of the Paramount Theatre down in Montgomery, Ala. We doubt whether anyone will deny the novelty or attractiveness of this fine display and if, in reproducing it, we are passing along a good suggestion, then we have not worked in vain to let you see what Bill is doing. Shoot us some more, we have a weakness for good front work of this type.

MANAGERS' ROUND TABLE CLUB

Fields Tells Us That This Plan Is Going Over Great

Here's another angle on the "Guest to the City" slant that so many showmen have adopted. The stunt, as most everyone knows consists of learning who the new arrivals to the city are and presenting them with a free ticket to the theatre. E. P. Fields, manager of the Capitol Theatre in Moose Jaw, Sas., Canada has eliminated the free tickets from his personal greetings and from what he says we manage to deduce that his plan is proving extremely successful.

The letter that we are reprinting below is sent to all visitors to the city. Their names are obtained from the hotel registers every evening and the letter is despatched so as to reach them in the morning.

Dear Mr. Doe:

Hearing that you are on a visit to Moose Jaw, may we be permitted to give ourselves the pleasure of according you a warm and hearty greeting to the city.

We trust that while you are here, you will feel that you are most welcome in our midst, so that should the opportunity arise in the future you will have a desire to come amongst us again.

Should you have the leisure time at your disposal you will find entertainment at the Capitol Theatre, where only the pick of the world's best talking pictures are shown. For today we are showing a new miracle of the talking screen, Lawrence Tibbett, a Metropolitan Opera star, in the immortal singing masterpiece, "The Rogue Song," and, knowing that nothing is good enough for us but the best, we are sure that this entertainment will be to your satisfaction.

We should also like to mention that if you require any information, concerning the business or industrial establishments or public institutions of the city, it will be gladly given you on inquiry at the offices of the Board of Trade, 53 River Street E., telephone 4245.

With the heartiest of welcomes, we are

Yours very truly,

CAPITOL THEATRE, MOOSE JAW,
E. P. Fields, Manager.

Perhaps you haven't even been using this stunt at all. Here's your opportunity to give it a play and if you feel that free tickets would help it along—give them away. We want to thank our Canadian member for letting us see what he is doing and when we receive so fine a stunt as this we take great pleasure in presenting it to the rest of the Club. Keep us posted on your other work too "E. P." because we happen to know that you're turning out some mighty fine stuff.

No person will have occasion to complain of the want of time who never loses any.

—Jefferson.

"ECONOMY"

(Note: This box is being reprinted at the urgent request of the head of a large chain of theatres. He feels that the advice contained in the little story is important for every manager.)

If there is any sign of carpe-mundifuse in a theatre manager, it is that gentleman who claims that his outfit is so "stingy", they do not let him spend a cent for this, that or the other thing.

First; craving your humble pardon, we would say to you: "You're all wet."

Economy, properly practised, is one of the first signs of efficiency. It does not follow, because your superiors keep a check on you, that they are stopping you from spending money for necessary purposes.

We have tried to instill, into our many members and readers, the thought that they ought to do certains things without waiting for the "bosses" to come along and tell them what to do. A manager, with the proper interest in his theatre's overhead, should be constantly on the alert to save every penny possible because those pennies amount to a vast sum at the end of a year just for his one theatre alone.

We are compelled to bring out of dead storage an old expression, but, nevertheless a timely one: "It's not how much you spend, it's how intelligently you spend it." That's what counts every time and if you are keeping your "showman eye" peeled to hold that "nut" down to the bone, you will guard every cent as though it were your own, and here is what we want to get into your systems so that it won't seep out again:

Before you spend any money foolishly, suppose you hesitate just long enough to ask yourself the very same question: "Is the spending of this money absolutely essential?" If the answer is "Yes," then you have at least tried to convince yourself that you are doing the right thing. If the answer happens to be "No, I can do so and so and save this money," then you are not only a showman but an executive. And it's from such stuff that Honest-to-God executives are made.

The men who have succeeded in this business and are continuing to succeed are men capable of proving that they know the value of a dollar and it takes a smart man to do that.

"Chick"

Swanson's Front For "Free & Easy" Had Them Looking

Here's the whole low-down on the construction of the ace lobby front for "Free and Easy" that R. M. Swanson of the Hippodrome Theatre in Miami, Fla., built.

Swanson used Atlas board supported by 1x2's to build box front covering the front of the theatre and extending halfway back into the lobby. The pieces against the lobby wall were about ten feet high; also being located at the box office.

Upon this beaverboard was applied craftex covering the entire display and while it was still wet, broken pieces of mirrored glass were placed about an inch to two inches apart. When the craftex dried the artist tinted the entire display, shading off from one color to another which gave a beautiful effect.

On the front part of the display facing the street was placed large cut-out stars of beaverboard on which was painted the star's name, punch copy, short subjects and cut-out title of picture in metallics.

On the pieces extending along the lobby walls was placed more cut-out beaverboard stars with the centers taken out and stills of stars mounted from behind.

In the center of each lobby piece was placed a large beaverboard star about seven feet high with the name of the picture, "Free and Easy" cut out of the center with tracing paper mounted from behind. And behind each star was a different colored light flickering on and off.

Each beaverboard star carried a border of silver metallics and with different colored lights flickering on and off from the marquee, the effect was dazzling. For flash purposes, a large crystal ball was suspended from the center of the marquee that would slowly turn now and then with the wind—throwing reflections in all directions.

Good work, "R. M.," but the only thing we lacked and a most important thing it was too, was the photograph of the front. We hope that the next time you'll send one along to us so that your fellow members can see what the finished effect looks like.

D. F. McSWINNEY is the manager of the Paramount Theatre in Needham, Mass., and, judging from what the New England Division of the Publix outfit has been doing in the way of show merchandising, we believe that any showman coming from that district must know the ropes. For that reason we look forward to hearing of your work very soon, "D. F.," and when you shoot it in to us, include a photo and a little dope about yourself so that the rest of the men on your circuit can meet you "face to face."

———Wear Your Club Pin! ! !———

LESTER DAVIS manages the Magnet Theatre in Barre, Vermont, and though we don't want to appear too humorous, with a name like the Magnet to draw them in, Lester should be able to turn out some mighty fine slants along the show selling angle. Keep us posted on your work, Lester, as we are sure that your brother managers of the Publix circuit are just as interested as your fellow Club members in knowing how you are selling them, especially since our rolls boast a couple of "ace" showmen from right around your neighborhood.

———Wear Your Club Pin! ! !———

R. F. FELKER is the manager of the State Theatre in Omaha, Nebraska. We want to welcome Mr. Felker into the Club and let him know that we expect some good examples of showmanship from his district, as in our investigations we have found that he has made the residents sit up and take notice of his theatre a number of times. Now that you are in the Club, "F. R.," you've got a big audience to pass your stunts along to, so let's hear from you often Oke?

———Wear Your Club Pin! ! !———

J. A. JONES manages the Saenger Theatre in Pensacola, Fla. As we have declared many times, this state boasts showmen that are corkers, and any man that sets out to keep among the leaders must know his showmanship. We'd like to see your name right up in front, too, Mr. Jones, and the best way to do that is to keep us informed on what you are doing so that we in turn can inform the rest of the "world's best showmen."

———Wear Your Club Pin! ! !———

ALLEN MOORE is the assistant manager of the Uptown Theatre in Milwaukee, Wis., and his enrollment makes the Uptown one hundred per cent Round Table, since the manager, Louis Orlove, is also a Club member. We want to welcome Allen into the Club and let him know that we expect to hear some good things concerning the way he assists Mr. Orlove on his campaigns.

———Wear Your Club Pin! ! !———

BENJAMIN H. SPERBER, believe it or not, has been in the show game no less than a month, but what a name he is making for himself as publicity and exploitation director for the Fox Theatre in Brooklyn, N. Y. As we hope to pass along his work through our pages, we know that you will watch his career with more than usual interest to see how he is making out. Go to it, Ben, and let's see what you can do.

DUANE A. ALLINGHAM manages the Miller Theatre in Manhattan, Kansas, and in order that he start off right, enclosed his assistant's name and proposed him for membership. From what he tells us, he is going to be a regular contributor. Well, you know the old saying, Duane, "Show us," and the best way to show the rest of the Club, too, is through the pages. Incidentally, when you send in your first contribution, how about your photo?

———Wear Your Club Pin! ! !———

DON W. DAVISON is the assistant manager of the Miller Theatre in Manhattan, Kansas. Don is the other showman who makes up the merchandising force of the house and, working with Mr. Allingham, we believe that the combined power will be productive of many showman slants. What do you say about it, Don? Let's have a photo of yourself and your views on the subject so that we can give you a send-off on the regular pages.

———Wear Your Club Pin! ! !———

WILFORD J. ROESCH is the manager of the New Fifth Avenue Theatre in Nashville, Tenn. He is no stranger to our pages as we have shown you in a past issue how he tied up with a local military school and effected a stunt that sold the show completely for him. As you no doubt know, Wilford, all members must be represented on these pages at some time or another, and now that you have had your "initiation," we look to hearing more of your work.

———Wear Your Club Pin! ! !———

JOHN W. GRAY is the advertising manager of the Princess Theatre in Columbus, Miss., and being in the advertising end of the business, he is aware that we have some cracker-jack layout men on our rolls. For that reason, Mr. Gray, we'd like to have you shoot us in some of your work in order that we may let your fellow members see how you sell them in Columbus. And you might also include your photo and little story about yourself so that we can make it a real introduction.

———Wear Your Club Pin! ! !———

M. LYNN DICKINSON manages the Astoria-Grand Theatre in Astoria, L. I., N. Y. In our travels about Long Island we have often had occasion to visit the many beautiful houses situated on it, and one of the places we remember stopping in was the Astoria-Grand. We feel that Mr. Dickinson can do something along the exploitation lines with this house and we hope that the future will show us how he breaks records. What do you think about it, Lynn? You know you're right out there in the field. Let's hear your views on it.

THE Club is anxious to publish photographs of every member and would, therefore, appreciate receiving as many as possible for use in future issues of the Club columns. If you have not already done so, PLEASE send us your own photo at once. Thank you.

Strange but True

IT seems almost incredible that sound and color, a combination usually associated with high cost in motion pictures, can be obtained without paying a premium price. Yet, Eastman Sonochrome Tinted Positive Films give faithful sound, atmospheric color, at a cost no higher than that of ordinary black and white.

The Circus is the greatest money-making institution in the history of the show business because it appeals to the greatest number of people of all classes.

Elementally, all human beings are children in their craving for entertainment with the carnival spirit of fun and frolic rampant. Children from six to sixty want to see the circus—the young for the unalloyed delight and thrill of the Big Top; the mature because they want to be lifted out of the dull routine of life—to park their conventional dignity and ritzy high hats on the outside and let themselves loose.

SWING HIGH is The Greatest Show On Earth brought in all its glamor, excitement, color, thrills to the audible screen. And it carries a gripping story of its own that the outdoor circus never had. It's the Big Top Show with all its graphic realism, plus the back-of-the-tent drama that circus patrons do not see. It's dramatic—colorful—spectacular—actionful—and packed with song hits galore!

"ADMIRAL BYRD CONQUERS THE SCREEN"

—Film Daily

"WITH BYRD AT THE SOUTH POLE" off on triumphant premiere long run at Rialto, N. Y., ranked by audience and reviewers with greatest hits of all times!

"ONE OF THE SUPREME ACHIEVEMENTS OF THE MOVIES." —N. Y. American

"The visual record of the feat accomplished by the American hero and his intrepid followers is more impressive than any volume containing the printed story. The film is liberally besprinkled with the glimpses of human interest, human drama, and pathos, all of which are so essential to entertainment."

"FICTION FADES AND HOLLYWOOD IMAGINATION PALES BESIDE THIS OFFERING."

—N. Y. Graphic

"The picture, beautifully photographed, satisfyingly complete, deftly cut and well titled, is worthy of its subject. Even if it were not the opportunely offered pictorial history of Byrd's important venture, it would still be a great film."

"I AGREE WITH PARAMOUNT — EVERYBODY SHOULD SEE IT."

—N. Y. Morn. World

"It is a vivid and comprehensive record, photographed by experts and projected with clarity and coherence. Of the technical excellence of the camera work, it may be reported that it is flawless. The pictures are destined to impress audiences with the glamor of the expedition."

"A SUPERB EFFORT, A GLORIOUS ACHIEVEMENT. WE ARE PROUD OF IT." —N. Y. Daily News

"It is a fast-moving, beautifully photographed, admirably edited and excellently titled film of a brave and worthy adventure, and into the most powerful sequence —that shows the actual flight above the southern polar regions—is synchronized the voice of Floyd Gibbons."

Admiral Byrd
—conquers the screen

By JACK ALICOATE

WE HAVE just witnessed the most unusual and powerful cinema document of all time. "With Byrd at the South Pole" will live forever. It is a priceless production jewel to add to the Paramount Publix treasure chest, a daring and fearless photographic achievement on the part of the cameramen, Joe Rucker and Willard VanderVeer and last but most important, it is the most significant historical contribution to date by the motion picture industry of America to the peoples of the world. To this generation, as well as posterity, it gives an honest and inspiring picture of the humor, heartaches, trials and hardships of that intrepid band, led by the courageous and colorful Admiral Byrd in his two years' conquest of the South Pole. "With Byrd at the South Pole" is noble — tremendous — unforgettable.

Should Play Everywhere

IT SHOULD be seen by every man, woman and child in America. It is already backed by the most far-reaching and legitimate publicity and exploitation campaign the amusement business has ever known. It should be played as a special and have the enthusiastic backing of every organization in your town or city. "With Byrd at the South Pole" is an unusual opportunity for the exhibitor, a compelling feather in the cap of Paramount, a decided achievement for the motion picture industry and a vivid and dramatic summary of a tremendous accomplishment in which every red-blooded American may well join with Admiral Byrd in pardonable pride.

Editorial from Film Daily—june 20th

"THE MOST HEARTENING HUMAN DOCUMENT THE CAMERA EVER FILMED." —N. Y. Telegram

"The picture presents a very clear idea of the perils and the hardships overcome and the unflagging courage displayed. There are some sharp flashes not to be equalled in the motion picture camera's recordings of actualities. There are human touches too, and comic ones."

MOBS PACK RIALTO THEATRE DESPITE BLISTERING HEAT OF BROADWAY!
"With Byrd at the South Pole" is doing the biggest business on New York's Main Stem. On wave of front page publicity heralding Admiral Byrd's triumphant return to America, this picture is soaring to the GREATEST SUCCESS OF THE YEAR!

"SETS A NEW MARK IN PICTURE MAKING."
—N. Y. Evening Post

"One shares the gayeties of the men as well as their perils and privations. There is a thrill in the mere sight of Little America, with its snow-covered huts and its tall radio towers, the only human community in the vast Antarctic area."

"PROBABLY THE GREATEST MOVIE EVER MADE." —Editorial, Washington Star

"They left the Auditorium a band of rabid movie fans. They had the honor of witnessing the preview of what is probably the greatest movie ever made. One easily could have witnessed miles and miles more of it. The Byrd expedition has brought back a real movie! And the movie men, as well as the explorers, certainly knew their stuff!"

GREATEST ATTRACTIONS SINCE THE WORLD BEGAN!

AMOS 'N' ANDY

IN THEIR FIRST ALL TALKING FEATURE MOTION PICTURE

Radio Pictures and Amos 'n' Andy have joined forces in the most stupendous show enterprise of all time.

The Amos 'n' Andy show, backed by Radio's boundless resources, is utterly staggering in its money-getting possibilities.

In the sweep of all show ages there has never been an attraction like them . . . never an attraction to compare with their fabulous box-office values!

They came overnight from humble obscurity to seduce a world steeled to sentiment and steeped in cold sophistication.

It is a conquest so amazing, so without precedent, so frenzied and so devastating that only cosmic vision might grasp its import . . . The world is content to give itself in spellbound rapture . . . to listen . . . and to marvel!

AND NOW YOU GET THEM IN THE PAGEANT OF THE TITANS

ROARING EMPIRE

OF COMMERCE HURLS RESOURCES BEHIND AIR METEORS IN HUGE CAMPAIGN

Amos 'n' Andy bring something new to Show Business. Never before have stars offered such tieup possibilities.

RCA SHOW FAMILY—The RCA Entertainment Family will back its star attraction to the limit of its far-reaching power. Commercial leaders in every line of endeavor flock to their support.

RADIO—Radio backing of unprecedented magnitude is assured. The ninety millions of American listeners will follow their idols without interruption on the two Pepsodent broadcasts every night. Using the tremendous resources of NBC, RKO will fling another sensational Radio message from coast to coast upon completion of the picture.

The measureless selling power of the two weekly RKO hours will hammer its message home . . . "air-selling" these show monarchs till the world rings with their story.

VICTOR—Thousands of Amos 'n' Andy records are already sold. Victor announce them as their greatest record bet . . . are backing them as they have never backed stars before.

MORE RECORDS TO COME . . . in direct tie-up with the show . . . backed all along the line with showmanly dealer co-operation.

NOVELTIES—Greatest novelty set-up of all time. Surefire tie-ups with a dozen leading novelty houses. Aleady set or in preparation.

MINIATURE FRESH AIR TAXI-CAB—Millions of this sensational novelty already sold. Louis Marx, manufacturer, eager to tie in with smashing exhibitor support that means news-stands and department store co-operation throughout country.

AMOS 'N' ANDY CANDY BAR—Amos 'n' Andy Candy Bar to be manufactured and released in conjunction with the show by the Williamson Candy Company of Chicago. The whole tie-up and release of candy planned to take advantage of exhibitor aid and picture publicity

DISPLAY MATERIAL—Nationwide release backed by advertising and dealer displays. Display material from Pepsodent, Victor, Williamson, Marx Toy Company, and RKO provides unprecedented tie-up facilities.

RADIO MUSIC COMPANY—Radio Music Company will swing their unparalleled man-power and radio resources into action behind the songs in the show.

NATIONAL ADVERTISING—Saturday Evening Post, world's largest weekly, will lead an array of national publications in a clamorous campaign. Amos 'n' Andy section in Post will set a new "high" in institutional advertising. Fan and News publications to lend smashing support.

PUBLICITY—The publicity forces of the co-operating companies, alert to take the utmost from the greatest publicity set-up of all time, promise front page stories wherever papers are read. Story to be carried by international syndicate.

Special Note to Showmen:

Mel Brown has been engaged to direct Amos 'n' Andy... Harry Ruby will write the music and Bert Kalmar the story. The entire production will be under the personal supervision of Wm. Le Baron. This is an array of production talent that guarantees beaucoup sensations.

The Radio Titan works shoulder to shoulder with the showmen of the world in a monumental drive to sell tickets.

New and more vital exploitation help will be given this season by Radio Pictures.

Last year the Titan tore the lid off time-worn exploitation and kicked moss-grown tradition all over the lot.

His first season of operation proved conclusively he knew his showmen's onions. Now, with all the units of the Radio Family snugly co-ordinated and surging with the spirit that spells success, Radio Pictures will utterly swamp all competitors in the vigor and volume of promotional aid it gives exhibitors.

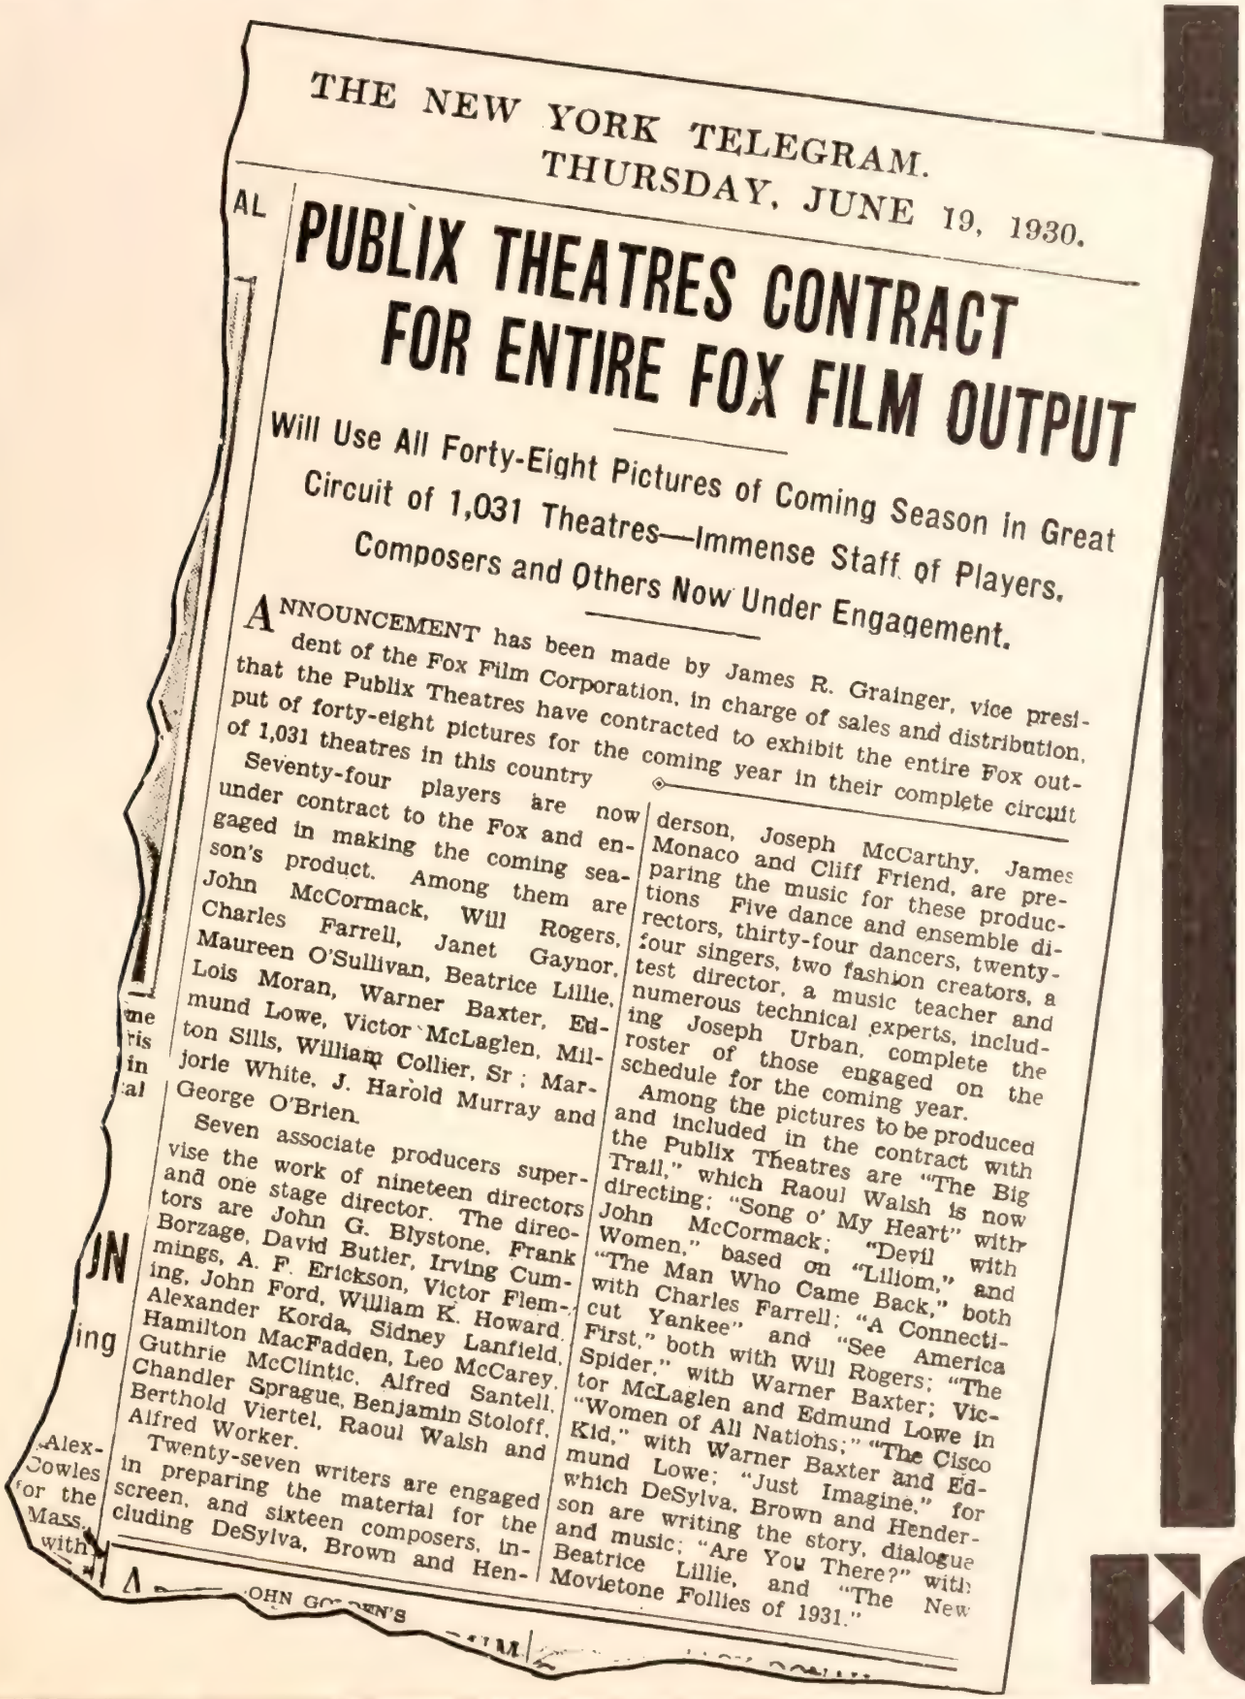
Dear Mr. Grainger:

It has been a happy season here with Fox product, in spite of the fact that this is an independent theatre with no big brother chain to lean upon.

This has made my task more difficult, in making it a successful season. However chain or no chain, your sure fire box office attractions more than did their share and if the exhibitor did not get his, it was his fault and not the fault of the product.

I know the mere fact that your product got money for the independent will be a source of satisfaction to you.



Accept with my compliments the enclosed photograph and assuring you of my continued co'operation,

Sincerely yours,

PUBLIX THEATRES CONTRACT FOR ENTIRE FOX FILM OUTPUT

Will Use All Forty-Eight Pictures of Coming Season in Great Circuit of 1,031 Theatres—Immense Staff of Players, Composers and Others Now Under Engagement.

ANNOUNCEMENT has been made by James R. Grainger, vice president of the Fox Film Corporation, in charge of sales and distribution, that the Publix Theatres have contracted to exhibit the entire Fox output of forty-eight pictures for the coming year in their complete circuit of 1,031 theatres in this country.

Seventy-four players are now under contract to the Fox and engaged in making the coming season's product. Among them are John McCormack, Will Rogers, Charles Farrell, Janet Gaynor, Maureen O'Sullivan, Beatrice Lillie, Lois Moran, Warner Baxter, Edmund Lowe, Victor McLaglen, Milton Sills, William Collier, Sr.; Marjorie White, J. Harold Murray and George O'Brien.

Seven associate producers supervise the work of nineteen directors and one stage director. The directors are John G. Blystone, Frank Borzage, David Butler, Irving Cummings, A. F. Erickson, Victor Fleming, John Ford, William K. Howard, Alexander Korda, Sidney Lanfield, Hamilton MacFadden, Leo McCarey, Guthrie McClintic, Alfred Santell, Chandler Sprague, Benjamin Stoloff, Berthold Viertel, Raoul Walsh and Alfred Worker.

Twenty-seven writers are engaged in preparing the material for the screen, and sixteen composers, including DeSylva, Brown and Henderson, Joseph McCarthy, James Monaco and Cliff Friend, are preparing the music for these productions. Five dance and ensemble directors, thirty-four dancers, twenty-four singers, two fashion creators, a test director, a music teacher and numerous technical experts, including Joseph Urban, complete the roster of those engaged on the schedule for the coming year.

Among the pictures to be produced and included in the contract with the Publix Theatres are "The Big Trail," which Raoul Walsh is now directing; "Song o' My Heart" with John McCormack; "Devil with Women," based on "Liliom," and "The Man Who Came Back," both with Charles Farrell; "A Connecticut Yankee" and "See America First," both with Will Rogers; "The Spider," with Warner Baxter; Victor McLaglen and Edmund Lowe in "Women of All Nations;" "The Cisco Kid," with Warner Baxter and Edmund Lowe; "Just Imagine," for which DeSylva, Brown and Henderson are writing the story, dialogue and music; "Are You There?" with Beatrice Lillie, and "The New Movietone Follies of 1931."

52 "LUCKY STAR" PRODUCTIONS FOR '30-'31

MARION DAVIES (3)

Two big stage vehicles to begin with! "ROSALIE" the Ziegfeld musical comedy by William Anthony McGuire and Guy Bolton. Music by George Gershwin and Sigmund Romberg. Lyrics by P. G. Wodehouse and Ira Gershwin. And "THE FIVE O'CLOCK GIRL" by Guy Bolton and Fred Thompson which ran a solid year in New York, and was a winner on the road. Kalmar and Ruby's swellest music. Big Time vehicles for Marion—and backed by million dollar Hearst ad drives!

GRETA GARBO (3)

RED DUST, the play by Wilson Collison is strong in theme as "Sadie Thompson." The great Garbo who has hurdled the stars to a height of her own, portrays the Parisian woman of the world, cast on a lawless Chinese rubber plantation, moving amidst the brutal passions of this frontier corner of the world. The star of "Anna Christie" and "Romance" (her new sensation!) is to be more than ever your money star.

LON CHANEY (1)

THE BUGLE SOUNDS is a powerful story of the Foreign Legion by Major Zinovi Pechkoff. Chaney has a hard-fighting role such as he had in "Tell it to the Marines" with the same director, George Hill. Much of the picture has already been photographed in actual locations in Africa while the famed Legion was under fighting orders. Chaney's marked success in Talkies, as shown in the completed "Unholy Three" means a Chaney bigger than ever!

WILLIAM HAINES (4)

REMOTE CONTROL, the rollicking, romantic melodrama which enjoyed a successful Broadway run is perfect for Bill Haines. The play by Clyde North, Albert C. Fuller and Jack T. Nelson takes you into a radio broadcasting room with Haines as announcer. He unknowingly thwarts the Ghost Gang operating by radio and wins a girl in the bargain. Haines is surefire always and his merry manner is just right for this one. Mal St. Clair directs!

NORMA SHEARER (2)

No star of the talking screen has delivered with the consistency of Miss Shearer. Her four talking pictures, "The Trial of Mary Dugan", "The Last of Mrs. Cheyney", "Their Own Desires" and "The Divorcee" have all been perfect Talkie performances. The record-breaking career of "The Divorcee" has put Miss Shearer right at the top, and "Let Us Be Gay" another big one now follows. You can rely on the two 1930-31 Norma Shearer pictures!

RAMON NOVARRO (3)

THE SINGER OF SEVILLE, already completed and previewed is in the bag. It's great! In the cast: Dorothy Jordan, Renee Adoree, Ernest Torrence, Nance O'Neil. Directed by Charles Brabin from Dorothy Farnum's dramatic story, with dialogue by John Colton. Novarro surpasses himself as singer, comedian, lover—one of our greatest actors! In one of the next year's Biggest! SONG OF INDIA by Achmud Abdullah follows.

JOHN GILBERT (2)

WAY FOR A SAILOR, brings you a Gilbert you have never had before. M-G-M knows its business! We have a world of confidence that the great Gilbert public will react to this rugged story with an enthusiasm expressed in receipts. Sam Wood, director of hits, is making it. Laurence Stallings of "Big Parade", "What Price Glory", "Cock Eyed World" fame wrote the dialogue from Wetjen's book. This picture has power!

JOAN CRAWFORD (4)

GREAT DAY, is Vincent Youman's outstanding musical dramatic success. Ready-made hits in it: "More Than You Know," "Great Day," "Without A Song," "Happy Because I'm In Love," etc. Joan Crawford builds with every picture (Watch "Our Blushing Brides!") and "Great Day" is the biggest vehicle she ever had. Harry Pollard, director. HER FORTUNE by James Montgomery is another big-time Crawford role. Joan gets the jack for you!

DRESSLER-MORAN (2)

RAZZLE DAZZLE is their new riotous talkie that comes in on the heels of "Caught Short" success! Metro - Goldwyn - Mayer is consistently the star-builder, and this happy pair's stardom has been celebrated with rousing box-office cheer. Dressler-Moran supply the kind of laughs the public wants in large gobs and you're going to make a great deal of money with these well-promoted, laugh-cocked comedies.

LAWRENCE TIBBETT (2)

THE NEW MOON with Grace Moore co-starring with Lawrence Tibbett will find Tibbett clinching the top spot that he reached overnight as the screen's greatest singer! This Schwab-Mandell show, with the Oscar-Hammerstein, 2nd-Sigmund Romberg songs, is a vehicle that every producer bid for. In itself, a great property, it's road-show-size with the Tibbett-Moore combination, backed by M-G-M enterprise. Imagine those two singing "Lover Come Back To Me!" Director, Jack Conway.

BUSTER KEATON (2)

The box-office is M-G-M's guide always, and the box-office reports on "Free and Easy" demonstrate gratifyingly that this clever comedian is a great bet in Talkies. Within a short time his second talking comedy "Forward March" will be convulsing your audiences. It's a marvelous laugh-getter and Keaton will be all set to enter 1930-31 as a prime contender for the top of the comedy field.

COSMOPOLITAN (4)

GRACE MOORE in a story based on Jenny Lind's dramatic career is one of Four Giant Cosmopolitan Productions. The golden-voiced beauty from the Music Box Revue and Operatic worlds is destined to be the new screen sensation. Recent Cosmopolitan productions were of the size of "Caught Short," "Broadway Melody," "The Big House"—so you know what to expect. Backed by the heavy, national advertising of Hearst!

Depression Blues Drowning Out Merger Music; Public Is Stock - Unconscious

Optimist

Washington—Business in the industry is normal, a national survey shows, Adolph Zukor told President Hoover. He said the industry is better than at any time during the last ten years, with the exception of last year which was abnormally good. Business in certain localities still is abnormally good, he said.

Epic of Alamo Slated as Next Griffith Film

Hollywood—D. W. Griffith's next is likely to be an epic of the early days of Texas, with the Alamo figuring prominently in the story.

The producer-director has practically decided to accept the offer of a group of San Antonio oil millionaires to finance the picture on a big scale. It is reported that the Texans are ready to put up $1,000,000 for production of the picture if Griffith will consent to make it himself.

It is understood that only a few minor details remain to be adjusted before contracts are signed. Such a deal would make Griffith entirely independent of United Artists financing on his next production, but releasing arrangements would undoubtedly be made through that company.

Griffith has not been entirely satisfied with the supervision of United Artists on his current Lincoln production because of that organization's complete financing of the picture. The Texas deal, under consideration for more than a year, would give him full scope on production, and without interference of any kind. It is understood he will retain his financial interest in United regardless of who puts up the dough for his future pictures.

"D. W." is now in Texas to complete negotiations for the new outdoor adventure, and Albert Grey has just left to join him.

Warners, RCA Seeking British Sound Device

Both Warners and RCA are reported viewing with interest the Vivagraph sound reproducer recently brought to America. The device, made in Britain, is for both sound-on-film and disc reproduction, it is said, and can be made for marketing at between $750 and $1,000. An early demonstration is scheduled.

Rumors So Dear to the Heart Of the Industry Stilled By Cold Facts

It's all off so far as merger deals are concerned for a long, long time, according to close observers, who see in the current industrial situation and stock market slump a formidable obstacle to any proposed amalgamations.

The usual reports of impending mergers continue to be circulated, but these are spiked by a study of the current financial set-up. For instance, considerable circulation has been given a report that Adolph Zukor and David Sarnoff were approaching an agreement which had for its object the sale of Paramount to Radio-Keith-Orpheum.

This oft-repeated — and denied — yarn about an impending merger of the two companies is pooh-poohed because of the tight money situation, plus the element of friction declared existing between the two companies. This is declared due to theatre activities of R-K-O in general and the Libson deal in particular.

Paramount is said to have had the deal all set for acquisition of the Cincinnati chain, when R-K-O stepped in and grabbed off the Libson holdings. Another reported element in the situation is the Amos 'n' Andy contract. In this instance, too, Paramount was all set on a deal, it is said, when R-K-O, through its National Broadcasting System hook-up, turned thumbs down on the contract, and declared that if the broadcasting team was to work for any picture company it should be for R-K-O.

The closing of any deal of magnitude in the industry would necessitate a public stock issue and the public at present hardly is in any frame of mind to consider buying such stocks. A deal involving a company like Paramount would involve a figure estimated between $125,000,000 and $150,000,000, it is stated.

Dot's Too Bad, But the Polkas Spurn German Ties

Chicago—Polka brothers, who operate seven theatres in this district, also have business interests in Germany. A brother, each in his turn, spends one year in Germany conducting the family's foreign affairs. When his year there is up, he returns to America and is replaced abroad by the next brother in line.

Martin Polka, who did the last stretch in Germany, recently returned to this country on the termination of his year abroad. It now appears that the brothers have arrived at an impasse. Each denies that his turn to work in Europe has arrived, with only Martin, who retained his last passport, able to prove it.

A "Bum Steer"

Washington — "Some one has given you a bum steer," Abram F. Myers, president of Allied States Ass'n, told MOTION PICTURE NEWS when queried on report the Sentry Safety Control co-operative deal has fallen through. "If Sentrys are not being sold, it is because exhibitors, not relations, are busted."

Oh, Yes, Louella Helped Exploit Marion; Read On

Hollywood—When Marion Davies' latest talker, "The Floradora Girl," was slated as the opening attraction for the Pantages Hollywood Theatre, Louella Parsons figured she would assist with the exploitation of the picture outside of her syndicated columns in the Hearst newspapers.

So the columnist went to work—deciding that she could easily put over some corking exploitation for the benefit of her close friend, Marion. Final result of Louella's sincere efforts was two window tie-ups for the picture in Hollywood Boulevard stores!

Harry Green and Joe Schenck Plan 2 Films

Hollywood—With his one-year contract with Paramount expiring Nov. 1, Harry Green will move over to United Artists to be featured in two productions, "The Shyster" and "Papa."

The Jewish comedian, former stage actor and producer, purchased the two properties in partnership with Joseph M. Schenck, who will make the pictures under the Feature Productions banner. Green will get a salary of about $3,000 weekly for his two featured roles, together with a percentage of the profits of the pictures.

Green was offered a long-term contract by Paramount following his "Close Harmony" a year ago, but decided he would not tie himself up for more than one year. Agreement was finally reached for a contract covering that period, with Green getting a salary of $2,500 weekly over entire term of 52 weeks. In the meantime, he promoted the two picture deal with Schenck to follow his Paramount contract.

CROCODILE TEARS MAY FILL BUCKETS BUT NOT TILLS

NINETEEN TWENTY-NINE was a wild year. Perhaps one of the wildest in the latter day history of American business. Profits ran amuck and ended the year at figures which surprised the most optimistic.

Nineteen thirty marks a change, a gradual return to the normal. Yet widespread are the complaints. Up and down the land, cries of despair and ruin are rampant. If you would believe a fraction of the stories bandied about the streets, the conclusion must inevitably be that the country is tobogganing toward collapse.

Snap judgment opinions are raising havoc with organized business. Aiding the bearish tone are newspapers that don't stop to analyze and individuals who, parrot-like, repeat what they hear for repetition's sake.

Why the Talk Turns Loose

THE truth of the matter is easy to understand. This is it:

Business is off by comparison with 1929, but last year should be no criterion, no marker of business prosperity. Compare 1930 with the sanity that prevailed in other years and then draw your conclusions. The picture will be different.

For instance. The myth has been circulated over the nation that the motor industry is shot to pieces. As a matter of fact, there is evidence to support the statement that 1930 is on a parity with 1926, peak year but one in that field.

The exception is 1929. But, after all, this applies to most other businesses. Banks are beginning to understand this and are, therefore, leaning toward the sound belief that 1929 should be marked down on the industrial calendar as a freak.

And in the Film Industry

THIS realization must sleep into the consciousness of the picture business for its own good. The element of novelty in sound has dissipated itself. In 1929, it was a factor in favor of heavy grosses. The box-offices of the nation proved it. With that gone, what has happened is this:

The level of the industry has settled down somewhere in the region of the peak business enjoyed when silent films were in their hey-day. No more could have been expected from sound and, in their rational moments, clear thinkers will concede this to be true. Why then the complaints?

Music Warranties Spell Trouble

ON Monday, the 5-5-5 meetings resume. Distributors and exhibitors will have a tough nut to crack in the proposed "music tax" warranty. Distributors say they are forced by their recording contracts with the electrics to insert the clause in contracts. They further admit their sympathies rest with the exhibitor in the question.

Exhibitors claim the clause is the bunk, hint at a test of its legality and make it clear that its automatic enforcement will weaken their fight against the tax. Therefore, objections.

There you have a dilemma and a situation that calls for the most delicate handling. The various "5's" of the tri-cornered session will require Atlantic City's cooling breezes to keep them out of temper.

Into the Record It Goes

THE advertising code a fact at last and our original observation of what to do to keep exhibitors in line remains unanswered. Yet it is the really serious knot in the entire tangled affair.

Granting that showmen should have enough sense to do so, we argue further that they won't. The race for business in these keenly competitive days is too tense.

Offenders in the ranks of advertising men reserve the right of two committee appeals and, finally, the Hays directorate. Even if disputes are cleared away in a hurry—if you can imagine the industry's headline names meeting to pass judgment on advertising copy—who is to judge what's offensive or no?

Violators of New Advertising Code to Have "Attention Called" If Naughty

Holding Up the Works

Paramount's New York opening of the Byrd South Pole film simultaneously with the great explorer's return to New York was received in New York show circles as being a smart exploitation stunt. What most of the main stem theatre execs don't know, however, is the matter of a little deal which is understood to have been secretly made between Byrd and Paramount when the original contracts were signed. It provided that Byrd and most of his party hold out down at Panama until Paramount had whipped the picture into shape, and then make their glorious return to New York.

Rivals Outbid $4,500,000 in Fox Buy of Poli

New Haven—Fox paid $4,500,000 more for the Poli circuit than the Stanley and Keith-Albee interests offered, it was indicated in trial of the $1,000,000 suit of the Hancock Co., of New York and Massachusetts, against Sylvester Z. Poli. The chain was sold to Fox for a reputed $26,000,000.

A. F. Hancock testified that Louis M. Sagal, Poli's chief lieutenant, told him that E. F. Albee must have refusal of the properties before any sale be completed because of his assistance in booking vaudeville at low cost over the Poli chain for many years. Hancock said he arranged the sale involving Albee, but that Sagal told him Poli was arranging a sale to another customer who offered $4,500,000 more for the chain. Sagal told him he didn't "have to worry" about his commission, Hancock said.

Smell Time Had by All; Skunk Thrown in Lobby

San Antonio—Bombs have been a source of worry to theatre managers and police here for the past two months, but it developed for a local vandal to originate a new idea.

Just as the Rialto, downtown house, was closing its doors on Sunday night, two Mexican boys hurled a can containing a dead skunk into the lobby of the theatre as they drove past.

Without much ado, the manager of the house carried the can to his auto and drove to police headquarters, where there was a general exodus.

Experts are at work endeavoring to trace the vandal through finger prints on the can. In the last 60 days, stink bombs have been thrown into the lobbies of seven local theatres. In every case the bombs were hurled after the close of the day and after the audiences had left.

Huston Under U. A. Contract

Hollywood—Walter Huston has been loaned to First National for several pictures, but he still is under contract to United Artists, which has prior rights on his services.

Keep Ads Clean, Franklin Edict To His Managers

Los Angeles—Clean copy is the order to all members of the circuit issued by Harold B. Franklin, president of Fox West Coast Theatres. Calling attention to The Motion Picture News editorial comment on the code of ethics drafted for advertising and publicity departments of its members, Franklin declares that "advertising needs cleaning up and needs it badly."

Harold Franklin

"If our own doorstep is dirty, then let's sweep it clean," Franklin declares. "Next to the selection of our program, comes our advertising," he continues. "No picture is too insignificant to deserve our best advertising attention. We owe the great pictures a concentrated effort in keeping with the importance of that production.

"It should not be necessary for the producers, or the Hays organization, to give to Fox West Theatres a code of ethics to follow in the proper and decent advertising of our own business. Our own sense of decency, of business deportment and progressive enterprise should guide us in our advertising.

"The day is past when questionable illustrations or implied suggestions will draw a crowd to a box office. When we have to resort to this type of malicious and dangerous copy writing, then we will close that theatre and get out of the show business.

"A smart showman is entitled to use every honorable means at his command to attract business to his theatre, but he must not insult one single person, no matter how thin-skinned or sensitive that person may be. The dollar gained by cheap and unclean advertising will cost you many times its value. You may get away with misrepresentation the first time. Do you think you can fool the public the second or third time?

"Keep clean, keep honest. Be decent and fair in your advertising."

And Then Lots of Appeals to Eat Up Time Until Copy Is Moribund

Advertising and publicity men hereafter must toe the mark in so far as "clean copy" is concerned—or they will have their "attention called." And if they don't like that, they can start a merry-go-round of appeals that may end after the spicy bit of publicity has long outlived its value.

This is the interpretation put by some observers on the new advertising code of ethics recently adopted by the ad men at the instigation of the Hays office and designed to inject "good taste" into film advertising. The signatories solemnly pledged themselves to carry out the 12 articles contained in the code, but whether intentionally or otherwise, no penalty is provided for infractions of the code.

The agreement stipulates that when the code is transgressed "the association shall call the attention of the advertising and publicity director to the infraction of the code." However, if he does not agree with the association's viewpoint, he may present his case to a committee of three of his colleagues. Should they turn thumbs down on his slant, he can appeal further to three directors of the association, whose findings shall be final.

Without time limits set on the various steps in the procedure, it is possible that before a final decision is reached the offender is working on next year's announcement and doesn't care a whoop about the outcome of the case. However, the boys took precautions not to cramp their style, for they killed a suggestion that campaign and press books be pre-censored. They termed the idea "unfeasible and impractical."

The agreement provides also that when questions "involving good taste" arise the ad man shall confer with the association; that press books and all advertising accessories be sent to it immediately upon completion; that the advertising and publicity directors assume full responsibility for the matter turned out, and that use of copy shall be discontinued in case of a violation.

What the Code Provides

The articles of the code follow:

1. We subscribe to the Code of Business Ethics of the International Advertising Association, based on "truth, honesty and integrity."
2. Good taste shall be the guiding rule of motion picture advertising.
3. Illustrations and text in advertising shall faithfully represent the pictures themselves.
4. No false or misleading statements shall be used directly, or implied by type arrangements or by distorted quotations.
5. No text or illustration shall ridicule or tend to ridicule any religion or religious faith; no illustration of a character in clerical garb shall be shown in any but a respectful manner.
6. The history, institutions, and nationals of all countries shall be represented with fairness.
7. Profanity and vulgarity shall be avoided.
8. Pictorial and copy treatment of officers

The Insiders' Outlook

FUNNY are the ways of mergers. A new move on the consolidation checker-board finds its excuse for being in the desire of one organization to secure the production head of another and willing to bear the whole load in order to get him.

That load is rather considerable. The about-to-be-acquired outfit has a number of bosses. You can tell that by the way they scrap among themselves. It was a long struggle, the fight to keep their economic nose out of water, and it must be said on their behalf that they have succeeded. Now they are wealthy, use Rolls Royces, play golf, continue to slam desks and win arguments by out-yelling the other fellow.

As for the organization that stands willing to make the buy, it seems the current production regime isn't doing quite so well as it all sounded on paper. Therefore, the itch to make a change. The new white-haired boy is in the position to know this and, if he runs at all true to usual form, his price is soaring up as the dissatisfaction in the other camp grows.

Those who know the executive admit he makes good pictures cheaply. Specially, he makes the grade—largely by indulgence. A few individuals in Hollywood like him, but they constitute a considerable minority.

The production mogul whose decapitation is talked about has nothing to worry about financially. His fat four-figure-a-week contract carries plenty of comfort. Prestige-wise, the blow would be disastrous.

The most ironic slant on the entire situation is the smug satisfaction which exists in the minds of the new Moses' associates. They think the merger stunt revolves around their services.

Nothing could be funnier.

Yes, in 1930

In a certain theatre chain, headquartering in a city not so far from New York and important because of its strategic value, racial differences slowly, but surely, threaten disintegration.

Coupled with that condition, cancerous and bigoted as any broad-minded individual must concede it to be, is another exhibition of the ancient and honorable practice of firing competents and hiring relatives to fill big jobs. It's raising a particular mess of hell and the procedure is beginning to leave its mark.

Yet those who can put through the remedial measures that would end the foolishness sit by and, in their ignorance or indifference—it's hard to say which—permit a perfectly good property to rub chins with the bow-wows.

15 Minutes to Go

Hollywood—You can't time-clock brains, but Hollywood thinks and does otherwise.

At one of the big plants here, the latest gag is a time-clock for writers and directors. They punch in and they punch out. And, in case they have forgotten what constitutes a working day in this factory, little slips have been passed around advising the day begins at nine and ends at five.

That's all the gang here required to develop a new line of folklore about this particular studio. The latest is this:

That on Tuesday, a studio worker ran breathlessly to the street yelling for the police. The bluecoats arrived pronto for once and asked what the trouble was all about. Imagine their surprise when told by said employee that he had just seen a writer plugged as he emerged from the studio's sacred portals.

It seemed he had walked out at 4:45 and was shot dead by the gateman.

Fox Staging Come-Back?

Is William Fox coming back to the picture biz? Mebby so, for an inside report is that the former chief of the concerns bearing his name early next year will head a $25,000,000 venture. The informant does not say the project will be in films, but that is the understanding.

According to reports at the time he sold his holdings Fox was said to have received a five year contract to continue with the company as an advisor. The gag was, it is said, to keep him from starting a rival organization during the life of the contract.

Since that time, he is reported to have been flirting with Universal and Columbia. One never knows what Fox will do.

Hatchets Flying

Nice quiet business.

This is the yarn of a producing company torn asunder by as many factions in the ranks as it has units. The internal bickering has been cleverly held in check until now. Only occasionally has it flared into the open, but it won't be long now before the lid flies clear off the top of the caldron. When it does—well, it will be just too bad.

The trouble is narrowing down to two groups. One is seeking control. The other has practically had it until now. But the aggressor rides high in the saddle while the one-time power is slipping more rapidly than its adherents appreciate.

When the balance shifts, as it appears it will, there will come with it an entirely new set-up bringing nobody can quite figure what. It is entirely possible that as the one faction bows out and the other in, the decks may at the same time be cleared for a merger. Sounds like a riddle, is supposed to be and that's that.

Some Reasons for Cheers

Because "Holiday", cleverly acted by Ann Harding, dialogued by Philip Barry and produced by Pathe, gets the break it deserves on Broadway. The picture plays extended run at the Rivoli.

Because Paramount had the vision and the guts to take a chance on filming the Byrd Antartic Expedition and because the picture comes through its two year period of uncertainty as one of the finest contributions to the celebrated history of motion pictures.

Because the Fox employees clear down the line from highest to lowest were paid back dollar for dollar their investment in Fox stock and because it demonstrates what many don't believe: this business has a heart.

"Music Tax" Knot Offers Big Problem For 5-5-5 Confabs Resuming on Monday

Lubitsch Loves Little

Hollywood—One per cent of his love was not enough for Helene L. Lubitsch, so she obtained a divorce from Director Ernst Lubitsch. Her husband, she said, was "99 per cent in love with his work and had no time for home." A property settlement was made out of court.

Edison Is Not Movie Inventor, Crawford Says

"Edison is the commercial and exploiting genius of the motion picture, but he is not the inventor. The 'first movie' was not made by Edison in 1888 or any other year," states Merritt Crawford in a verbal bombshell thrown at mythical lore around which is woven the belief that "Thomas A." is directly and solely responsible for motion pictures, from the inventive standpoint.

Crawford's bomb was hurled at a letter by David L. Hardenbrook and printed on the editorial page of the New York Sun.

"Although generally credited with being the 'inventor' of the motion picture," Crawford states, "Mr. Edison never 'invented' anything connected with it. He merely popularized it and helped importantly to make it commercially possible."

Delving deeply into the history surrounding the first days of the industry's technical progress, Crawford points out that "the United States courts already have determined that point and have awarded priority over Mr. Edison in the invention of 'step photography' to Dr. J. E. Marey, Louis A. A. Le Prince and William Friese-Greene and to Du Cos du Hauron and others as anticipating him by many years in devising the essential parts of the camera and projector.

"Judge Wallace in 1902, writing the unanimous opinion of the United States Circuit Court of Appeals, for the Southern District of New York. Judges Townsend and Lacombe sitting with him, in the case of Edison vs. The American Mutoscope Company for infringement of his camera patent (see Federal Reporter, No. 114, 1902), stated that Mr. Edison was in no sense a "pioneer" in the invention of the film, the motion picture camera or projector and that all he contributed to the art 'required but a moderate amount of mechanical ingenuity' and not inventive genius. On this basis every claim to originality by Mr. Edison, which had been maintained in the lower courts, was disallowed.

"The first true movie on celluloid film was taken with Dr. Marey's camera, with one lens from one position, in the Champs Elysées, Paris, in 1886. Before that he did it on a sensitized paper band. Le Prince and Friese-Greene accomplished the same thing.

"Regarding Edison's 'talking movies,' while he experimented in this field from the year 1886, when the great Muybridge called on him in the hope that he might link up his chronophotographic glass plates with the newly invented phonograph, it is history that he never succeeded in making them successfully."

Arbitration, Protection Other Big Issues—No Score Charge Action?

Efforts to untie the knot of the "music tax" warranty are expected to highlight meetings of the 5-5-5 contract conferences which are to be resumed Monday at Atlantic City. The dilemma presented by the proposed warranty, arbitration, protection and score charges are chief among the remaining points to be settled on the contract. Preliminary draft of the contract was completed, except for the aforementioned points, at meetings in New York of a subcommittee consisting of two members of each group.

Representatives of distributors, the M. P.T.O.A. and Allied States Ass'n., are parties to the conferences, with affiliated exhibitors represented without vote.

Distributors, under terms of their licenses to record sound, are required to lease their films only to houses licensed by the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers. They declare their hands tied in the matter, and that they have no other choice than inserting a warranty in the contract. Exhibitors protest against such a clause, declaring it automatically will force payment by every theatre of the ten cents per seat license fee, and prove injurious in their fight to secure repeal of the tax provision of the copyright law.

Not Tackling Score Charge?

On the matter of score charges, exhibitors are making efforts to have the charge made part of the rental. Distributors are expected to decline to act upon the matter, holding that the subject is a matter of individual company policy, and so not within the committee's jurisdiction. At a later date, a general meeting of distributors may be called to consider the exhibitors' contentions in the matter.

All parties are agreed upon arbitration, but its nature and the machinery necessary to make it effective remain to be determined upon.

The protection question is regarded as having been started toward solution through the zoning committee work now under way throughout the country.

Committee members scheduled to attend the meeting are: For distributors—S. R. Kent, Phil Reisman, Felix Feist, Al Lichtman, Lou B. Metzger. For the M.P.T.O. A.—M. A. Lightman, R. R. Biechele, Jack Miller, Jack Harwood, Charles Piquet. For Allied—W. A. Steffes, Nathan Yamins, H. M. Richey, Jim Hone, Col. H. A. Cole. For affiliated exhibitors—Sam Dembow, Publix; E. A. Schiller, Loew's; Harry Arthur, Fox; Spyros Skouras, Warners; Joe Plunkett, RKO.

Frank Walker, a member of the original M.P.T.O.A. committee, who has sat at all sessions, is to attend in an advisory capacity at the request of M. A. Lightman. He withdrew from the committee after Paramount bought control of the Comerford circuit of which he is general manager.

Music Warranty Clause Is Rapped At K. C. Meeting

Topeka, Kan.—Members of the Kansas and western Missouri exhibitor unit are opposed to incorporation of a warranty clause on the "music tax" in the new standard contract, they made clear at their convention here. The convention elected a new slate of officers, after R. R. Biechele had declined to run, and revised its constitution to give the chains a vote for each theatre. This, in effect, will enable chains to control.

One hundred and fifty exhibitors attended the sessions. The name of the organization was changed to M. P. Theatres Ass'n. of Kansas and Western Missouri. Theatre owners formerly was incorporated in the name. Ben Andres, Kansas legislator, was toastmaster at the banquet.

The convention endorsed the code of ethics adopted by producers, called for repeal of the "blue" labor law and called upon producers to give attention to juvenile appeal in pictures. Discussion of admission taxes emphasized that the majority are against any price cutting.

New officers are: Earl Van Hyning, Iola, Kan., president; Barney Dubinsky, Jefferson City, vice-president; Jay Means, Kansas City, treasurer. The directorate was increased to 14, composed of seven exhibitors from each of the two states. Directors are: Kansas—Harry McClure, Topeka; R. R. Biechele, Kansas City; W. R. Robertson, Pittsburgh; C. L. McVey, Herington; J. C. Hartman, Wichita; E. E. Sprague, Goodland; A. R. Zimmer, Dodge City. From Missouri—J. C. Staples, Rockport; Frank Weary, Richmond; C. R. Wilson, Liberty; Charles Burkey, Kansas City; Lloyd Linhart, Clinton; Barney Dubinsky, Jefferson City; A. F. Baker, Springfield.

"Explanation" Made, So Steffes to Attend Meet

Minneapolis—"Satisfactory explanation" has been made of the published allegation attributed to "a Haysite" that he wanted Publix to give him a theatre, and W. A. Steffes, chairman of the Allied States Ass'n. committee will sit in on the 5-5-5 conferences when they resume Monday at Atlantic City.

Protection Threat Used as Sandbag to Force Sale of Indie Houses to Chains

Kick About Footage

London—Exhibitors here, as in the United States, are concerned over short length of talkers. As a result, they are asking distributors to state the footage of pictures they book, so they may gauge their programs accordingly.

2-Man Demand Of Operators Gets Showdown

Minneapolis—Unless operators comply with the demands of Minneapolis independents that only one man be required in the booth, their services will not be required after July 5, they have been notified, following a meeting of exhibitors. The theatre operators want helpers. The proposed helper would not be a member of the operators' union. St. Paul independents are expected to take a similar stand.

Locations Chosen by RKO For Rex Beach Pictures

Seattle—After selecting locations in Alaska for the filming of two forthcoming Rex Beach film dramas, four production officials from the RKO studios came here by airplane from Ketchikan.

George Barthelon, E. Conjager, Thomas Atkins and H. Wellman are the film men and they chose sites near Ketchikan for the filming of "The Silver Horde" and a site near Cordova for shots of "The Iron Trail."

The men, with a party of about 50 screen stars, directors, camera men, and technicians, will return to this city later in the summer to embark for Alaska.

Ask Daylight Repeal

Huntington, Ind.—The City Council at its last meeting referred to its ordinance commission a petition asking the repeal of the daylight savings time ordinance, passed hurriedly at a meeting in May. Backers of the repeal petition packed the council chamber and voiced their disapproval of the fast time vociferously.

Bishell Buys Theatre

Spokane—A. J. Bishell, who has been manager of the Uptown in Seattle, has purchased the Empress here and has arrived to take personal charge.

To Raze Patterson

Baltimore—Grand Theatre Co., associated with the Durkee Theatrical Enterprises, has purchased the Patterson, residential house, from Harry Reddish, who will relinquish control July 7 when the theatre will be razed so that another may be built there.

Will Be Put Out of Business, Exhibitors Told in New Racket

Clubbing of independents to force sale of their theatres is being resorted to by several big chain operators, through enforcement of extended protection, Motion Picture News has been advised. The system is a surreptitious one and is being employed in a number of spots.

As an instance, representatives of a certain circuit are working the gag of going into various towns and telling exhibitors that they either must sell to the circuit or be saddled with a protection restriction which will put them out of business.

Unless they peddle to the circuit, these independents are reported being told, protection ranging up to one year will be demanded by theatres in nearby towns, where the circuit operates.

Club Declared Effective

The racket is said to be working, with prices of independent houses being beaten down by its use. An instance is cited of a circuit representative interviewing an independent who had no desire to sell his houses. He was alone in his particular town and both of his theatres were making money. To his disinclination to sell was answered that if he didn't it would be just too bad for him, because the circuit intended to get such a long period of protection over his town that the pictures would be past history before he was given a tumble. Subsequently, his houses were sold to the circuit.

Exhibs Protest Talker Showings In N. W. Schools

Seattle—Exhibitors here are aroused over showing of talkers in schools throughout the state, which are charging admissions for the shows. This unfair competition has caused a protest by the Pacific Northwest exhibitor unit to Electrical Research Products, Fox and the Film Board.

The protest specifically mentions North Bend, where "The Romance of the Rio Grande" was shown over Western Electric equipment.

Vote on Daylight Bill At Baltimore in Fall

Baltimore—Voters are to pass upon the proposed daylight saving ordinance at the November election, under a ruling of Attorney General Thomas H. Robinson.

Frels Sells Normanna

Cuera, Tex.—The Normanna has been purchased from Rubin Frels by the Hall interests, operators of a chain in Taft, Kingsville, Sinton, Beeville and other cities.

Favor Arbitration

Des Moines—Return of arbitration is desired by a number of Iowa exhibitors, according to Miss McGrevey, secretary of the Film Board. The procedure was abandoned late last year, due to the Thacher decree.

Double Feature Gag Adopted at Syracuse House

Syracuse—Double featuring is being instituted at Warners' Strand, the house playing two pictures every third week. Reaction of other first runs here is being awaited, particularly since Loew's State has dropped stage shows for the summer. The move will shave $4,500 weekly off the theatre's net, it is estimated.

Levine Set for Comeback In the Serial Field

Nat Levine's Mascot Pictures will again produce serials for release on the state rights market. Three are planned immediately, with silent and talker versions on two subjects.

A new wrinkle, according to Levine, will be incorporated in the initial release, starring Rin Tin Tin. In addition to sound and silent serial versions, there will be duplicate versions in straight feature form. Second on the bill is a Tom Tyler Western episode yarn, with the third, a wild animal film, likewise available in four forms.

Take Over Exchange

Milwaukee — Celebrated Players Film Corporation's local exchange has been turned over by J. S. Grauman to V. F. DeLorenzo and William Scharun, booker and cashier of the exchange, respectively. Both of the latter have been connected with the exchange for a number of years and are well known to exhibitors in the northwest.

Tickets for Cans

Lakeland, Fla. — A city-wide clean-up campaign was conducted here this week, with the city authorities handing out a free theatre ticket to each child turning in 50 tin cans. The kids put it over hot, with over 100,000 of the tin containers passed over for tickets.

Iowa Houses Wire

Des Moines — Universal sound-on-film equipment was installed at two more Iowa houses this week. E. A. Parrish installed the equipment at the Opera House at Cambridge, and an installation was made at the Opera House at Woodward for W. A. Belt.

Charlotte—Exhibitors here are facing a tough fight in their efforts to combat a proposed ten per cent tax on admissions. A measure providing for the ten per cent levy is slated to be introduced at the next session.

Brock Transfers Units to Coast; May Return East

While RCA Photophone officials still are divided on plans for improvements at the Gramercy studio in New York, Louis Brock is transferring his production activities to the RKO studio in Hollywood.

Louis Brock

Present plans call for the making at Hollywood of some of the series he is under contract to produce for RKO, but it is problematical if he will remain on the Coast. This is due to the fact that he plans a series of "Headliner" shorts, with Broadway stars, who would not be available on the Coast.

Mark Sandrich, who is directing the "Nick and Tony" series, leaves soon for the Coast. Brock is expected to start production in about three weeks. As soon as a final okeh is secured upon plans for the Gramercy plant, work will be rushed to completion, which is expected to take between 60 and 90 days.

G. Currier, Joe Kennedy's Sponsor, Dead in Boston

Boston—Guy W. Currier, prominent lawyer who died here this week, was the man who sponsored Joseph P. Kennedy in his picture debut.

Currier arranged the finances by which Kennedy purchased FBO from Graham's of London several years ago and also interested David Sarnoff and the Radio Corporation in the Keith holdings.

The Currier-Kennedy alliance, it is further understood, hit the rocks many months ago as a result of which the former withdrew his support from Kennedy's activities. In the settlement of labor troubles at Hollywood studios recently, Currier played an important part as mediator acting on behalf of the industry.

While his name was rarely discussed in print within the industry, Currier was well known to S. R. Kent and Nicholas M. Schenck.

Nation-Wide Programs Seen When RCA Finishes Big Amusement Center

Cloaked with mystery induced by statements that gracefully avoid definition in fact, the big story behind "Radio City" to be built by John D. Rockefeller, Jr., and the Radio Corporation of America does not hinge on the several theatres which will decorate the huge plot running from Fifth to Sixth Aves. and from 48th to 51st Sts., in New York.

Those houses will be important. Roxy will stage, direct and operate one. A second will be the home of RKO vaudeville and a third will house dramatic and musical plays. But the closely-held secret of the $250,000,000 development revolves around television.

"Radio City" will be the national home of television. Ten or twelve stages equipped with television broadcasting apparatus will be built into the structures that will comprise the RCA development. This entertainment center will take several years to erect. But by that time, television, as an entertainment factor, is expected to be ready for the American public.

Just how RCA will market the programs remains to be seen. There are approximately 10,000,000 radio sets in the United States and many thousands of miles of telephone wires which may be fitted into the television reception and transmission.

There are over 500 radio broadcasting stations operating today throughout the United States and the potential value of all of them in building up national television hook-ups is reported a subject of study by RCA engineers.

Those familiar with their subject state television will be made available for the home exactly like radio and that the entertainment programs will eventually be as varied.

How theatres will fit into final marketing plans is a matter to be worked out on the basis of revenue. It may be that home television sets will prove the greater revenue inducer or a combination of television broadcasting to both theatre and the home developed as a middle ground solution.

Tough Times Ahead In Australia With Tax

Trouble ahead for American distributors in Australia is seen as an aftermath of the 30 per cent tax levy enacted last week at Canberra.

The impost taxes, remittances and gross earnings accruing from American pictures are expected by the Australian government to return $2,500,000 annually. The general economic situation on the island continent is held to be responsible for the move.

Hollywood—Adaptation and continuity of "Resurrection," will be done by Finis Fox.

What a Sentence!

Hollywood—Sally Eilers and Hoot Gibson, who are about to become newlyweds, are understood to have hit upon a plan whereby they steer clear of the Reno-vation process for at least five years.

They have promised each other, so the story goes, to weather the storm for that period.

Fanchon & Marco Booking Office Bucking Publix

A Fanchon & Marco presentation circuit totalling 60 weeks and rivalling Publix in bookings will be in operation by the winter.

Fox houses in the East will supply 20 of the 60 weeks and the rest of the country, the difference. At present, the Crotona in New York is the only house running the "Ideas," because opening days, as they stand at present, don't allow for the bookings. However, it is probable, these will be changed in the fall to permit the introduction of F. & M. units and vaudeville in additional theatres.

M. D. Howe, carrying the title of general booking manager, is in command of the Fanchon and Marco companies, of which there are two. Fanchon and Marco, Inc., of California is the parent company and Fanchon and Marco Corporation of New York, a subsidiary. The former owns half the New York company and Fox Theatres the remainder. These companies have absorbed the former William Fox Vaudeville Booking Office.

Jack Loeb as vice-president of the California company will serve as talent scout, dividing his time between New York, California and the Continent.

Jersey Exhibs Charge Apathy On Protection

Atlantic City—Asserted inactivity of the government in dealing with the protection situation in New Jersey, after it had requested the exhibitor unit to postpone its court fight on the issue, was scheduled to highlight the convention of the association here Friday. Advance indications were that association members would have considerable to say over the contract situation.

At the sessions here, Joseph M. Seider, veteran leader, will withdraw as president, insisting that his name be kept off the ballot. He will call upon members to supply funds for the employment of paid operating heads of the association.

Picture Industry One of Few to Show Boost in Earnings, Despite Depression

National Survey Reveals Film Business in Healthy State; Mergers Predicted

Surface appearances of the industry's financial structure indicate that the field will be one of a very small group of industries which will show higher earnings in 1930 than in '29, it is revealed in a survey just completed by Moody's Investors' Service, a Wall Street stock analytical organization.

Stock decline of blue chip leaders in films is attributed to a sympathetic movement with the trend of the whole market.

Earnings for the second quarter will be considerably lower than the first, chiefly because of the usual seasonal decline, it is said, although the figures will surpass those of the June period last year.

Operation of all companies with full steam ahead in the talker field is not given entire credit for healthy intakes of last year, despite the new blood recruited to box offices by sound. Increased efficiency in all three branches is recognized as a correlated factor which helped to skyrocket 1929 and early '30 earnings. Concentration of activities, owing to mergers and absorptions of numerous small units, brought about the new high rate of efficiency, the report points out.

3,000 Installation Possibilities

Although installation costs of sound equipment presented a serious obstacle for small independent theatres and chains, it is stated that this difficulty has been largely surmounted by now. The survey revealed 55 cents as the average admission price in key spots, and 35 cents as the country's average.

Seven thousand houses, of the 22,000 accounts operating, are said to be permanently or temporarily darkened, or showing on a short part-time basis. Of the remaining 15,000, 64%, or 9,500, are wired, according to the survey, which reveals the fact that 2,500 of the present silent group of 5,500 will never be wired, leaving only about 3,000 full-time possibilities for wiring.

Future installations must depend on the natural growth of the number of theatres constructed.

"This year will offer the final test for sound pictures," states the survey. "Some producers are already stressing the quality of pictures in work, believing that this will be the important factor from now on rather than the mere presence of sound. The question also is being raised, what will happen when the current interest in talking pictures begins to show signs of flagging?" To this question, the company offers color as an answer, pointing out that the big companies have thrown a halter around color to checkmate its speed in development, loosening the reins only when necessary as a means of increasing attendance. "Color production is more costly than plain black and white, and current expansion with coincidental remodeling and construction costs imposes an important burden on producers at this time."

High cost of wide film, insofar as technical and equipment changes are concerned, and an increase in negative costs will force a slower treatment than sound, it is stated. "It will constitute an important stimulus to increasing attendance," however, when the industry is set to accept double width pictures.

In its study of television, the survey found that "it is probable that its possibilities will become more clearly defined as further technical developments are made and other factors, like cost, become estimable."

Chain Holdings Up 50 Percent

"So rapid is the expansion at present that accurate appraisals of theatres held by the largest producers cannot be made," states "Moody's" in commenting on the "phenomenal" growth of theatre activities of the big units. It is estimated that Paramount, Loew's, Warners, Fox and RKO have, on the average, increased theatres owned or controlled by over 50% since the close of 1928.

"Warners and Stanley controlled less than 500 theatres at the close of 1928, but now have approximately 825 or a gain of 65%. Loew's had 125 early in 1929 and now controls 190, a gain of over 50%. Paramount has a similar gain, from around 800 to 1,300. The Wesco division of Fox alone has increased about 80% to 450.

"Concentration of theatre ownership seems to be following the trend production has taken. Independents still outnumber the leaders who probably control around 35% of active exhibition outlets compared with 60% of production.

"Construction is the more advantageous and sound way of building a chain," believes "Moody's" due to the great amount of "deadwood" which usually goes along with a chain deal. Delay in construction is, however, an argument for the purchase of theatres already built.

"Undoubtedly some theatres bought are discontinued entirely, because of a noticeable tendency in recent years of audiences to be drawn from a wider area to the larger, newer theatres, the result of greater use of automobiles and generally better roads. This point is emphasized by the sharp drop which has been seen in construction of small, exclusively-theatre buildings since 1927. According to F. W. Dodge Corp., 545 such buildings were erected in 1927, only 458 in 1928 and 299 in 1929, a drop of 45 per cent. from 1927 to last year. The cost also declined around 50 per cent. per unit. Unfortunately no separate figures are available in regard to construction of combination theatre-office buildings, but the foregoing figures are probably much larger numerically though representative of a much smaller value and seating capacity.

"The greatly accelerated attendance over the past year has enabled absorption of expansion costs to a certain extent, although the ultimate expense has not been taken care of in many cases and purchasing of theatres continues at breakneck speed. Over-expansion in a short space of time, we think, is the greatest single difficulty motion picture companies face. But reflection of this in lower earnings because of higher costs and increased capitalizations is not yet due, and may be avoided by shrewd and careful management.

"Serious competition for the motion picture industry from the legitimate stage is almost negligible, the more so with the advent of sound and talking pictures, and primarily because of the great difference in admission prices. Lively discussions of the possibilities of television as a cause of lowered motion picture theatre attendance are possible, but great refinements, technically and in price, are still required before home television sets attain widespread usage. It is also likely that employment of this invention for the benefit of the screen trade will be evolved, because television broadcasts may eventually be possible as a means of transmitting performances or events from a central spot to numerous screens. Competition from abroad appears very slight, as attested to by the great predominance of American films in foreign markets, and imports will probably continue to be films with limited appeal.

The Merger Mart

"The distinct tendency in this industry in recent years has been, as indicated before, toward grouping of the main interests. Will this trend continue? In part the answer lies in the extent of future governmental investigation of the industry and decisions in the matter of large companies dominating the field. Besides the actual consolidations mentioned there have been many more rumored that did not go beyond the preliminary stages. There remain a few companies outside the largest but of considerable size, and of possible value to further pooling of concerns: Universal Pictures, Pathe Exchange and Columbia Pictures. The last two are strictly producers, the first at present gradually liquidating its holdings of exhibition facilities. Outside the movie field is Shubert, which may yet be included in a combination. Radio Corporation of America has considered acquiring Columbia Graphophone, Ltd. Granted freedom from authoritative restraint, we feel the tendency in the field will be toward further concentration of control in all branches of the industry. It would not be surprising to see, within a reasonable length of time, even fewer dominating factors in the industry and further submergence of the more specialized concerns."

Paris — Reopening of the German market to American producers is forecast by George Canty, American film commissioner, representing the Dept. of Commerce here. He is optimistic over the patent situation, declaring that an early settlement will be reached.

Selling Stops in Illinois Pending New Protection Schedules; Exhibs Mark Time

Wild and Woolly

St. Louis—"Blood is precious. Don't spill yours! Leave town now."

When Charles Chastain, of the State Theatre, East St. Louis, read the above in a note handed to him by a mystery man, his blood pressure jumped skyward. A second note followed and Chastain got in touch with local police, who are still running down clues for the apprehension of the writer. And, in the meantime, the exhib is keeping under cover.

Mayer, Thalberg, Schenck, Rubin, In Chi Confab

Hollywood—Indicating that there is a good chance for M-G-M to launch production of foreign talker versions abroad, Louis B. Mayer and Irving Thalberg, production heads of M-G-M studios, are in Chicago. They will meet and confer with Nicholas M. Schenck and J. Robert Rubin, president and secretary of Loew's on the foreign talker situation.

Immediately after the conferences in Chicago, which may last for several days, it is reported that Rubin will return East and depart for Europe to put whatever policy is decided on into effect without delay.

M-G-M has gone into production of foreign talkers and dialogue versions rather extensively during the past eight months. A special department was organized overnight at the local studios, and several Spanish, French and German talkers have been turned out successfully. Whether or not this type of foreign talker, with linguists imported from abroad added to those picked up locally, will get the decision over special foreign versions produced in various European countries, depends upon the current conferences in Chicago.

Reisman Promotes Nine Members of Field Force

Nine new field promotions were made this week by Phil Reisman, general sales manager of Pathe, making a total of 25 such promotions during the last year. The new advancements are: Charles Lundgren to city sales manager at Chicago; Floyd Heninger to assistant manager and head booker at Salt Lake City; and El Windward to salesman; James Lewis as a salesman at Kansas City with Joe Mazetis succeeding him as head booker and office manager; Nelson T. Powers as a salesman at Memphis, succeeded by T. T. Brown as booker and office manager; James Stapleton to the post of salesman from that of cashier at Portland. At Denver, Leon Abrams, formerly at Kansas City, has been made booker.

Convention "Pep" Oozes as Film Salesmen Wait for Command to Swing into Action

Chicago—Film selling here is at a standstill, pending adoption of new protection schedules. Exhibitors of the territory are averse to singing new contracts before finding out just what they are entitled to under the proposed new zoning arrangement.

These exhibitors are expecting a better break under the new schedules, so will not sign contracts until ascertaining just what this break will be. Meanwhile, new films are lying on the shelf, and local exchanges are smarting under the curtailment of business on new season product.

Agreement has been reached on principles in proposed rezoning of Cook County and downstate Illinois and a sub-committee is endeavoring to apply these conditions to general and local situations. Pending completion of the committee's work, the Film Board is guarding closely news of the major agreements which are to govern the metropolitan area, despite the fact that sales practically are at a standstill.

The committee frankly admits that it has not the slightest idea when its work would be completed. Members interested enough to hazard a guess fixed the time at anywhere from two weeks to a month, depending, they said, upon the length and intensity of controversies. The committee is composed of Jack Miller (Chicago Exhibitors' Ass'n., chairman; Jack Rose (Coston Booking Circuit), Max Balaban (Publix), Felix Mendelssohn (Film Board), Sidney Meye (Fox Theatres) and Norman Moray (Warners).

Salesmen Chafe at Bit

Pending the deliberations of this committee local film salesmen remain, for the most part, inactive. The clean-up sales drives are over and the salesmen who, fresh from their companies' conventions, were champing at the bit two weeks ago are now sitting idly at their desks wondering when they will be at liberty to work on the new product.

The final deliberations of the downstate committee seeking agreement on major considerations of a new protective system will result in earlier availability all along the line. Originally, it had been proposed to make pictures available to the 10 cent houses in 133 days. The later revision of that protection schedule will bring availability to the 10 cent house 29 days earlier. The maximum protection limit of the largest downstate cities (on the basis of one mile for each 1,000 of population) remains 40 miles, but a revision of the regulations governing overlapping protection areas reduces the number of instances in which the full 40-mile protection radius may be claimed.

To Define Second Runs

Other considerations of the downstate plan which still await approval are: Small towns adjacent to and within a radius of three miles from a larger town should be

Chicago—Plenty of arguments have marked the rezoning conferences but progress is being made. A near-battle between Max Balaban and Arthur Schoenstadt, representing respectively Publix-B. & K. and the Schoenstadt circuits, has proved one of the highlights. C. C. Pettijohn of the Hays office is taking no active part in the discussion, remaining in a room apart from the committee and joining the meeting only when asked for advice.

Hughes Controls Multicolor; Erects $500,000 Plant

Hollywood—Immediate construction of a $500,000 laboratory for quantity production is planned by Howard ("Hell's Angels") Hughes, following his purchase of control of Multicolor, as exclusively reported by Motion Picture News.

Hughes will be the first customer, planning all his future films in color. The new plant is scheduled to have a weekly capacity of 1,000,000 feet of positive.

Showdown Due in Twin City Operator Squabble

Minneapolis—Twin City independents are declared standing pat on their threat to close their doors for the summer or employ non-union operators if their demand for one operator is refused. The union insists upon two operators in the booth. The exhibitors have made a compromise offer of one operator and a non-union helper in booths where disc equipment is used. Twenty-three exhibitors have agreed to give union operators the gate if their demands are refused.

"Big Fight" Scheduled To Play RKO Globe

Marking the second outside picture to play the house since it was taken over by Radio-Keith-Orpheum, "The Big Fight" opens a week's stand at the Globe, New York, Friday. The deal, states Harry Thomas, Sono Art-World Wide distribution chief, follows the preview held recently at the New York Athletic Club. This special showing was arranged for 2,000 guests by Michael L. Simmons, director of advertising and publicity.

Hollywood — Warners have purchased talking picture rights to "His Brother's Wife." Plans call for production in all-Technicolor.

Fox West Coast Bucks Tom Thumb Golf Racket By Opening Own Courses in L. A.

1,600 Miniature Links in County Hit Box Office and Spur Circuit to Action

Los Angeles—With a total of 1,600 miniature golf courses operating in the county of Los Angeles, and with others springing up like mushrooms in every vacant lot, Fox West Coast Theatres have definitely decided to invade the field with a dozen layouts as an initial experiment.

This policy was decided upon by Fox West Coast officials after it was found that the miniature courses were cutting into the business of neighborhood theatres at an alarming rate, and there seemed to be no let-up in the popularity of the putting courses.

In order to study the inside of the golf racket immediately, the Fox West Coast Circuit completed deals last Saturday to take over three courses already in operation, with each one acquired located within a half block of a large suburban theatre. The trio of experimental layouts include the Bantam Course, close to the Alexander, Glendale; the Ritz miniature layout opposite the Ritz theatre; and a newly constructed course adjoining the Golden Gate in East Los Angeles.

Besides this group, Fox West Coast have started construction of the most picturesque layout so far planned in the city. It is situated next to the Fox Belmont and will compete with a nearby course that is reported to be netting $500 daily.

Operation an Experiment

An official of Fox West Coast denied the report that the circuit had appropriated $500,000 for the construction and purchase of miniature golf courses. He stated that the organization was conducting an amusement business on a large scale; and Fox West Coast intended to stay in that field for many years to come. He further stated that the acquisition of the three courses was in the nature of an experiment, and if it was discovered that the golf course brand of entertainment presented itself as a permanent brand of entertainment for the public, the circuit would undoubtedly take recognition of that fact.

The purchase of the trio of miniatures, together with the expected addition of at least nine more to bring the total up to twelve, is primarily a move on the part of the circuit to make an exhaustive study of the golf racket at first hand.

First Exhibitor in Field

The sudden move of Fox West Coast to acquire and build the miniature courses marks the first attempt of any theatres on the Coast to enter the golf game to compete with the hundreds of courses that have sprung up practically overnight. Although it is reported that the courses to be operated by Fox West Coast will not cut their prices in order to cut into the heavy profits being made by the layouts conducted by independents, it is expected that the circuit will eventually make some tie-up whereby patrons of their theatres will receive coupons or stubs enabling them to play the circuit courses at lesser fees than are regularly charged.

Although denied that Fox West Coast is going into the miniature golf course game on a big scale, it is reported that the circuit has imported the best builder of this type of course from the East, and he will supervise construction of the Fox West Coast layouts throughout the West. It is further understood that he has a patent putting surface that is not affected by either rain or water, and this has many advantages over the putting surfaces being installed in independent courses.

After Part of Tom Thumb's Money Bag

Legislative steps to tax receipts of Tom Thumb golf courses, keen competitors of picture houses, are expected to materialize shortly in several key towns where the new outdoor game has caught on like wildfire. In St. Louis, a proposed city ordinance would take $50 yearly from each course, and the chief of police has promised to arrest proprietors who allow patrons to become too noisy after midnight. The games have eaten heavily into theatre receipts.

Omaha Bows to Tom Thumbs and Night Baseball

Omaha—Between night baseball and miniature golf, both downtown and neighborhood houses here have run into some stiff competition. The freak attractions seem to thrive on hot weather and the town is getting plenty of it.

Western League baseball brings Omaha here for games two weeks out of the month. Since the lights were strung up on May 29, the average nightly throng in the stands has been 2,500, except Saturday and Sunday when 4,000 attend. Afternoon games previously did well to draw 200 although Saturday games were usually good for 1,000 and Sunday about 3,000.

The ball games undersell the theatres as males are taxed 75 cents and women only two bits, making a couple for a dollar. Movie houses are $1.20 a couple, except the all-sound places. Ladies are admitted free to the games Saturday night, but are charged the male scale on Sunday night. The ball park has a 5,000 capacity.

A dozen Tom Thumb courses are packed from 7 p. m. till 1 a. m. and later. Afternoon business is mediocre, however. All the houses in town are squawking, the golf being the bigger gripe of the two.

One from Wynn for Para.

Simultaneously with acquisition of talker rights to George White's play, "Manhattan Mary," Paramount signed Ed Wynn to star. Wynn was secured by Jesse Lasky through a special arrangement with Florenz Ziegfeld.

Fox, Loew, Price Cut in St. Louis Socks Other Runs

St. Louis—Reduced admission scale by Fox and Loew has done more damage along the big row than was at first anticipated. The long b.o. lines no longer crowd front doors of other important keys. Now they scurry toward the 50 cent shows at Fox and Loew's, where both houses are playing to more fans than ever before in their history.

The Ambassador continues its steady plugging of Ed Lowry's units and, as a result, attendance holds up there, but at the Missouri it's a different story. The Skouras theatre has hit a terrific slump, chiefly because of its higher prices, without any stage show. On July 4, however, Skouras will open with an elaborate presentation policy at the Missouri as the answer to the uptown cut rate policy. Charley Skouras announces the chain's policy to continue with uncut prices.

The Municipal Opera at Forest Park is also an unhealthy blotch on the local scheme of amusement activities. Playing to upwards of 10,000 nightly, the civic venture is breaking all attendance records. In addition, Tom Thumb golf courses keep many away with their long session which starts early in the evening, continuing until 4 A. M.

Christies Enter Non-Theat Field Through Wilding

Detroit—Wilding Pictures Prod., Inc., non-theatrical producer-distributor, has become a subsidiary unit of Metropolitan Sound Studios, Hollywood, of which Al and Charles Christie are the controlling factors.

The new division will continue in the industrial field under direction of N. E. Wilding. The company makes talkers under a Western Electric license.

Doorman Beaten Halting Theatre Gate Crashers

Gouverneur, N. Y.—Six boys who tried to crash the gate of the Gralyn beat up the doorman when he stopped them. They fled when another employee, attracted by his shouts, came to the doorman's rescue. Village authorities are seeking the culprits.

Government Sees Fertile Field for U. S. Equipment in Far East and Africa

New Equipment Fields

The United States Department of Commerce sees "a large and fertile field of exploitation" for American equipment in the Far and Near East and in Africa. In a Trade Information Bulletin covering thirty-one countries, these possibilities are discussed in minute detail.

The full text will be published in the regular editions of MOTION PICTURE NEWS as well as in The Showman section, out July 12.

Time Ripe for Replacements in Hundreds of Theatres, Report Points Out

Washington—Countries of the Far East, Far East and Africa are developing into important markets for equipment of American manufacture, according to an exhaustive bulletin to be released here today by the Department of Commerce.

Hundreds of theatres in these markets are using old and antiquated projectors, the bulletin points out, and the field, therefore, is wide open to development. The survey is based on information gathered by representatives of the Departments of State and Commerce and compiled by Nathan D. Golden, assistant chief of the Motion Picture Division of the former.

Golden, in discussing the possibilities abroad for American equipment, said to MOTION PICTURE NEWS:

U. S. Equipment "Last Word"

"In the Far East, the exhibitors of Australia New Zealand and Japan regard our American equipment as the last word in quality of performance and construction. In the Near East the major part of the projection equipment used is that of German and French manufacture. This is primarily due to the failure of American equipment to be introduced on any large scale and the considered high cost of our equipment.

"Sound and talking pictures are being introduced to the markets of the Far East Near East and Africa on a larger scale. This should open to American manufacturers a large and fertile field of exploitation, since new equipment is invariably installed in a theatre which has changed to sound pictures.

"There are hundreds of theatres in the above-mentioned market whose projectors are old and antiquated. Most of them have outlived their usefulness and are ready for replacement with up-to-date equipment. There are also as many theatres using but one projector.

"Since price is the determining factor in the purchase of new equipment, American manufacturers must compete with those of Germany, France and the few minor manufacturers of Australia and Japan to gain a foothold in these regions. However, the superior quality of American equipment is fast overcoming this price barrier wherever our equipment has had an opportunity to display its performance over that of foreign makes."

Projector Exports Drop

During 1929, there were exported to all foreign countries 4,180 projectors of 35 and 16 mm. gauge, valued at $805,266. This is a drop of 773 projectors exported over the 1928 period, at which time 5,953 of both types were reported with a value of $950,202. A breakdown of exports to the Far East, Near East and Africa shows that 474 standard or 35 mm. projectors of American manufacture valued at $143,016 and 1,280

Depkin in Charge Of Warner Houses In Wisconsin Zone

Milwaukee—Expansion plans and operation of Warner theatres in Wisconsin are under direction of Bernard Dapkin, Jr., formerly in charge of company houses in New York state. Theatres under his control are: the Downer, Juneau, Riviera, State, Kosciuzko, Venetian, Lake and Granada here, the Appleton at Appleton, Sheboygan, Sheboygan; Venetian, Racine, and Kenosha, Kenosha. David Flam, formerly with Fox Metropolitan Theatres, New York, is here as publicity director.

Kahn Completes New 16m Sound Camera Mechanism

Samuel Kahn, a mechanical engineer, will market a new 16mm. sound-on-film portable camera, which may be made reversable into a projector. The camera, Kahn told MOTION PICTURE NEWS, can take 100 pictures per second and is suitable for slow motion work.

Kahn is negotiating for manufacturing and plans to dispose of a complete unit, including camera, a small "mike" and amplifier, at $250 or $300.

Iowa Exhibitors to Hold General Meeting in Fall

Des Moines—General meeting of the Iowa exhibitor unit is scheduled for this fall, at which time the new contract is expected to be submitted. Discussion of the proposed new contract featured a recent meeting at which President E. P. Smith was chairman.

Back to Hollywood

Hollywood—After a year's contract at the Paramount Long Island Studios, Alice D. G. Miller has returned to the M-G-M lot to write an original story for a Joan Crawford starring talker. Miss Miller got her first start as a scenarist with M-G-M about seven years ago, and was under contract to the organization for five years.

Goulding Guiding Powell

Hollywood—Edmund Goulding will direct William Powell in "Ladies' Man" for Paramount.

Tobis Syndicate Seen as Next Emelka Owners

Berlin—Tobis Syndicate is now mentioned by insiders as the likely successful bidder for control of the powerful Emelka interests.

At the recent Emelka directors' meeting, held at Munich, no plans were made known concerning the company's future, further strengthening the report that the government will dispose of its holdings in that concern.

Photocolor to Make 20 More for Columbia

Twenty Photocolor subjects will be made for the 1930-31 Columbia program, it is understood. Common stock of the color firm has been admitted to trading on the New York Produce Exchange.

Capitalization of Photocolor Corp. consists of an authorized outstanding issue of 100,000 shares of no par value non-participating preferred stock, and an authorized issue of 600,000 shares of no par value common stock of which approximately 350,000 shares are distributed among some 881 stockholders.

Artkino Guild Planning Film Theatre in Boston

Artkino Guild has affected a working agreement with the Little Theatre Ass'n., which operates the Little Theatre in Newark, N. J., whereby it will aid in establishing a permanent art film theatre in Boston, to be known as The Screen. Under the leadership of Stuart I. Whitmarsh, a membership campaign, along lines similar to that conducted in Newark, is to be started at once. Offices are in the Pierce Bldg., Boston.

Paramount Signs Ina Claire

Ina Claire, erstwhile Pathe star, has been signed by Paramount for the feminine lead in "The Royal Family." She is slated to arrive at the New York studio in August to start work in the picture. Frederic March is the only other member of the cast so far assigned. Previously, it had been reported that Ruth Chatterton was to appear in the film.

Small Town Showmen Pruning Prices; Swing to 35 Cents Top Is Spreading

Novelty of Talkers Out as Draw, Second NEWS Survey Brings to Light

While admissions in key cities are holding to an even keel, many smaller towns are feeling the necessity of pruning their prices, it is shown in the second instalment of a national survey made by Motion Picture News.

These small towns jacked up their prices when sound came into popularity, getting a 50 cents or 60 cents top for talkers. These levels are being lowered in a number of instances throughout the country, with many small town houses reverting to a 35 cents top. The move is declared prompted by present industrial conditions plus the fact that the novelty equation of sound has worn off, coupled with the tendency of their patrons to seek entertainment in larger nearby towns, where for the same price they can see a more elaborate show.

Additional key cities covered in the second instalment follow:

Chicago Suburbans Follow Usual Summer Reductions

Chicago—Normal summer policy and not the general business depression reduced admissions at most neighborhood stands, including de luxe circuit houses in outlying districts. The loop houses maintain the usual scale. Matinee cuts bring prices from 30 to 20 cents, and nights are now 20 instead of 35 cents.

Bargain Prices, But No Slashing in Iowa Houses

Des Moines—Price scale throughout the state remains normal during the summer, averaging 35 cents top. In many spots, however, exhibitors are holding bargain nights, mostly on Tuesdays when all scales hit the low of 10 cents. Week pictures are booked, with prizes of aluminum, dishes, etc., being used by practically all the smaller theatres. This policy is new in Iowa.

John Anderson's Princess, at Boone, draws from 1,200 to 2,000 with 10 cent prices on Tuesday nights, representing close to one-fifth of the town's entire population. His regular top is 40 cents, and 50 cents on week-ends.

New Orleans Theatres Continue Scale Despite Slump in Business

New Orleans—Although box-offices are slumping houses in this town refuse to cut prices, although the Orpheum, Saenger and Loew's State give bargain matinees occasionally. Night prices at all runs remain as usual.

Los Angeles Area Holds Firmly to Old Price Scale

Los Angeles—There is not a single instance in Hollywood or Los Angeles where admission prices have been reduced, either independents or circuits.

Two-for-One in Cleveland To Keep the Fans Coming

Cleveland—While local admission prices have remained unchanged, maintaining an average of 25 cents, more than 35 per cent of suburban houses around Cleveland are offering two admissions for the price of one on nights when no premiums are offered, so that the result is practically identical with a price cut.

This policy has been adopted more to keep picturegoers in the habit of attending theatres than to increase profits. First runs, however, hold firmly to the normal scale.

Bum Business in Atlanta, But Cuts Are Ruled Taboo

Cleveland—Although box office receipts have dropped to an alarmingly low level in this territory, neither chains nor independent, are slashing admissions. In the judgment of exhibitor leaders, only a drastic cut would reflect at the box office, pointing out that a small price cut has never been known to bring larger grosses. Admissions generally in the Atlanta territory are reasonable and no house could afford a drastic reduction.

Severe price slashes last year not only failed to improve grosses, but actually hurt theatres where the new policy was adopted. Exhibitors are redoubling their efforts to build stronger programs and merchandise them more aggressively. They are building up to present prices rather than risk the dangerous policy of building down to lower scales.

Chaplin To Sing Own Songs

Hollywood—Hold everything! Charlie Chaplin is reported to be capitulating to talkers. Not that it's to be any grand plunge from pantomime to talk, but he's reported planning to have three songs in his "City Lights," which he had planned as absolutely voiceless. Charlie is reported practicing, which means that he is considering singing at least one of the songs himself. He has written the words and music for three numbers scheduled for the picture.

Cuts Admissions

Washington—Admission prices have been slashed at the Fox and now are 25 cents until 1 P. M.; 25 cents for balcony and 35 cents for mezzanine and orchestra until 6 P. M. 35 cents for balcony and 50 cents for mezzanine and orchestra until 11 P. M.

Ten Cleveland Houses Under Hammer Friday

Cleveland—Offered as a circuit, in groups of five and separately, ten theatres, operated for the last year by Frank X. Shaut, receiver for the Ohio Amusement Co., are being sold at auction here Friday. The deal will require the buyer to carry out Shaut's contract for installation of RCA Photophone equipment at the Knickerbocker, Jewel, Savoy, Southern and Dennison Square. The Garden and Lincoln some time ago installed sound equipment.

"Blues" Victorious in Iowa

Des Moines—Sunday movies went down to defeat at Grundy Centre. The vote was 430 to 220. P. A. Igo, manager of the local theatre, paid costs of the election. The movement was opposed by several ministers of the town.

Houston House Loses to Robber

Houston—Seventeen hundred dollars, representing Saturday receipts, were taken by a lone masked robber who obtained admittance to Publix' Metropolitan.

Kansas Houses Hard Hit by Bad Crops and Slump

Kansas City—Theatres of Kansas have been hard hit by the industrial depression, according to a survey just completed. Within two months, 219 theatres of the state have closed their doors, with another 175 expected to go dark within the next 60 days.

Relying principally on wheat and corn, Kansas has been hard hit by torrential rains, damaging the corn crop considerably. Because of the price of wheat, there is speculation as to whether the crop will be harvested. Another damaging factor has been a Supreme Court ruling on the labor law, which has resulted in darkening of many houses on Sunday.

Plot Charged in Alleged Ban on Film, "Ingagi"

Hollywood—Prepared for an expose of film making, particularly as concerns the use of action and voice doubles, miniatures, glass shots and studio "foreign" and other trick views, Nat H. Spitzer, president of Congo Pictures, has brought suit for $3,365,000 damages in Federal Court here charging an attempt to ruin his production, "Ingagi." Named as defendant are the Hays organization, Carl E. Milliken, National Better Business Bureau and others.

Banned in Ohio

Cleveland—"Ingagi" has been banned by Ohio censors, who revoked its license on the ground of alleged faking. Louis Israel, owner of the Cinema, advertised that the distributor had an injunction forcing him to continue the run, but the censor's action relieved him from his contract.

Eaton in West

With plans for four or more Grantland Rice Sportlights, Jack Eaton, editor and director of the Sportlight, which is produced by the Van Beuren Corp. and released through Pathe, has gone to Colorado and Wyoming.

McElwaine in N. Y.

Donn McElwaine, veteran director of publicity at the Pathe Coast studios, is in New York.

Filmusical Vogue Wanes as Producers Pay Out Heavy Dough to Idle Composers

The Trouble Source

"Faulty sound is no longer in the theatre, but rests in the picture," MOTION PICTURE NEWS was informed by an authority in the equipment field, who stated that theatre reproducing is quickly reaching the stage of perfection, while many obstacles are still to be overcome in recording.

Nate Blumberg Shakes Up RKO In Pacific N. W.

Seattle—Several changes have been made in the line-up of Radio-Keith-Orpheum executives in the Pacific Northwest. The changes were made public by Nate Blumberg, assistant general manager of the circuit, who presided at a local conference of managers.

Homer B. Gill is new northwest district manager, succeeding James Carrier, who goes to the New York territory. Ellis C. Bostick, for several seasons manager of the former Pantages here and more recently in Milwaukee for RKO, becomes manager of the local New Orpheum, succeeding Henry Sommers, who is transferred to the Keith Memorial at Boston. John Rogers, recently in the Chicago theatre field, will succeed Walter Fenny as manager of the RKO at Tacoma.

At the session here, in addition to the men involved in the above changes, were Ted Gamble, Portland manager; J. Knox Strachan, Spokane manager; and Joe Cooper, publicity and exploitation director for the Northwest territory. Following the meeting here, Blumberg, Gill and Cooper left for Portland. Blumberg will continue his tour of RKO houses throughout California.

Paine & Moran Promoted When Heineman Moves Up

Oklahoma City—R. I. Payne, former San Antonio manager, is in charge of the Universal office here, succeeding W. P. Moran, who has been named manager at San Francisco. Moran succeeds W. J. Heineman, recently named assistant western sales manager. L. C. Baxley, erstwhile Dallas salesman, has taken over management of the San Antonio office.

Handling Continental Ten

Stuck with Contracts While Public Spurns Revues and Operettas

Hollywood—With filmusicals on the skids—if not already out—producers find themselves loaded up with term contracts calling for heavy weekly sums to composers of musical comedies and operettas.

The burning question right now is just how these contracts will be adjusted without stiff "pay offs" to holders of the agreements. It's causing plenty of worry to producers, especially since most of the composers were unloaded on coast executives by eastern officials of their own organizations.

With Warners deciding to soft pedal film operettas and filmusicals on programs of both their own and First National for the coming season, the organization finds itself carrying plenty of overhead via term contracts with Jerome Kern, Otto Harbach and Oscar Hammerstein II. The trio was originally imported to write original operettas for the two companies. Two of the compositions still have to be produced, "Call of the East," written by Kern and Harbach, and "Children of Dreams," by Hammerstein and Sigmund Romberg.

One Trio that Clicks

In view of Warners' stage efforts during the last year, when "Fifty Million Frenchmen" and "Top Speed" were produced on Broadway, it is entirely likely that the company will switch Kern, Harbach and Hammerstein to the writing of stage operettas to prevent losses on those contracts.

De Sylva, Brown and Henderson holding contracts with Fox for three and United Artists for two productions—to be produced alternately—command what is reported as the top dough for composers with stipend of $200,000 per picture besides percentage of gross after negative cost. In addition, the trio has complete approval on story, cast and director, according to inside information. With "Sunny Side Up" and "High Society Blues" their two pictures for Fox, hitting heavy, it looks as if the De Sylva, Brown, Henderson combination will remain as permanent fixtures in pictures.

Al Jolson Starts Work on "Sons o' Guns" at U. A.

Hollywood—Al Jolson has moved over to the United Artists studio to start work on "Sons o' Guns." Lily Damita will play opposite him in the role she played on the stage. She was loaned by Samuel Goldwyn to Joseph M. Schenck, who is producing the Jolson film.

Eason Megaphoning Boyd

Hollywood—Reaves ("Breezy") Eason will direct William Boyd in the "Painted Desert" instead of "Rawhide." The former has been on the shelf at Pathe for over a year and has been dusted off to be made into a talker.

The Breaks

Budd Rogers, Sono Art-World Wide Sales chief, has reason for his enthusiasm over "The Big Fight," for it's been getting real breaks, so far as timeliness is concerned. It drew 2,000 persons to a preview the night before the Sharkey-Schmeling encounter, and now a return bout assures extension of a high level of popular interest in boxing.

Day Per Week Seen As Saved by New Studio Slate Gag

Declared to add a full working day per week, a new time-saving appliance has been installed at the Paramount New York studio. It is a new type of slate for numbering scenes and takes. One slate, it is said, equipped with automatic name slides, now does the work of three slates under the former system. By this means there is utilization of formerly wasted film which passes through each camera as the synchronized motors gradually attain the speed desired.

Heretofore, each scene in each different camera was numbered at conclusion of the action, necessitating delay while the foreground was cleared, additional current, holding up of the succeeding scene and services of three or four men with as many slates. The new method saves time for the necessary tasks, and enables the camera crew to prepare for the next scene within a few seconds.

New Fox Building Nearly Ready; Arthur Moving In

The six-story building, supplementing Fox headquarters at 10th Ave. and 55th St., will be ready in about a month. The Eastern division of Fox Theatres, generaled by Harry C. Arthur, will be the first to move in, vacating present quarters at 1600 Broadway in favor of the fourth floor of the new structure in a few days.

James R. Grainger and his executive sales force, now occupying the second floor of the headquarters building, will take over the sixth floor of the new building. Clayton P. Sheehan, now in Europe, will find his foreign staff on the fifth floor when he returns from abroad sometime late in the summer.

On the third floor will be offices for Harley L. Clarke, S. R. Burns, W. C. Michel, Oscar Oldnow and other executives. Glen Allvine, heading the publicity and advertising department, will also be quartered there.

Films to Make Kids Picture Conscious Spur Hollywood Producers Into Action

Major Companies Scheduling Pictures Aimed Squarely at Juvenile Trade

Hollywood—Kiddies patronage must be brought back to picture theatres. Producers now realize it and are making plans accordingly. This accounts for the inclusion in 1930-1931 schedules of major companies of pictures designed with particular appeal to children.

For years western and outdoor dramas provided attractions for children. But an over-production of westerns made that type of picture unprofitable to release. With the advent of sound, sophisticated dramas were produced in abundance, with resulting loss of patronage from the children who sought other fields of amusement. Executives with close theatre contacts now see the gradual loss of kid patronage and have decided to recapture the young folks as steady theatre-goers.

A survey of next year's production schedules shows a liberal number of features planned with special appeal to children.

Paramount is in the lead with a total of three kid pictures. This company will produce talker remakes of "Tom Sawyer" and "Huckleberry Finn" with Jackie Coogan and Junior Durkin featured. It is likely these two pictures will be followed by "Huck and Finn." Paramount will also make a feature based upon the cartoon strip "Skippy" drawn by Percy Crosby. The company is now searching for a youth to play the title role.

"Penrod" as Remake

First National is preparing a talker remake of "Boy O' Mine," which was produced in silent form several years ago. The talker version carries the title, "Father's Son." This company has also scheduled for early production talker remakes of "Penrod" and "Penrod and Sam" both from the stories by Booth Tarkington.

Warners are planning a talker remake of "Schooldays" from the Gus Edwards vaudeville act of that name. When made it will carry an all-child cast.

"Babes in Toyland" a musical operetta, will be RKO's chief bid for kid patronage. This organization will also produce about four program pictures with Arthur Lake in the role of a high school or college youth.

Universal meets the situation with a series of comedies and an all-talking serial called "The Indians Are Coming." They will also remake the "Leather Pusher" series in talker form.

Columbia with the Frank Capra production, "Rain Or Shine," has a circus story with distinct kid appeal.

Pathe, with the youthful comedian, Eddie Quillan, offers a series of features the kids are expected to go for strong. His first, just completed, is called "Night Work."

Charlie Chaplin is always a distinct draw with the kids of all ages. His picture "City Lights" is likely to be finished this season. Harold Lloyd is making "Feet First" another kid attraction. Buster Keaton is another whose comedies are held to be particularly enjoyable to the young folks.

Western Back with Rush

Besides these pictures which are distinctly of the juvenile type, studios are planning many which will appeal to the young and old alike. Westerns, railroad stories, comedies of a slapstick nature, underworld and adventure stories are found on practically every program. Among some of the productions of this type are: "The Spider," "Scotland Yard," and "The Spy," mystery and underworld adventures; "The Big Trail," "Cisco Kid," "Last of the Duanes," "Wyoming Wonder" and "Fair Warning," westerns; all from Fox. For comedy, Fox will have, "The Connecticut Yankee" and "Lightnin'," with Will Rogers and "Soup To Nuts" written by Rube Goldberg.

Paramount's adult-child attractions will be "The Spoilers," "With Byrd At The South Pole," "Anybody's War," with Moran and Mack, "Animal Crackers" with the Marx Brothers, "Fighting Caravans," "The Silent Enemy," with an all-Indian cast, "Rose of The Rancho" and "The Scarab Murder Case."

Warners will appeal to kids through the comedy angle with such pictures as "The Egg Crate Wallop," and "Maybe It's Love." "Steel Highway," "Three Faces East," and "Rivers End" will also be a type popular with juveniles.

First National plans "Dawn Patrol" and "Going Wild" air pictures. "The Bad Man" and "Adios" bandit adventures; "Kismet" and "The Widow From Chicago," melodramatic productions that are also good for getting young folks to the box office.

Caddo, with "Hell's Angels" finally released, which it feels has been anticipated by youngsters all over the country.

Outdoor Angle Counted On

RKO with Wheeler and Woolsey in "Half Shot at Sunrise," have a comedy offering with a child appeal. "Cimarron" the Richard Dix special, will carry outdoor and adventure appeal as does "The Record Run" a railroad story.

M-G-M. lists as features attractive to juveniles, "Billy The Kid," a western; "Caught Short" and "Razzle Dazzle," Dressler and Moran comedies; also "Trader Horn," "The Unholy Three," "March of Time" and "Way Out West" all of which are pictures which the studio says should attract the young folks.

Aside from these features there are numerous companies producing comedies which, as always, have been made with kid interest in mind.

Lowdown On Censorship

"Nobody in the movie industry really wants to do away with censorship," according to Judge, which believes that "the customer, when he hears about it, feels that he is getting three-star stuff.

"The producer believes his works really need censoring. Only the censor knows that he is fooling the public. If the producer really wanted to be sophisticated, he could do what Caball has done—talk over their heads."

Tiffany to Revamp Production Schedule As Result of Sales Department Protests

On the Convention Side Lines

Chicago—Oscar Hanson took the stand to tell the convention that Tiffany did not want a single feature on its new schedule that could not be sold everywhere, and then invited opinions from branch managers on the sales prospects of the tentative product in the territories of each. So many responded that all day Tuesday was given over to hearing criticism and suggestions relative to new product. The result was that numerous changes in the feature list were made.

* * *

Henri Ellman, as Mid-West manager, found himself in the role of unofficial host to the conventioneers. They kept that Henri busy.

* * *

L. A. Young came by airplane to open the convention. A brief address and some convention business done with, he returned to Detroit the same day. He was back on the job again early Wednesday morning for the wind-up, however.

Phil Goldstone, without blushing, set $20,000,000 as the minimum figure he wanted the new product to return within the year.

George Caldares of Los Angeles had the local fashion experts gasping. Even J. ("Ham") Lewis, Chicago's acknowledged sartorial authority, turned in his tracks on Michigan Avenue for a second look when Caldares passed.

The Canadian contingent, headed by Harold Pfaff of Toronto, Dominion supervisor for Tiffany, began negotiations with the Union Stock Yards for a meeting place in one of the mammoth refrigerators at the Yards as the thermometer passed 95. By the time it had reached 97, negotiations had been completed but the Canadian delegates were nowhere to be found. It developed that Jim Foy of Toronto had struck up an acquaintance with the Congress Hotel's head janitor who had invited him to his quarters, thirty feet below the street level. About the subterranean card table besides the janitor, Foy and Pfaff, were Maurie Davis of Montreal, H. T. Long of St. Johns, H. D. Buckley of Calgary, and Charlie Lindau of Chicago who was waiting for a street car.

Constructive Criticism of Field Men, Voiced at Convention, Heeded by Chiefs

Chicago—Tiffany will revise its production plans for the 1930-31 season on a wholesale scale as a result of dissatisfaction on the part of the company's sales representatives over proposed feature productions decided upon in advance of the company's convention here.

The new production schedule, it was decided at the closing session today, will comprise 26 features, 12 westerns and 50 shorts. The features will include six special productions and 20 program pictures. It was the feature group of 26, a part of which was tentatively decided upon in advance, that left the sales managers cold, and which, in consequence, will be revamped by company executives on their return to New York this week.

Six of the westerns received the okay of the convention. They are: "Near the Rainbow's End," "The Ridin' Fool," "The Oklahoma Cyclone," "The Land of Missing Men," "Headin' North" and "The Sunset Trail." The remaining six have not been decided upon as yet.

New Animal Series

The 50 shorts will include a new animal series to be known as "Tiffany Chimps." The series will be comprised of six two-reel pictures. Trained chimpanzees and monkeys will carry out the stories with synchronized sound and dialogue. The balance of the shorts will include 26 new Voice of Hollywood releases, six new Jubilee Singer releases and six new Musical Phantasies.

The production budget was not fixed pending final decision on the new feature line-up.

The decision to revamp the company's new schedule, agreed on in part in advance of the convention, came as a result of the resolve of Tiffany executives to produce features which would have uniform sales possibilities throughout the country. All day Tuesday was spent in going over the proposed feature list, with district and branch managers being given an opportunity to register criticism and suggestions with Oscar Hanson, general sales manager, and Phil Goldstone, production manager.

The result of these conferences was the decision made during Wednesday's closing sessions to revamp almost the entire list of 15 features that had been submitted to the convention. Objections to the proposed list ranged all the way from varying sectional tastes to dissatisfaction over titles. Recommendations for a new choice of story material to replace the discarded ones were also invited.

The convention ended three days of conferences with a banquet Wednesday night. Oscar Hanson presided at both business sessions and banquet. President L. A. Young commended the conventioneers on the showing made by the company's field forces during the year and pledged them an even better product for the coming year.

Convention Sidelights of the Tiffany Meet

GRANT L. COOK believes Chicago must be full of good breeders. What else, he asks, in view of the recent census figures, could offset the town's expert marksmen?

Car Harthill and B. Edelman of Chicago tipped off a few of the delegates that they could show them some of the plain and fancing shooting for which the town is famous. They were taken to the Military Tournament and War Show current at Soldier Field in Grant Park.

A prominent triumvirate spotted in Peacock Alley at the Congress earlier than breakfast time on Tuesday was composed of Charles M. Steele, comptroller of the company; S. H. Wilson, manager of the contract department, and Phil Meyer, eastern district supervisor.

M. A. Brown of Los Angeles trying to sell J. E. O'Toole of Milwaukee on the climate stuff. "But no beer goes with it," pointed out O'Toole. And what good is climate without beer?

Things noted: H. W. Fitelson, general attorney of the company, "in conference" with Arthur Lee, foreign departament manager, at the Detroit Coffee shop.

Some of the fight fans who followed the sport Tuesday night were: Harry Brown of Washington, Mark Goldman of Cincinnati, Henri Ellman, C. H. Hill of St. Louis and S. Tewksbury of Portland.

"Why bother with the fireworks at the War Show?" inquired Jerry Marks of Denver, "Tiffany is staging plenty around the Congress."

Roy Avey of Oklahoma City, using his home town population as a standard, found plenty of defects in the local femmes. There was an immediate movement started to stage next year's conveition at Oklahoma City, wherever that is.

* * *

"The Rotarians," moaned Carl Shalit of Detroit, watching the patrol wagons pull away from the Hotel Tnesday night, "are having a better time in Chicago than we are."

J. S. Groves of Dallas and Charles A. Gibbs of Charlotte patronizing the rubber-neck buses. . . . L. J. Miller of Omoha reported to have purchased an interest in the Chicago subway system.

STEVE MONTGOMERY, recently made head of the company's Indianapolis office, related that business in that city is in the doldrums. Publix's Paramount Theatre there, one of the largest in town, Steve said, has closed for the summer.

Three of Tiffany's six specials this year, predicted Carl Goe, assistant sales manager, will surpass "Journey's End" in box office possibilities.

Bill Adwell of N' Awleans has proof that Chicagoans are uncivilized. They take one hour for lunch. In his home town, he says, it's a good way of passing an afternoon.

* * *

Ralph Morrow, southern district supervisor, reported swell business throughout the cotton belt last year with every indication that the new product would hang up an even better record there.

Al Selig crashed the local prints for some good space on the convention happenings.

W. D. Shapiro of Boston and E. H. Strickland of San Francisco had to be restrained from hitting a man who greeted them as brother Rotarians. The Rotary International Convention was in session at the Congress and Stevens Hotels during the Tiffany meeting, which contributed plenty of confusion along the south end of Michigan Avenue, what with 15,000 Rotarians all looking for the same Thing up and down that thoroughfare.

Al Blofson of Philadelphia took it on the chin when the local ball club handed a couple of defeats to the Phillies.

E. J. Hayes of Albany and J. B. Fields of Washington sat through Monday afternoon's sessions with their feet in a pail of ice water and their handkerchiefs ditched in favor of sponges.

FIRST at the banquet table Wednesday night and last to leave was W. C. Gehring of Buffalo, reports Henri Ellman. He added that the same performance held true at the business sessions during the convention, so perhaps the habit isn't such a phoney one, after all.

Allan Moritz of Cleveland denies that the popularity of "Journey's End" in his territory can be accredited to its theme song—"Journey's End, I Love You."

Ben Lourie of New Haven is all pepped up over Tiffany's forthcoming westerns—12 in all. They'll go big in his district, he says, as the Yale undergraduate in particular is strong for "foreign pictures," and everyone in New Haven know that America ends just the other side of the Alleghenys. That guy Lourie must be a Harvard man.

* * *

R. C. Hill of Salt Lake City was just as enthusiastic over the promised westerns. People out his way, he said, are as interested as any one else in seeing what a cowboy looks like. Figure that out.

* * *

J. Lefko of Pittsburgh, in spite of a perfectly clear conscience, said he was afraid to go home until he had rid his clothes of that Peacock Alley scent.

M. A. Hulling of Seattle was among the farthest from home, but from his decorum you might have imagined the whole family had traipsed along with him. But, then, what can you do in Chicago you can't do in Seattle. Or anywhere else for that matter?

* * *

E. S. Olsmith of Kansas City making a bus driver's holiday of it by attending the movies while here.

J. W. Mangham of Atlanta was awarded two pairs of flannel underwear for being the only man at the convention who failed to complain about the heat.

George Almon of Memphis, the gossips say, will ask for a transfer to the company's Chicago office presently. The reason—doesn't like Memphis.

* * *

Abe Fischer of Minneapolis and H. I. Goldman of Boston were the convention's only casualties. Each dislocated a jaw during the screening of one of Tiffany's new animal picture shorts. Laughing, not yawning.

German-Talkers-for-Germany Plan, Geneva Conference Debacle Cause Hitch

Paris—German legislative activity seeking to ban all talkers but those made with domestic capital and the breakdown of the Geneva economic conference threaten the peace of the international patent conference under way here.

Following four days of preliminary skirmishing, the meeting of German and American representatives, gathered under the chairmanship of Will H. Hays, terminated Thursday to be resumed on Monday. In the intervening three days, the German representatives returned to Berlin on private business, the nature of which has not been officially revealed. That it concerns the new "kontingent" regulations has been established by Motion Pictures News.

The preliminaries resulted in a promise requested by the German delegates that statements to the press be withheld until accord has been reached. It is learned, however, that no propositions looking toward a settlement of the patent muddle which is keeping American talkers out of Germany have been advanced to date.

The American group, including Hays, John E. Otterson of Electrical Research Products, Inc.; Charles J. Ross of RCA Photophone, Inc., and John C. Graham, Paramount's European representative, who, in this instance, is representing his own company as well as United Artists, M-G-M, Fox, Educational, Universal, Pathe, RKO, and other producer members of the Hays organization with the exception of Warners, is understood to be considerably disturbed over the new legislative turn which has cropped up in Berlin.

See Patent Accord Nullified

This move would bar out of Germany all talkers except those either produced in Germany or elsewhere with German capital, players and technical staffs. If the law should be enacted, the impression prevails that there would be little gained by settlement of the patent angle. Until now, Warner talkers with German titles super-imposed on the action have been playing throughout Germany by virtue of Warners' defiance of Western Electric and a direct licensing arrangement made with Tobis-Klangfilm.

The Reichstag now is considering a ban of this type of hybrid talker, thereby effectively shutting the market to all but German-made talkers.

The Geneva economic conference, designed to eliminate all forms of artificial trade barriers, originally embraced 19 signatory nations. This week, Poland and Czechoslovakia withdrew and Germany immediately followed. Whether or not the new American tariff is responsible is a question, but indications are that this is the reason.

During the many months that the conference deliberated, the American film in-

Seattle Meeting July 8 To Map Zoning Schedules

Seattle—Exhibitors of this territory have been invited to meet here July 8 under auspices of Allied Amusements of the Pacific Northwest, to discuss plans for zoning of this territory. At the meeting a committee will be named to work with a committee to be chosen by the Seattle Film Board to set schedules for the territory. Miss Lola Gentry, Los Angeles Film Board secretary, was here in connection with the proposed meeting.

Color Firm Formed to Handle Sennett Films

Hollywood—Mack Sennett plans to install a color printer at his Ventura Blvd. studio to turn out product of Mack Sennett Color Film Co., Ltd. The printer is to have a capacity of 280,000 feet weekly. His new company is capitalized at $225,000 and has been authorized to issue $78,000 worth of stock.

"Swing High" on a Grind Policy at Geo. M. Cohan

Pathe has leased the George M. Cohan, New York, for three weeks for showing of "Swing High," which opened Thursday, running continuous. Its picture, "Holiday," has been set in at the Rivoli for a run.

25 Grand Being Paid By 'U' for Eddie Cantor Yarn

Hollywood—Eddie Cantor is reported receiving $25,000 for a comedy original, "Sell at the Top," based on the stock market, from Universal.

Writing Rogers Script

Hollywood—Having finished the dialogue and adaptation of Paramount's "Easy Come—Easy Go," which will feature Leon Errol, Joseph Mankiewicz is writing the adaptation for a collegiate musical comedy for Charles "Buddy" Rogers. The original for the filmusical was written by Herman Mankiewicz.

Enright Stays with W. B.

Hollywood—Ray Enright has signed a new term contract to direct for Warners. His first picture under the agreement will be "Red Hot Cinders," comedy starring Winnie Lightner. Enright has been with Warners for several years.

Plan Toronto Office

Toronto—Tone-O-Graph is to open an office here, according to Lean Rudd.

Co-Op Movement In Screen Field To Halt Battling

Important manufacturers in the screen field will band together in a co-operative sales movement, if negotiations now under way to relieve that branch of the industry from a chaotic condition are successfully consummated.

When sound opened new markets for screens, the field became overrun with fabrics allegedly perfect for sound, and a cut throat competitive war soon developed. As a result, it is understood, old time manufacturers were forced to slash prices beyond actual costs, and those who held to former price levels were near doomed.

The new plan would place sales responsibility in the hands of a new corporation, which would cover the country with single representatives handling the screens of member units, instead of the present plan which now sends at least a half dozen salesmen to distant points to battle for one sale.

Each organization will maintain their separate identities and continue to manufacture the same brand of screen which they now market. Exhibitors will benefit, it is pointed out, by securing the expert advice of the sales representative who would advise on the proper screen for his house.

Beaded Screen, Raven Screen Corp. and others are understood to be favorably inclined toward the new plan.

Rushing the Ax

Trenton, N. J.—Thirty policemen walked out of Prosecutor English's chambers downhearted and disgusted. And all because city authorities threw into the ashcan 800 summonses for "blue" law violations against local theatres and others, after the coppers had been urged to slap every violator hard with a summons.

Sheridan Moved Up; Now Jersey Chief for Fox

Hal Sheridan, a veteran in theatre operation in northern New Jersey, has been appointed district manager of that division for Fox Theatres. The promotion was made by Harry C. Arthur and returns H. M. S. Kendrick, whom Sheridan succeeds, to the home office in New York where he will act as an assistant to Arthur.

Hal Sheridan

Following a period of war service, Sheridan served with Proctor and Walter Reade circuits as a manager. In 1925, he took over management of the Tivoli, Jersey City, for Morris Kutinsky, then operating as the New Jersey Theatrical Enterprises and was general manager of that circuit when Fox Metropolitan acquired it.

Loop Is Arena Of Warner-Fox Theatre Battle

Chicago—Invasion of the first run field here by both Fox and Warners is being anticipated. However, the reported truce on theatre building between Fox and Publix, following a five-year booking deal on Fox product, may result in dropping of plans for a loop house by the latter.

Warners will gain a strong foothold here in August when theatres of the Coston and Federated circuits are taken over. Coston is to be general manager of the theatres, it is understood, and probably will be in charge of future Warner expansion here.

3-Cornered Ohio Fight Centers at Steubenville

Steubenville, O. — The three-cornered fight for supremacy in Ohio is centered here for the time being. Warners have taken over the Olympic and Capitol. Publix has exercised an option on what is known as the Floto property, a strategic location, and intend to erect a theatre building to occupy the entire block. RKO has taken an option on two prominent business locations for theatre purposes.

Canadian Government Not to Interfere With Paramount-Famous Deal Is Belief

Gov't vs. Chains

Raleigh, N. C.—If the decision of the lower court holding the chain store tax law valid is reversed by the state supreme court, before which the matter is now pending, the state will be forced to make refunds of all collected taxes, according to a decision by the commissioner of revenue's department.

Chain store taxes and penalties amounting to $63,445 have been collected to date under the 1929 act (revenue act, section 162), under which a tax of $50 is imposed on each store under the same management and operation, after the first.

Decision to Keep Dominion Firm, Personnel Intact Precludes Action

Ottawa—With Paramount intending to keep the identity and personnel of the Canadian chain intact, there is little likelihood of any molestation from the government in connection with the purchase of Famous Players Canadian Corp. Arthur Cohen, managing director of the Canadian firm, has said there is to be no disturbance of the company's set-up.

Further, the Dominion is in the midst of a Federal election campaign, with the voting to take place July 28, and the political leaders have something else to think about than the activities of a commercial enterprise. The discussion in the Canadian House of Commons, toward the close of the last session, regarding the so-called menace of an American film invasion, is now largely regarded as political eye-wash from party leaders with a view to catching the vote of the rank and file of franchise-holders in the Dominion.

Minority Stockholders Silent

There has been no further pronouncement from the Minority Shareholders' Protective Association, with headquarters at Toronto, since the Paramount-Publix deal was consummated and the minority group has indicated by its subsequent silence that it is willing to accept the inevitable. There is no further talk of film quota laws for Canada, of the enforcement of the Alien Labor Act nor of the continued promotion of the inquiry into the affairs of Famous Players Canadian Corp. under the Combines Investigation Act. J. J. Fitzgibbon, new director of theatre operations for the Canadian chain, visited Ottawa, following the hot rumors, and found all serene.

Farmer John

If you want to take Herb Cruikshank's word for it, this happened at a Hollywood party, relates Sid Skolsky. A group of picture stars were telling what they did in their childhood days.

During the lull in the conversation, John Gilbert started things going by saying: "You boys wouldn't believe it, but my early youth was spent on a farm. Why, I got so that I could do practically anything around a farm."

"Yeh," queried one of the wise listeners, "can you lay an egg?"

"Sure," came back Gilbert. "Did you see my last picture?"

Liberty Prod. to Open 20 Offices; Pollak N. Y. Head

Liberty Prod., headed by M. H. Hoffman and the Halperin brothers, will open 20 exchanges throughout the United States. In some keys, the company will maintain its own offices and in others arrange for physical handling of product by existing exchanges.

Adolph Pollak

Adolph Pollak, who handled Columbia under franchise in the New York area for several years and later sold out when the Brandt organization became a national distributor, will head Liberty's exchange in New York, which will be located in the Film Center Building. He also will supervise offices at Buffalo, Albany, Philadelphia and Washington.

Hollywood Pictures, a local exchange in the metropolitan district, continues as a Pollak enterprise. Liberty will produce 20 talkers for 1930-1931, centering activity on the coast.

3,000-Seat Theatre to Be Built at Davenport

Davenport, Ia.—United Realties will operate the 3,000-seat theatre which is to be part of the theatre and hotel project planned here. The house will be built at Third and Brady Streets. The project involves about $2,000,000.

Loew's Manager Drowned

Cleveland—John Higgins, 23, manager of Loew's Alhambra, was drowned when the boat in which he and three companions were sailing on Lake Erie capsized.

Byrd and His Aides to Help Plug Param't Film

Read Admiral Byrd will aid Paramount in lining up customers for his South Pole film, now playing the Rialto, New York. The explorer will make a personal appearance at the house on Saturday, to be followed later by appearances of key members of his crew.

O'Reilly Premieres

Charles L. O'Reilly opened the Queensboro, Queens Boulevard and Grand St., Elmhurst, L. I., Thursday night. The theatre has been remodeled.

The Flying Shapiro

Vic Shapiro is in New York from Hollywood. Annual vacation stuff to study the skyline.

No more trains, says Vic. He now does all of his transcontinental traveling by air, this trip being his second experience via that method.

Fox Gross May Reach New Total Of $45,000,000

James R. (Jimmy) Grainger, Fox general sales manager, is well on the way to a new record of sales for his company, according to official estimates which anticipate a gross between $45,000,000 and $50,000,000 for the 1930-31 season. Of this total, a substantial amount will be contributed by the foreign sales department, which has representation in practically all countries of the globe. Clayton P. Sheehan is head of this department.

James R. Grainger

The Fox sales department was put well along on the road to a new record for the company through closing of a 100 per cent contract by Paramount Publix.

Clayton P. Sheehan

For the 17 weeks ended April 26, net earnings amounted to $5,722,000 as compared with $3,904,000 for the same period of 1929, or an increase of 46 per cent. The company points out that this increase was made after liberal write-offs of approximately $7,000,000 on negative and positive films for the year 1930.

The Fox gross this year is being swelled appreciably by the deal with Publix, which has booked the Fox product for all of its situations.

Rosenwald Transferred

Cleveland—Ben Rosenwald, formerly with the M-G-M sales force in Pittsburgh, has been transferred to the Cleveland territory.

Ill. Exhibs Mark Time Pending New Protection

considered as second run situations. A key center town (population of 3,000 or over) shall have 14 days' protection over towns smaller than itself within a 10-mile radius; 10 days over those within a 20-mile radius; seven days for 30 miles and five days for 40 miles. This schedule shall apply only to theatres charging the same admission price as those of the key center town.

One extra day of protection shall be afforded the key center for each five cents lower admission price in the smaller town.

Second run houses charging the same admission price as a first run theatre may play a picture 14 days after the first run. An admission five cents less than the first run's plays 21 days after. A 30-cent house plays 45 days after; 25-cent plays 63 days after; 20-cent plays 81 days after; 15-cent plays 95 days after, and 10-cent plays 104 days after first run.

Unfair Advertising Banned

Smaller towns shall not be permitted to advertise a protected picture in public print until the engagement of that picture in the larger town has ended. Second run theatres shall not advertise a second run picture, either inside or outside of the theatre, until the first run engagement has been completed. If this clause is violated the second run theatre will be set back 30 days on the advertised picture without interference with subsequent runs.

In computing protection, two-for-one tickets shall be considered as half the admission price regularly charged and the permanent Chicago zoning committee may re-zone any theatre at any time in instances where this policy is either adopted or abandoned.

Double or triple programs shall not be permitted unless all features on said program shall be over eight months old. (The original proposal stated that such pictures should be one year old. This was later modified by approximately 16 weeks.)

Application of these principles to individual localities and theatres is now being undertaken.

Following the example established by the California re-zoning board, this state, too, will have a permanent zoning committee empowered to re-zone whenever closings or the construction of new theatres alter the existing situation.

Fire at Camera Exchange

Considerable excitement was caused in the Godfrey Building, New York, Monday, when fire broke out in the Ruby Camera Exchange. Considerable damage was done by the blaze, which was of brief duration.

Beaudine Gets Assignment

Hollywood—"Father's Son," adaptation of the Booth Tarkington play, will be directed by William Beaudine. Leon Janney will play the lead. Julian Josephson adapted the play.

Atta Boy, Nils

Hollywood—Nils Asther is taking his art quite seriously these days, according to Florabel Muir, studio scribbler, who nominates Nils as being "one of the handsomest lads in the racket, if one yearns for his style of beauty."

"I believe there is a big future for me in the movies," Asther is credited with saying, "but I'm not going to be in a hurry about cashing in on it. I'm not going to be miscast any more. No more slick-haired parts for me. I hate 'em."

The Scandinavian Valentino declares stoutly that the best thing that ever happened to him was to be freed from his M-G-M contract. "They wanted me to come back for some retakes of 'The Sea Bat'," Nils stated. "My contract had expired and I told them nothing doing. My part was bad enough and I couldn't see how all the retakes in the world could make as bad a picture as that any good."

50 Theatres Under Wing of Louis Marks in New Jersey

Newark—Fifty theatres in northern New Jersey will be under jurisdiction of Louis L. Marks, new general manager of Warner theatres in New Jersey. Marks, with his brother, Meyer, formerly operated the Marlbro and Granada at Chicago. He succeeds Dave Weshner, who becomes director of advertising and publicity for all Warner theatres. Weshner will remain here about two weeks before establishing headquarters in New York.

Melville Brown Hails Revival of Stage Plays

Hollywood—Revival of past successes of the stage is one of the boons of the sound film that is just beginning to be appreciated, according to Melville Brown, R-K-O director, who has just returned from New York where he had an opportunity to scan the list of available plays. Opuses of 10 and 20 years ago, which were thought to have passed into the limbo of yesterday, are being brought out for screen showing, now that the new film medium is able to present them in suitable form, he points out.

Series of New Tie-ups On Paramount Films

Paramount has completed a new deal for tie-ups on Philco radios. The arrangement calls for a hook-up on one picture a month, starting in August. The hook-ups began with "The Love Parade" and continued on several other pictures. A new 24-sheet posting arrangement, calling for posting in 200 cities by Aug. 1, has been arranged.

Company Formed to Make English, Italian Films

Sacramento, Cal.—Italio-American Pictures, Los Angeles, has been incorporated to make talkers in English and foreign tongues. The company, which is capitalized at $100,000, has as its directors Alberto Guglielmi Valentino, Victor R. Hansen, Fred C. Windermere and George H. Bowles.

Breakdown of Patent Confab Is Threatened

dustry was sanguine that the move would become fact, thereby eliminating the burden of quota laws. That dream is now shattered.

In some inside circles in New York, Erich Pommer, Ufa production executive in Berlin, is regarded as the behind-the-scenes figure in the proposed German legislative restrictions.

Pommer, long head of the Ufa studios at Neubabelsberg, was brought to this country several years ago as a producer for Paramount. At a Paramount sales convention held following his arrival, Jesse L. Lasky lauded Pommer and his producing capabilities to a point, which, it was then reported, Ben Schulberg, head of the coast studio for the Zukor organization, resented.

Regardless of the truth or otherwise of the report, it is a fact that Pommer's tenure as associate producer was short-lived, and that, after an association at M-G-M, he returned to Ufa and Berlin.

Those who are familiar with the situation now are inclined to place credence in the report that Pommer is moving in retaliation against the American industry and is taking the legislative by-lane to bring this about.

Towne Comes East

Hollywood—Having disposed of his fifth original story in three months, Gene Towne, author-scenarist, has gone to New York to confer with Otto Warnack, regarding the presentation of a stage play. The latter is a newcomer to Broadway's producing ranks.

Witmark Plans Rest

Jay Witmark has resigned as vice-president and general manager of M. Witmark & Sons, Warner music publishing subsidiary. He is planning an extended rest.

Lasky Goes to Coast

Survey of production activities at the Paramount studio is planned by Jesse L. Lasky, who now is on his customary summer visit at the studio.

Will Likes B. & K.'s $9,000 Per Week; Needs Polo Pony

Los Angeles—"I haven't got any ambition bein' here except the money," declared Will Rogers as he stepped off the Twentieth Century this week to fill a seven days' engagement on the stage of B. & K.'s Chicago theatre. This is reputed to be the first time Rogers has ever appeared in person at a movie theatre.

"Look," he continued. "They're goin' to pay me $9,000 for one week here." He paused, mentally tasting the amount. "Gee!" he smiled, "that's a lot of money."

His sailor straw hat was pushed to the back of his head. He chewed a liberal helping of spearmint (?) with evident satisfaction.

"Tell you the truth, though, I need that money. The wife said I couldn't have a new polo pony and I said, 'Like fun I can't, I'll go earn some money of my own'."

"What do you think of the Chicago gangsters?" some one asked.

"Tell you," Rogers frowned. "I ain't goin' to talk about Chicago gangsters because I once wrote a piece for the papers myself and I don't want any free transportation of the kind they furnish. Like I used to say when I was in the South, 'I'll joke about Coolidge and the senate but I never say anything about the Ku Klux Klan because I don't fancy being massaged with tar.'

"But it's nice to be appearing here instead of Boston, where I just was. I had to keep thinking about the Watch and Ward society every time I opened my mouth."

Rogers stroked a shock of hair that drooped across his forehead as the interrogation switched to politics. Would he be a presidential candidate in the next election?

"No," he replied. "I ain't figurin' on runnin' for president at the next election and neither is Morrow from all I can gather. But if we both do, I'll withdraw in favor of the senator. I was just over to see Morrow yesterday. He's a lovely little feller and deserves all his popularity. Say, he's so popular he could have run as a Democrat and won the election. He could of won as a dry atheist.

"The tariff?" he replied to a question. "Don't know much about the new tariff except that it ain't in favor of me because I ain't got anything to sell. I don't think any of the senators know anything about it either, except what they read in the papers. It was just a good day for passing things so they decided to pass it.

"Well, say, fellers, write me a letter. It's gettin' late and I have to go over to the Sherman and change my gum before the show. I wanta see Gen. Dawes, too. If he's in favor of the World's Fair here so am I. Dawes is a swell feller and treated me royal when I was in London."

Rogers, it is now apparent, will get his new polo pony. The Chicago was grossing better than $9,000 a day during the early part of the week, a sensational pace for the house.

With him, on the Century, was George Jessel, Hollywood-bound for some picture work.

Salesman's Code Now Operating in Chicago Region

Chicago—Film [illegible] are [illegible] governed now by the code of ethics drafted by the Film Board, in what is expected to prove a model plan for the nation. The experiment is being watched with interest by distributors with a view to possible adoption in other territories.

Following are the ten rules of conduct drafted for salesmen of the territory:

1. Respect your competitor's application for contracts and approved contracts. By doing so you are respecting the contracts of your own company.
2. Do not discuss legal phases of other distributors' contracts with an exhibitor.
3. Remember that you are representing the third largest industry in the world. Conduct yourself accordingly.
4. Do not be a scandalmonger.
5. Observe the credit committee rules to the letter. The days of trickery are over.
6. Remember that a contract today is a legal document that must pass the approval of a court.
7. Under no circumstances enter into any oral side understandings. If a written agreement must be made other than contained in the contract, be sure to keep a copy for your manager's approval.
8. Remember that we have a copyright bureau and no verbal agreements should be made concerning additional exhibition dates or towns other than specified in the contract.
9. Report to your manager any case of bicycling by an exhibitor, whether it be your company's product or that of another distributor. It is a violation of business ethics not to report the same, and it is for the best interests of the industry that it be reported.
10. These rules are made to protect your future in this business and their observance will benefit you.

Business Tonic Sought By Seattle Exhibitors

Seattle—As a tonic to stimulate weakened grosses at local box offices, two first run down-town theatres attempted to lure extra patronage by sponsoring contests for patrons.

John Hamrick, Music Box, offered $200 in prizes for the best 100-word letters from amateur critics after they saw "Courage" at his theatre. The picture ran only one week and it is a question whether or not the contest brought enough added business to the theatre to warrant the $200 expenditure.

At the Fox Fifth Avenue a more elaborate contest was being staged through the co-operation of "The Seattle Post-Intelligencer" and the American Mail Steamship Lines. Each week six varied still photographs are being flashed on the theatre screen and the person who identifies correctly the six pictures each week for four weeks will receive free a 55-day trip to the Orient on an American Mail Liner. The pictures shown weekly include Oriental scenes and one film star.

Sound Censorship Halts Development Of Industry In Italy And Belgium

Mussolini's Eagle Eye Watches Dialogue in Italy, Where Foreign Talk Is Taboo

Washington—Mussolini's dictatorship has all but killed the film industry in Italy, where Il Duce has posted an iron ruling prohibiting many types of pictures from entering the country. Sound is unable to make a foothold because of a general veto which extends to all talking films in languages other than Italian.

The U. S. Dept. of Commerce M. P. Division, in its survey of European film conditions, fourth installment of which appears herewith, points out that efforts are being made to get around the language bar by superimposing Italian on certain films.

Censorship of sound is a great obstacle to future development in Belgium, too, according to the survey, while conditions are at a standstill in the Netherlands, because of sound, it is stated.

In Denmark exhibitors have found no material increase in attendance after sound installations, an unusual condition and one which is contrary to the general rule throughout Europe. Norway is awaiting further sound developments before proceeding to expand, states the government report.

Full details of the survey covering these five countries follow:

Theatre Building Checked

Washington — In most European countries, except key centers such as London, Paris and Berlin, construction of new theatres has been practically halted, due, chiefly, to a desire to determine just what trend should be followed with sound.

In Italy, there was one new house erected in all of 1929; Belgium built only ten, the Netherlands four, none in Denmark and not a single house in Norway. Sound installations progressed comparatively as slowly as construction.

ITALY

By MOWATT M. MITCHELL
American Commercial Attache, Rome

One of the handicaps on the Italian film trade is the severity of the censor board in dealing with practically every class of film. The general veto which extends to all talking films in any language other than Italian and which extended at one time also even to song in foreign-language films has, to some extent, discouraged theatre owners from installing apparatus for the projection of such films.

Films dealing with modern Russian life, no matter where produced, which tend to extol communistic theories are absolutely taboo, and in the case of certain Russian films which eventually were projected, they were so cut as not only to have eliminated all objectionable matter, but also to make even the plot entirely garbled. This ruling has recently been somewhat modified.

An effort is being made to get around the regulation proscribing talking films in a foreign language by superimposing Italian on certain films, but opposition is being raised even to that, it being claimed that the Italian language is made ridiculous when evidently uttered by a foreigner masking as an Italian. However, certain of the more tenacious importers are arranging for this superimposing of Italian on such films and, in the case of a rather unusual British film, hope to prevail upon the censor board to pass that particular picture.

It would appear that during 1929 only one new cinema was erected in Italy. This particular theatre is situated at Milan, has a seating capacity of 2,500, and is called the Odeon. No information is available regarding reconstructed cinemas during the year.

From reliable information it appears that 51 theatres have been equipped with sound apparatus, although their location and seating capacity are not known. American apparatus is installed in 25 of them, Melovox (French) in 18, Gaumont (French) in six, and Pio Pion (Italian) in two. The Italian apparatus sells at about 60,000 lire ($3,152).

With the present lack of organization and the general unpopularity of Italian films, it is not surprising that production should be on an exceedingly small scale. In fact, during 1929 only four films were produced in Italy, all silent. The average cost of these was about $25,000. Augustus Films produced 1, A. D. I. A. (Association Direttore Italiani) 1, and Supreme-film 2.

The Cines studio of Rome is the only studio equipped for the production of modern films.

During the year, 806 films were presented to the censor board. There were 244 American feature films, of which 47 were with sound; and 207 foreign features, all silent. Of the news reels, comics, etc., not over 500 meters, 157 were American, of which 103 were with sound; and 98 were foreign, all silent; of those from 500 to 1,000 meters, 80 were American, of which 10 were with sound, and 20 were foreign, of which one was with sound. In no case was a silent version presented with the sound production.

American Films Dominate

American films dominate the Italian trade; in some cases American films run for two or three weeks, which is not true of foreign films. Beyond the difficulties touched upon, caused by the zeal of the censor board, no regulations appear to be proposed which will injure or affect American films in Italy.

It will probably be some time before most of even the larger Italian cinemas are equipped with sound equipment. The general dislike of the public for dialogue or song films and their general continued preference for the orchestra and its music keep the installation of such sound apparatus from being an imperative necessity. Before the taste of Italian audiences changes, it is thought that better and less expensive machines will be put on the market.

The introduction of sound apparatus in Italy naturally created a certain stir, mingled with curiosity. It is now some time since the sound film was first presented to an Italian audience. While it was a great attraction at the beginning, it would not be true to say unreservedly that sound films are liked or appreciated by Italians. American engineers and others who have installed sound apparatus are perhaps too inclined to the statement that Italian theatre owners do not know how to present the new pictures. There may be some truth in this, but the general criticism, on the part of Italians, as a whole, is that sound films are unnatural, the voice reproduction poor, and the musical effects unsuited to the taste of Italians.

BELGIUM

By LUCIAN PUTNAM
Sec'y to Commercial Attache, Brussels

During 1929, ten new cinemas were constructed in Belgium, thus increasing the number of existing seats by about 7,000, and two were improved, adding about 1,000 seats. It is announced that the Olympia of Brussels will be transformed into a picture house during the course of 1930. A rumor is also spreading that offers have been made by an important film-producing company to buy the Alhambra, also of Brussels, which is the largest theatre in the city.

During 1929 the following motion picture houses were equipped with sound apparatus:

	Seats
Coliseum (Brussels)	1,200
Cameo (Brussels)	800
Trianon (Brussels)	450
Victoria (Brussels)	700
Monnaie (Brussels)	800
Agora (Brussels)	2,000
Scala (Brussels)	1,000
Eldorado (Charleroi)	1,100
Rialto (Ostend)	1,000
Coliseum (Liege)	1,100
Palace (Liege)	2,000

The sound equipment in these theatres is of American manufacture.

Five films were made in Belgium during 1929; only one was a sound film. The total cost of the films produced is estimated to be around 2,000,000 francs (about $278,000). The four silent films produced are mostly on patriotic subjects.

The principal producer in Belgium is Lux Films (G. Schoukens), whose studio is located in the Boulevard de Nieuport, Brussels. The films produced are of no importance on the world market and are of local interest only. However, the sound film produced, called "La Famille Klepkens," may be projected in France. This film is the first sound film produced in Belgium and was shown for the first time at the Coliseum on Jan. 17, 1930, in the presence of members of the royal family. The principal item of interest is the language spoken by the actors, a mixture of so-called Belgian-French and Flemish, which limits the market for the picture to Belgium and certain parts of France. The picture was taken partly in Belgium and partly in Paris, and the sound version was made in a Paris studio. This film will have three versions—a silent one, one in French, and one in Flemish.

There was no production of sound short subjects in Belgium during 1929. There are no Belgium studios equipped for sound film production.

During 1929 approximately 700 new films were censored for release in Belgium; 70 per cent of them were American, 15 per cent German, 10 per cent French, and 5 per cent Belgian.

During 1929, 17 sound films were projected in Belgium. Of these 16 were American films, the other one being "Les Trois Masques," a French film produced by Pathé-Natan. The American films also appeared in silent versions. (Continued on page 61)

Belgium Exhibs Peeved Over High Taxation

The motion picture business in Belgium was satisfactory during 1929, although the people operating cinemas complained bitterly about the taxes levied. The prestige of American production was well maintained throughout the year, particularly for the sound film, which was the outstanding feature of the market.

Up to the present time, sound films have met with great success in Belgium. However, many Belgians do not understand English, and sound versions in English may be less popular when the first curiosity craze is finished. The American distributors very much fear the competition of French sound films in 1930. It is reported that 18 French films are in preparation and will undoubtedly be projected in Belgium. The American distributors also fear that if American firms do not produce French sound films, much ground will be lost on the Belgian market. They think that 1930 will not be as favorable for silent films as 1929, as the demand for sound films is steadily increasing. However, in several centers of the Flemish part of the country the market for silent films will not suffer greatly, as Flemish sound films are not likely to be produced, and neither French nor English can be understood by the people.

50 Installations Expected

It is estimated that during 1930, 50 more cinemas will be equipped for the projection of sound films.

The trend toward equipping cinemas in the provinces with sound film apparatus is becoming marked. Charleroi and Ostend each have one theatre now equipped for sound films, Liege two, and plans are under way whereby Antwerp will have several in the near future. However, any great development of sound film projection appears to be hampered by the high price of American equipment.

There are no indications of studios being fitted with sound equipment in the near future.

There is no legislation inimical to the interests of American films in view. New legislation, principally for reduction of taxes paid by the theatres, may be expected in 1930, since such reductions have been proposed in the general tax programs submitted at the end of 1929.

The film distributors are starting a campaign against the censoring of sound films on the grounds that children of 14 years of age can go to any legitimate theatre where no censorship exists as long as the plays are not essentially objectionable on moral grounds. They also state that because of the fact that certain picture houses project their films with discs obtained from other sources, the distributors can not undertake any responsibility if such discs are not irreproachable. The distributors claim they will start a press campaign if they do not receive favorable treatment in this connection from the censor organization.

THE NETHERLANDS

By PAUL S. GUINN
Acting Commercial Attache, The Hague

The outstanding development in the Netherland motion picture situation in 1929 was the advent of the sound film. Sound apparatus was first installed in a theatre in Amsterdam in May, 1929, and a tabulation made early in December showed that 57 theatres in most of the principal cities and towns are now so equipped, while it is anticipated that installations in provincial theatres beyond first-run houses will, in the near future, considerably increase this total.

British Firms Combine

London—Audible Filmcraft, Ltd., has been formed to combine International Screen Prod. and British Screen Prod. Argosy, and British Filmcraft will be invited to join the combination, states George Pearson.

Four new theatres, with a total capacity of 2,350 seats, were constructed in 1929. These are Watergraafsmeer, Amsterdam, 300; Over t IJ, Amsterdam, 400; Van Oss, Nijmegen, 600; and Feijenoord, Rotterdam, 1,050. One cinema of 400 seats (Heerengracht, The Hague) has been converted from a legitimate theatre, while reconstructed theatres account for an additional 400 seats, so that the total seating capacity has been advanced by 3,150 seats. These reconstructed theatres are the Roxy, Amsterdam, of 550 seats; the De Kroon, Zwolle, seating capacity of which was increased from 300 to 550; the Palace, Haarlem, seating capacity of which was increased from 600 to 750; the Veendam of 300 seats; and the Helmond and Assen, also of 300 seats each. These two latter were damaged by fire and were rebuilt.

Home Production Nil

Sound apparatus of domestic production dominates the market, accounting for 45 out of the total of 57 installations. Of these 45, thirty are Loetafoon, 10 Nillson, three meulkens, one Kesslerphone, and one Asta National. In addition, there are five of American manufacture, five Tobis (German), one Naturetone, and one Rommofone, the two latter being English.

The Netherlands does not have any well-developed motion picture production industry, only two feature films having been produced during the year by local enterprises, dealing primarily with the Netherland East Indies. The first of these, known as "Maha Cyclus," was put out by the Polygon company at Haarlem, and the other, "With Willy Mullens Through the Netherland East Indies," was made by Willy Mullens of The Hague. They were both silent films.

Little or no progress has as yet been made in the production of sound short subjects, although it is rumored that the Willy Mullens concern is planning a sound studio.

U. S. Films in Lead

The number of feature films censored in the country during 1929 is placed at around 700, out of which about 600 were American. About 80 feature films with sound were censored, and a silent version accompanied most of these. Nearly all of the sound films were produced in the United States. According to the Central Film Censorship Committee of the Netherland Government, 3,003 films, totaling 2,255,350 meters in length, were censored during 1929. The division of these by country of origin is not given.

As a whole, the year was favorable for the film trade, although the summer season was particularly bad. Trade opinion considers that the sound films already shown have been favorably accepted by the public, more especially the singing, dancing, and talking type, and are generally well understood with the aid of superimposed titles. While the sound film is still somewhat of a novelty, the trade is generally confident of its future. Higher prices are obtained for these films, and it is anticipated that they will account for considerable financial returns in the future. Practically all houses in the country want sound equipment, and it is believed that even the provincial theatres will soon be wired.

As far as can be ascertained, there are no particular production plans for 1930, although, as indicated, one concern is reported to be contemplating a sound studio.

No legislation inimical to American films was passed during the year.

Outlook for Danish Market Looks Dubious

By P. H. PEARSON
Ass't Trade Commissioner, Copenhagen

The outstanding development in the Danish motion picture industry during 1929 was the introduction of the sound film. However, the expectations and hopes linked to this development were not fulfilled, and despite the advent of this innovation, the year can be characterized as a rather unsatisfactory one for the Danish industry.

Only meager statistical material covering the entire year is available as yet, but from the data on hand it can be seen that the earnings of the Danish motion picture theatres during 1929 registered a decrease compared with the earnings during 1928. The income of the Copenhagen cinemas during the first half of 1929 amounted to 3,200,000 crowns ($857,600), while during the corresponding period of 1928 the receipts totaled 3,700,000 crowns ($991,600), a decline of about 13.5 per cent. This drop in revenue was caused to some extent by the fact that several of the largest houses were closed for some time to permit the installation of sound equipment. These installations have been very expensive, a feature of which the saving occasioned by the fact that an orchestra is no longer needed has made little impression.

Furthermore, the trade states that the new films have not been the causes of any material increase in attendance. Also, owing to the fact that it has been difficult to book a sufficient number of sound-film releases, the wired theatres have been forced to show silent films intermittently and thus at times have been burdened with the additional expense of orchestras. The result is, therefore, that while the receipts have registered a decline, the expenses of some of the houses have registered an increase. This circumstance, on top of the burdensome taxes which are exacted, makes the financial problem a difficult one. As no sudden change is expected, the outlook for 1930 does not appear bright.

Theatres Seat 140,000

There are about 400 motion picture theatres in Denmark, of which only about 270 operate daily. The total seating capacity of the houses is estimated at 140,000. In Copenhagen there are 37 theatres with a total seating capacity in the neighborhood of 30,000. No new houses were opened during 1929, nor were any reconstructed during the year.

There are 18 theatres equipped with sound apparatus, of which nine are located in Copenhagen and nine in the larger provincial towns. Fifteen of the wired houses are fitted with apparatus of American origin, while three of the systems are of Danish origin, the Petersen & Poulsen equipment. The installations are all adaptable to synchronized as well as nonsynchronized films, and thus can be employed for the creation of sounds in connection with the projection of silent films. The following list

Little Production Last Year

Danish production of silent films during 1929 was small, as was also true of earlier years, and was confined to two features, both of which were produced by the A. S. Palladium of Copenhagen. The production cost of each of these films is estimated at approximately 200,000 crowns ($53,600). No extensive production is planned for 1930.

The Danish sound film industry at present is not very far advanced, and production to date has been confined to a few one-reel subjects consisting of songs and short talks in which only local artists appear. The future of this branch of the Danish industry is not thought to be particularly promising, as the domestic market is not of sufficient size to warrant the expense involved in the production of feature films, and there is little demand for Danish-dialogue films outside of Denmark. It is expected that Danish sound film production during 1930 will be limited to a single feature and a few one-reel subjects.

The only Danish film company which possesses a studio equipped for sound film production is the A. S. Nordisk Tonefilm, Mosedalsvej, Copenhagen, which was organized shortly after the Nordisk Film A. S. discontinued operations in 1928. The new company, which recently increased its capital to 2,000,000 crowns ($536,000) in order to extend its activities in the field of sound film production, has rented the vacated studios of the Nordisk Film A. S. where the Petersen and Poulsen system of recording has been installed. This system is based on the disc principle.

Germany Close U. S. Competitor

The statistics of the Danish censor's office are compiled for fiscal years ending March 31. According to the records of that office, there were 1,656 films, of a total length of 1,654,194 meters, exhibited during the fiscal year 1928-29. Of the total, 46 were sound films and, of these, all feature sound films were American-made. There were 545 feature films shown and 959 sketches. The United States is far ahead as regards both the number of films supplied and their total length, and during the fiscal year accounted for almost 58 per cent of the aggregate number and approximately 8 per cent of the total meterage.

The domestic industry, although it ranks second in point of the number of films exhibited, with 27 per cent of the total to its credit, is not of great importance as a supplier, as the aggregate length of the Danish films exhibited amounted to but 69,079 meters, or only four per cent of the total. Germany offers the most important competition to the United States in the Danish film trade, and for the reported year its share represented slightly over six per cent of the total number and 14 per cent of the total length. France followed, with a little over four per cent of the number and six per cent of the length. The table which follows indicates the country of origin of the films shown in Denmark during the fiscal year 1928-29, their number, length, and the percentage of each supplied by each country.

FILMS CENSORED IN DENMARK IN 1928-29

Country of Origin	Number	Per cent of Total	Meters	Per cent of Meterage
United States	955	57.7	1,123,625	67.9
Denmark	452	27.3	69,079	4.2
Germany	106	6.4	238,445	14.4
France	71	4.3	101,535	6.6
England	27	1.6	57,115	3.4
Russia	16	1.0	41,515	2.4
Sweden	14	.8	15,925	.8
Norway	10	.6	3,945	.2
Italy	5	.3	3,010	.1
Total	1,656	100.0	1,654,194	100.0

Very little statistical material is available for the period since April 1, 1929. However, 424 films were distributed between April 1 and August 31. Of the total, 237 were American, 69 Danish, 67 German, 28 French, 15 English, four Swedish, two Norwegian, and two Russian. During the same five months 27 sound films were shown, 17 of American origin. During the remaining four months of 1929 an additional 73 sound films were exhibited, making a total of 100 sound films shown from April 1 to Dec. 31, 1929.

1929 a Year of Depression

The Danish motion picture situation in 1929, as already mentioned, may be characterized as rather depressed. Owing to the high entertainment tax, amounting to 40 per cent of the gross income, in addition to a license tax and the usual governmental taxes, such as income, etc., profits of the theatres have not been as large as might be desired, and some theatre owners are said to be faced with financial difficulties. American films continue to be preferred by the public, and the American "talkie" has been the most important feature of the year. However, local exhibitors state that while the sound film met with favorable reception when first introduced, attendance has fallen off, as the curiosity of the public has been satisfied and their interest has waned.

The foreign talking films are handicapped by the fact that only a small minority of the public understands English. Although the sound-without-dialogue films have no linguistic difficulties to overcome, the trade states that there is a noticeable preference for music furnished by regular theatre orchestras as opposed to the music accompanying a sound film.

The fact that only 18 out of 270 theatres so far have installed sound equipment indicates that the development of this innovation is rather slow. A factor contributing to this slowness is the common belief that the purchase price of the installation is much too high and will soon decline. Those that have fitted their theatres with sound equipment state that they have not received the monetary benefits which were expected. Among the reasons advanced for the unfavorable returns is the fact that it seems to be rather difficult for local motion picture theatres to book a sufficient number of sound film releases. This means that they must show silent films intermittently, which necessitates engaging an orchestra and thus incurring an expense which the installation of the sound equipment should have saved them.

No legislation inimical to the interests of American films has been passed, but the American sound apparatus, since its introduction, has been the object of a good deal of comment. Local press articles at first devoted their complaints solely to the price question, and Danish cinema owners and others expressed the belief that the price involved an unreasonable profit to the American manufacturers. After the introduction of the Danish machines, additional articles appeared in which it was claimed that the American sound film producers were attempting to keep Danish machines out of the market by stipulating as a condition that American sound films must be projected by American machines, and at the present time this question is the subject of controversy.

Construction at A Standstill in All of Norway

NORWAY

By MARQUARD H. LUND
American Commercial Attache, Oslo

No new cinemas were constructed in Norway during 1929. The old Admiral Palads in Oslo, with 900 seats, was reconstructed for sound film equipment and the seating capacity increased to 1,400. It is now called the Eldorado.

Four American sound installations were made during the year, two of which are in Oslo—one in the Eldorado and the other in the Coloseum, with a seating capacity of 2,200. In addition, the Verdensteatret in Trondhjem, seating capacity 1,200, and the Bibliotek in Fredrikstad, seating capacity 800, were equipped with American sound apparatus.

The German Klangfilm equipment has been installed in the Paladsteatret in Oslo; this is a trial installation, subject to approval. It is not being operated at present, owing to mechanical difficulties. A German engineer is expected to remedy the trouble. A Bergen theatre has also purchased a Klangfilm installation.

Nordisk Tonfilm, a Danish concern making the Poulsen and Petersen equipment, has made an installation in the Parkbiograf in Skien. Another is to be made in the Boulevard, Oslo, on a trial basis. The Nordisk Tonfilm equipment is said to be particularly well suited for theatres of small size. Its approximately cost is 12,500 crowns ($3,350).

The Glomen Komune has installed an apparatus of American make in its Rode Molle theatre.

Three feature films were produced in Norway during 1929—"Laila," "Froken Statsadvokat" and "Selvigs Norgesfilm." These are silent films. The cost of "Laila" is estimated at 290,000 crowns ($77,720), the cost of the other two is not known. "Laila" was made by Lundefilm, and the other two privately. No short sound subjects were produced during 1929, but it is expected that a beginning along this line will be made in 1930. A short sketch was produced in Copenhagen during December with Norwegian artists, which was scheduled to have its première in Oslo about Jan. 15, 1930.

"Froken Statsadvokat" is now playing in Oslo, but has not proven very popular. "Laila" had a very big run all over Norway, and is to be shown in the United States also. "Selvigs Norgesfilm" is purely a scenic film, intended partly for publicity purposes in foreign countries.

There are no studios in Norway for either silent or sound film production.

The Statens Filmkontrol censored 825 films during 1929. Of these, 337 were released for actual showings, 216 of which were American.

High and Low On Music Row

If memory serves me anything, Robbins Music Corp. should find at least one "natural" included in the first contribution of Jimmy McHugh-Dorothy Fields songs to M-G-M's forthcoming nicker, "Like Kelly Can." This pair of tunesters has written seven (which in itself is a "natural," ask dad; he knows) songs which are, "Opening Chorus," "I'm Learning a Lot from You," "I'm Doing That Thing," "Go Home and Tell Your Mother," "Like Kelly Can," "One More Waltz" and "Dance, Fool, Dance." Elmore White has recently relinquished the general managership of Davis, Coots and Engel and a 10% share in the business, to succeed George Piantadosi as professional manager of Robbins.

Pat Flaherty, at a preview of "Man Trouble" at Movietone City, became so enthused over the possibilities of several songs in the score that he promptly called Charlie Harrison at the New York quarters of Red Star Music Co. to put on the rave. "Pick Yourself Up, Brush Yourself Off," "What's the Use of Living" and "You Do, Don't You?" written by Joseph McCarthy and Jimmy Hanley, are responsible for the expensive tete a tete.

Professor Jean Richtera of Paris has discovered that vegetables vocalize and that by placing various vegetables before a sensitive microphone one can hear real symphonic-like music. The lads, frequenting the balconies of our theatres in the dear departed past, must have known this because now it can readily be seen that their missiles of the garden patch were just another way of saying "Hey, Ham, listen to these and hear real music."

M. Witmark & Sons will publish "Miss Waltz" and "Hullabaloo," written by Dubin and Burke and O'Keefe and Dolan, respectively, for the Warner comedy, "Dancing Sweeties." Sam Serwer says, "Keep your eyes on 'Hullabaloo.' It's in the bag."

When it comes to getting radio plugs, we take our hat off to Al Woods, Gene Austin's "crooning song plugger." Due to Al's activities, "Be Careful with Those Eyes," a Gene Austin number, was included in the list of the ten most frequently played songs on the air for the past seven weeks. Nuf sed.

Sammy Lerner and Burton Lane are responsible for "My Real Ideal" from Shubert's "Artists and Models," published by Harms, and "As Long as You're Near Me," which Remick is exploiting. Lerner is manager of the organ slide department at DeSylva, Brown & Henderson.

Joe Davis is all het up over Andy Razaf's "On Revival Day," a negro spiritual which already has clicked with orchestra maestros. Davis has also issued a new-priced dance folio, containing 20 songs and retailing at 20 cents. Other publishers are planning price reductions in order to stimulate music sales.

We ran into Al Bryan this week and he did not seem to be enthusiastic about the theme song situation on the Coast. He is glad to be back and intends to free lance. Before leaving us he said, "There are plenty of contracts that will never be renewed on expiration."

PINCUS

"We'll Get the Films We Want" —Mrs. Winter

Denver—"What we really want, we don't have," is the motto for chiswomen advanced by Mrs. Alice Ames Winter, a member of the public relations committee of the producers' association and liaison officer between the Hays organization and the nation's clubwomen, told the General Federation of Women's Clubs at its meeting here.

"We, the mass, are the judge, jury and dictator," Mrs. Winter declared. "The producer, by the very terms of his business, is obliged to fall in step with us and give us what we want—if we make him understand what we want." Fluidity, she said, is the most remarkable thing about the industry.

"Sound and color and new camera inventions jostle each other every day," she said. "They are changing everything while we talk. They are not mere additions to an art, plastered on its outside, but they are changing the kinds of topics that can be filmed and every detail of how they shall be filmed."

Indiana Endorsers Plan Fourth of July Pageant

Indianapolis—Plans have been started for the annual Fourth of July celebration sponsored each year by the Indianapolis Indorsers of Photoplays. The party this year will be held in the morning at the Palace here. Mrs. Clarence Finch is general director. Patriotic organizations will decorate the theatre. The affair is given for all school children and their parents, war veterans, members of the G. A. R. and all patriotic organizations. A pageant will be shown and a motion picture viewed.

Special Women's Prices At Toledo First Run

Toledo—The Vita-Temple has organized the Business Women's Club, with an enrollment to date of around 10,000, composed of workers in local factories to whom Manager Jack O'Connell issues membership cards entitling holders to admission to his theatre-after working hours at 25 cents, which is one-half of the regular admission charge.

Brewer Manages Connollee

Eastland, Tex.—J. E. Brewer of Oklahoma City has taken over the management of the Connollee here.

Rialto Reduces Prices

Crowell, Tex.—The Rialto has reduced Friday and Saturday night admission prices from 25 and 50 cents to 15 and 35 cents.

Urling Building Another

Steubenville, O.—W. B. Urling, operating the Rex here, is building a new house which is to have a seating capacity of 800. Completion is scheduled for middle of August.

Before the "Mike" In N. Y. Studios

IT LOOKS like Nancy Carroll will not have time to [illegible] at the Paramount New York studio, with Frederick March, Frank Morgan, Diana Ellis and Glen Anders featured under the direction of H. D'Abbadie D'Arrast, who also wrote the [illegible] "Animal Crackers," is handling the photography.

Y'oughta pipe the pajamas Frank Morgan flashed during his Santa Claus act. (He gave Nancy a bracelet.) Getting back to those pajamas, it's a good thing that the pajama fad is not in vogue this summer. Yeh, they were green.

And so down to the restaurant for our noonday repast and our first reports of the Silver Lady. "What lines," said one of the assistant directors. "What a figure," said another. "Some baby," sighed Joe Ruttenberg. Well, enough is too much, so we ups to the main stage to take a look at this creature. What we saw made us yell "Foul." Instead of a chicken we learned that the Silver Lady was the name of the yacht featured in Buddy Rogers' new picture "Heads Up" under Victor Schertzinger's direction.

George Dewey Washington, colored warbler, is slated to make another short under the direction of Ray Cozine. Cozine has recently completed "While the Captain Waits," starring Armida, the Mexican, and "New Rythm," featuring the Havana Casino Orchestra.

New arrivals at the Paramount New York studios are Howard Bretherton, director, who will work on a production not yet announced, Carol Lombard, the wise-cracking lady of Buddy Rogers' "Safety In Numbers," who is to appear in the cast of "The Best People" under Fred Newmeyer's direction, and a trio of scenarists, Herman Mankiewicz, Sid Silvers and Paul Gangelin.

Found. A husband who can dictate to his wife as to what to do and how to do it. Lost. The illusion that such a man never lived. We have reference to Arthur Hurley, director at the Eastern Vitaphone studio who directed Irene Shirley, stage actress, in "Lost and Found." Even a Philo Vance could see that Miss Shirley was none other than Mrs. Arthur Hurley. Wallace Sullivan and Stanley Rauh wrote this variety.

Believe it or not, there is one fellow who does not crave "a big hand." He's got a big enough pair, as he demonstrated by picking up twelve regular-sized biliard balls with one hand. "Rubber-face" Sullivan and the man who can coax music from tree leaves are the others whom Robert L. Ripley, the cartoonist, introduces in the fourth of his "Believe It Or Not" series.

Leo Donnelly is singing a new song, "Tonsorial Blues." Leo shaved bright and early one morning and headed for the Eastern Vitaphone studio where he was to make "Stepping Out." Upon arriving there after a hectic multi-stop flight on the subway, he was told to step out and shave again. When he learned that several scenes were to be shot on Riverside Drive, Donnelly wanted to know if he'd need a haircut by the time the unit got there.

THE STUDIO SLEUTH.

G-r-r-r!

Phil Baker's crack in "Artists and Models": "Warner Brothers and the National Biscuit Co. have formed a merger to produce talking animal crackers."

An Uproar on Opera

The big productions of the future probably will be grand opera. Take this tip from "Judge," which warns that "the grand opera talkie will be hard on the customer, but it will destroy forever the romantic sanctity that has frightened the public away from opera."

"The opera libretto is much sillier than the ordinary movie story" (which shows how much "Judge" knows about motion pictures).

"The Metropolitan tenors rank with the most wretched actors in the world," (and again we take exception to the publication). However, this sheet charges the movie customer with being "dumb," but "he will prefer a Chaliapin and a Jeritza to a Martinelli or Galli-Curci."

Torrence in "River's End"

Hollywood — David Torrence has been cast in Warners' "River's End." Dorothy Mackaill has the feminine lead.

Haines Title Changed

Hollywood—"Way Out West" has been set as release title of William Haines' latest picture directed by Fred Niblo. Working title was "Easy Going," from original story by Byron Morgan and Al Block.

Nevada, Ia.—W. P. Grossman, who sold the Palace here to L. F. Martin, does not intend to retire but, instead, is seeking another house.

New Onawa, Ia., House

Onawa, Ia.—Frandsen & Weeks, operators of the Opera House here, are building a 600-seat house.

New Pathe Director

Hollywood—Ray McCarey, brother of Director Leo McCarey, has been named a director for Pathe. He previously was assistant director.

Lalley Gets Coast Berth

Hollywood—H. F. Lalley, former manager of production at the Pathe eastern studio, which was destroyed by fire, has been named production manager of two reel comedies at the Coast studios, working under supervision of John C. Flinn.

Pacent's Turkey Agent

Elie Gelaki, company representative in France and Belgium, has been appointed representative of Pacent Reproducer Corp. in Turkey.

Coast Regionals Combine

San Francisco—"The Pacific Coast Exhibitor-Bulletin" is the name of the combine "The Pacific Coast Exhibitor" and "Motion Picture Bulletin." Thomas D. Van Osten is publisher and editor.

Shame!

Shop Assistant: "These are excellent stockings, Madame. I can assure you that many actresses wear nothing else."

From Everywhere . . .

Geography Puzzle

Hollywood—Conchita Montenegro, Spanish dancer and stage actress, has been imported by M-G-M for spots in Spanish versions which that company will produce in the coming year.

Delmar Directing Comedies

Hollywood—Harry Delmar has been signed by John Flinn, Pathe production chief, to direct a new series of comedies. His first will be "All for Mabel."

Liberty Buys Vehicle

Hollywood—Liberty Prod. has purchased the stage play "Davy Jones Locker," written by Richard Barry and will produce via its new wide screen system. Barry will do the adaptation and dialogue.

Hatton in "Silver Horde"

Springfield, O.—Phil Chakeres, operating the Regent-State, has negotiated purchase of downtown site on which a new house will be built, according to announcement.

Named Photophone Distributor

Montreal—Electrics, Ltd., has been appointed distributor in eastern Canada for RCA Photophone.

Business Men Seek Theatre

Whiting, Ia.—Local business men have interested themselves in efforts to secure a sound theatre for this town.

From the Rear

Hollywood—Stuart Erwin, Paramount contract player, has been assigned to an important role in Chevalier's latest starring talker for Paramount, "The Little Cafe."

But since the picture got under way, Erwin has been parading around the studio with a trick hair-cut. It's a distinctive cut from ear to ear, with an apparent high water mark above his sunburn.

The gang tried to figure it out for some time, and finally someone asked Erwin why the haircut.

"You see, it's this way," he replied. "In most of my scenes in the picture I have my back to the camera, and naturally I have to register personality some way!"

Getting a Rep

A Hollywood actress is suing for $1,000,000 damages to her reputation and even if she didn't have much of a one before she filed the suit she ought to succeed in getting one now.
—Coxsackie (N. Y.) Union-News.

Arranging Spanish Version

Tampa, Fla.—Philip D'Esco, director of properties for Inspiration-United Artists studios, is in Tampa arranging for the leasing of Rocky Point, the location where "Hell Harbor" was made. D'Esco says that he is now negotiating for the Spanish rights of the picture and if he is successful he will come here and make the picture, drawing on Tampa's great Latin population for most of the players.

Conducts Training School

Tampa, Fla.—Harry Weiss, general manager of the five Tampa Publix houses, has established a training school for the service staff of the company theatres. All details of theatre operation will be taught by J. C. Shivers, who will be in charge of the school under the supervision of Weiss.

Supporting Marjorie

Hollywood — Thelma Todd, Franklin Pangborn and Mike Donlin have been added to the cast of Pathe's "Her Man" which stars Marjorie Rambeau. Tay Garnett is directing.

Virtue Bows Out

Hollywood—Universal has selected title of "The Lady Surrenders" for the film version of "Sincerity" which John Stahl will direct.

Five Close in Kansas

Kansas City—Kansas theatres recently closed include the Opera House, McLouth; Isis, Omaga; Royal, Ottawa; Isis, Soloman, and Idle Hour, Wilsey.

Warners Change Title

Hollywood—"Women in Love" is the new title of "Penny Arcade," Warner picture adapted from the stage play. It will be directed by John Adolfi, with Grant Withers, Evelyn Knapp and Lucille La Verne in the cast.

Theme Song for "All Quiet"

Hollywood—A theme song for "All Quiet On the Western Front" will shortly make its appearance via sheet music and records. A song of that title has been written by Lou Handman and Bernie Grossman, both on the musical staff at Universal. Handman, Kent and Goodman will publish.

It is intended to use the song number as an exploitation plug for the picture, as the song is not used in the picture itself.

THERE'S a dark shadow hanging over the sunny town of Hollywood, threatening the happiness and existence of every one in pictures, casting terror into the hearts of even the elect. It's the fear of being blacklisted.

To be blacklisted may be as pernicious, as far as a career is concerned, as to be "spotted" by gangsters.

Many an actor, director, and writer has taken his slide to oblivion via the blacklist route. He's found it to be a one-way street, with "Out of the Picture" marked in capital letters at the end of the trip. Some few have made comebacks up this tortuous path; more have not.

The fear of being banned by Hollywood is the more insidious, because one seldom can prove that he is or isn't on somebody's list of condemned. And only the rashest of souls dare to break with protests, the deadly silence which surrounds their banishment.

There's many a homeless player wandering from studio to studio unable to find a berth, watching his depleting bank roll and feeling as though he must be accursed with a plague.

Hollywood's black list is no neat scroll sent out from headquarters upon which the names of the doomed are written. It's an unwritten list, seldom official.—Picture Play

Popularity of the Hays' Code of Ethics for the movies is unbounded in Hollywood. It is so popular that none of the directors or producers will permit anybody to shoot anything that is in the meaning of the code. Every week is "Kindness to the Code Week" in Hollywood. The Code shall not be harmed. It shall not be touched. It shall not even be read or talked about. And a good code is a dead code.—N. Y. Press.

In His Brother's Footsteps

Robert Coogan, brother of the famous Jackie Coogan, makes probably his first screen appearance in the current Columbia Screen Snapshots, being shown on a golf links with Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., taking lessons in the game. Although the club is bigger than Bobby himself, he smacks the ball without any difficulty and delivers an aside in a voice that registers well. He also resembles Jackie and no doubt will some day emulate his career in the films.

Beautiful—But Dumb!

She's a flapper. A foreigner. Very blonde. Very cute. Not too wise. And, writes a sob sister, she doesn't know our language well. Although she's a movie fan, she isn't yet familiar with our stars. Asked which actor she likes best, she responded that to her "Warner Bros. is the most wonderful of all." Warner Bros.? "Oh, yes," she explained, "he is in great demand. His name appears before ever so many theatres.

"Warner Bros. beats Lon Chaney for disguises," she insists. For, despite her admiration, she can seldom recognize him.

Good old Warner Bros.

UNLESS reports from Hollywood are incorrect, "Back Pay" is Corinne Griffith's swan song. The case of Miss Griffith and the talking pictures is a sad one. One of the most glamorous and beautiful stars of the silent pictures, Miss Griffith has lost practically all of her appeal in the transference from silence to sound.

All of her audible ventures have been failures in comparison with her work in the silent films. A good deal of the blame falls upon the star because her voice is rather colorless, with little or no shadings, and her work has been ineffectual and lacking in subtlety.

But a good deal more of the blame must be charged against the selection of the star's stories and direction.—N. Y. Telegram.

Aileen Pringle will shortly start a newspaper column of cinma chatter. Miss Pringle rates as quite a literary person. We understand that, like Fred Allen, she has about four feet of the five-foot book shelf.

Miss Pringle seems rather proud of this fact, judging from the brand of talking she revealed in the few talkies in which we have heard her. She puts on a lot of dogma, a lot of oh-my-dear, if you know what we mean. She gives the impression of being terribly swell.—Baltimore Sun.

JOHN DRINKWATER, it seems has been hired by Carl Laemmle to write Mr. Lammle's biography. And, it first glance, it must be admitted there is a certain incongruity about this. Mr. Drinkwater, as a dramatist of some eminence, has chiseled his name on a pretty high tower. Mr. Laemmle, as a moving-picture producer of perhaps greater eminence, has chiseled his name on a hot-dog stand. LAYMEN who have never been in the land of the muttering snapshots regard Hollywood's residents as consisting of but two general classes, this belief having been well nurtured by sob sisters and viewers-with-alarm.

One class consists of stars and directors who live in purple mansions, eat caviar for breakfast, change wives and shirts simultaneously, and are carried to the studios on the backs of Nubian slaves to collect their $30,000 a week.

The other class—according to popular legend—consists of hollow-cheeked, starving extras, who exist on two meals a day, mourn for their happy homes in Kansas, and lurk about the studio gates begging crusts of bread and drug-store gin.

The popular idea of both classes is remotely near the truth.—Graham in Picture Play.

Hollywood's Credo

By H. A. Woodmansee

The creed of Hollywood is the creed of the yes-man.

Agree with the boss.

Follow the crowd.

Flatter, and, at any cost, avoid giving offense.

It's pretty good safety insurance in a spot where criticism and non-conformity are often drastically punished. That's why the croak of "yes . . . yes . . . yes" wells up from Hollywood like a chorus of bull-frogs in the old mill pond.

And yet there is courage in Yes-Man's Land. A few take their jobs and even their careers in their hands and dare to say and do what seems best to them. Here and there an actor, director or other studio figure, famous or obscure, shatters the Movietown calm with a loud and emphatic "No!" Particularly is this true in the new talkie era.

BLUE LAWS!

This fine piece of cheese was wished on us by fanatics who hung witches, tortured, beat and abused those who did not follow their stringent rules.

Down through the years these laws have remained because we failed to elect representatives with "guts" enough to repeal them.

Fanatics combine and work. Our lawmakers fear to offend them, so we, the liberal minded, are the goats who passively take what they shove down our throats.

There is only one way to beat it. We must TALK, and when we talk loud enough men will hear and repeal those un-American laws. Never vote for a "refawmer." Elect liberal men and get rid of these Blues.—Scott's.

TALKIES glimpsed through no eyes of their own, are more poignant with potentialities than anything I have seen in any field of art, in my lifetime, taking into consideration the size of possible audiences. Talkies developed so rapidly that the producers were forced to turn to some good manuscripts for lack of anything else and before they had a chance to key their productions down to their idea of what the public wanted. They were also forced into hiring some good actors, and the results were fine.

The talkies are going to force the screen toward more intelligent effort, since it is harder to bluff the microphone than the old silent screen. A lot of gush which went all right in pantomime, and to the accompaniment of soft music, is going to sound just like that when the words are spoken.

Hollywood is being forced to a new fidelity to art.—Don Herold in Plain Talk

Check and Double Check

Amos 'n' Andy haven't a monopoly on twisted words. It was only the other day when Jesse Lasky, himself, spoke of the stories "interpolated" by his pictures. But what we started out to say is that there's a cutie in Hollywood who says that she "curdled" a kitten on her lap; that she loves to see the football boys go into a "hovel" and that the heroine of the picture threw herself "prostitute" across the bed.—Screen Book.

"Chi's" Average Programmers Lower Grosses

Chicago, June 21.—Another uneventful week in the Loop, with a preponderance of average programmers and few flesh name draws the explanation.

The Palace maintained a good pace for its third week of vaude-film policy, taking $24,600 (102%), with "Women Everywhere" (Fox) the feature and Lou Holtz on the stage. The State-Lake, RKO's other Loop vaude-film spot, offset its friendly competition by climbing to $23,900 (90%), its highest figure since the policy change at the Palace. "Rough Romance" (Fox) was the feature and Al Trahan heading the vaude line-up. Credit is given the picture of the Schmeling-Sharkey fight for swelling the house's gross.

"All Quiet on the Western Front" (Univ.) finished a four weeks' run at McVickers with $13,500 (130%) for its last four days. The war picture was replaced in mid-week by Fox's "Arizona Kid," which was only fair in its opening days. "Paramount on Parade" (Par.) finished two weeks at the United Artists on the down grade, getting only $11,200 (85%) in its last four days. "The Big Pond" (Par.) replaced it in mid-week. "King of Jazz" (Univ.) showed no strength in its first week at the Roosevelt, taking only $22,500 (105%). "With Byrd at the South Pole" (Par.) will replace it after the twelfth day. The Oriental, with "Safety in Numbers" (Par.) was a worry at $31,500, with no name draw on the stage. The Chicago, with "Shadow of the Law" (Par.) was also off at $39,000 (70%).

Weather: Rain and cool, then warm and fair.
Opposition: "Mamba" (2nd time in Loop), Castle, "Shadow of the Law," stage show, Chicago; "Unguarded Girls" (1st week of "men only"), Garrick, "The Arizona Kid," McVickers; "High Society Blues" (2nd time in Loop), Monroe; "Safety in Numbers," stage show, Oriental; "The Man from Blankley's," Orpheum; "Women Everywhere," vaude, Palace; "King of Jazz," Roosevelt; "Rough Romance," vaude, State-Lake; "The Big Pond," United Artists; "Midnight Mystry," Woods.

"MAMBA" (Tiffany)
(Second time in Loop)

CASTLE—(300), 60c, 7 days. Other attractions: Universal newsreel. Gross: $4,100. Rating: 138%.

"SHADOW OF THE LAW" (Paramount)

CHICAGO—(3,940), 35c-85c, 7 days. Other attractions: Stage show, orchestra, comedy, newsreel, novelty short. Gross: $39,000. Rating: 70%. New program with Will Rogers on the stage and "Lady of Scandal" (Paramount) opened at better than $9,000 a day with holdouts for every performance.

"UNGUARDED GIRLS" (Indie)

GARRICK—(1,259), 50c-75c, 1st week. In here on "men only" policy after two weeks of "women only" at the legit Majestic. Stage models and lecture. Doubled its take at the Majestic, proving there are more males than females in this town who are interested in girls with s. a. and no canoe paddle. Gross: $8,200. Rating: 135%.

"ARIZONA KID" (Fox)

McVICKERS—(2,284), 35c-85c, 1st four days. Other attractions: Comedy, newsreel, musical short. Tough on John Hollywood—With both Wallace Beery and Polly Moran spotted for prominent parts in "Way of a Sailor," it looks as if John Gilbert will have competition from the pair of comedy players. A tough spot for Gilbert, who is attempting a comeback in talkers after an inauspicious start.

AMPAS to Choose Judge For Texas Beauty Contest

The AMPAS are struggling with a weighty problem these summer days—that of selecting one of the seven judges whose pleasant duty it will be to give a bundle of once-overs to the entrants in the Galveston Pageant of Pulchritude and vote for their favorites. Edward L. Klein, president of the publicity men, has appointed a committee, headed by Martin Starr, assistant managing director of the pageant, to select the lucky judge.

This committee consists of Leon Bamberger, Paramount Publix representative; Joe Fine, of Fox Films; Eddie Finney, of United Artists; Tom Gerrety, of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer; Paul Gulick of Universal; G. O'Neill of Pathe; Bert Perkins for First National and Warners', and Charles Lewis, of Motion Picture News.

This committee will proceed immediately to recommend to the body the name of one distinguished personality of the motion picture industry who will sally forth to Galveston as their representative in the great campaign. This cinematic luminary can be either a male or female star, a director or a producer of renown and reputation.

Baby Sun Arc with Noise Removed Claimed in L. A.

Hollywood—A baby sun arc lamp, claimed to be entirely silent while lighted, has been developed by Creco, Inc., local manufacturers of sun arcs. Since the introduction of sound, studios have been using incandescent spots and lighting, on account of their silent operation, and sun arc manufacturers have been casting around for a silent lamp to overcome this sales resistance.

Names Fail to Make Impression At Roxy, Capitol

"All Quiet's" continued healthy gross at the Gaiety, and a few light spurts here and there along Broadway were the only outstanding activities at box-offices of New York's group of big downtown theatres.

The Universal war opus again clicked nearly 21 grand, a splendid take for the Gaiety. The last week of "Rogue Song" at the Astor drew only about eight thousand, a figure plenty low for the Astor, where M-G-M sent in "The Big House" on Tuesday night to bolster up business for the warm period.

Capitol, Paramount, Rivoli and Strand all faired well, with the Paramount rating higher on its $71,900 gross made by "Social Lion."

The week witnessed the usual number of flops, "Silent Enemy" catching only $2,000 for the last three days of its five-week run and Rialto showing $17,800 for eight days of its fifth week of "Big Pond."

Molly Picon, appearing at the Capitol, offset to a considerable degree the appearance of Mme. Schuman-Heink at the Roxy, which did not benefit greatly by the latter's plug, although Miss Picon's visit to the Capitol failed to send the receipts soaring skyward at that house either.

"ROGUE SONG" (M-G-M)

ASTOR—(1,120), 50c-75c-$1-$1.50-$2, 7 days, 22nd and final week. Other attractions: Newsreel, overture. Gross: $7,909, an extremely low figure for this house, although the length of its run must be taken into consideration.

"LADY OF SCANDAL" (M-G-M)

CAPITOL—(4,700), 35c-50c-75c-$1.50, 7 days. Other attractions: Overture, cartoon ("Night"); Capitol presentation, "Dance Dreams"; Hearst Metrotone news, Molly Picon in person. Gross: $70,778, fair figure for warm weather; two grand better than "In Gay Madrid," which played the previous week.

"ALL QUIET ON THE WESTERN FRONT" (U.)

CENTRAL—(922), 50c-75c-$1-$1.50-$2.50, 7 days, 9th week. Other attractions: None. Gross: $20,104; an unusually fine performance, particularly with warm weather and the fact that the run has reached its ninth week.

"SILENT ENEMY" (Paramount)

CRITERION—(850), 75c-$1-$1.50-$2.50, 7 days, 5th week and final week. Other attractions: "Harvest Reverie; cartoon, "Wise Fly." Gross: $2,000 for 3 days and plenty low for the short closing period.

"JOURNEY'S END" (Tiffany)

GAIETY—(808), $1-$1.50-$2.50, 7 days, 12th week. Other attractions: Short, "Voice from Hollywood." Gross: $7,600.

"SOCIAL LION" (Paramount)

PARAMOUNT (3,700), 40c-50c-65c-85c-$1, 7 days. Other attractions: Vaudeville, "Moonbeams"; overture, "Slavische Rhapsody," with Paul Ash conducting; Jesse Crawford at the organ; comedy, "Fat Wives for Thin"; "Feline Fighters." Gross: $71,900; a splendid take.

"BIG POND" (Paramount)

RIALTO—(1,904), 40c-50c-65c-85c-$1, 7 days, 5th week. Other attractions: Golf short, "Match Play"; Floyd Gibbons, "Come Take a Trip in My Airship." Gross: $17,700 for eight days, which is plenty miserable.

"BAD ONE" (United Artists)

RIVOLI—(2,103), 35c-50c-65c-$1, 7 days. Other attractions: Short, "Jazz Preferred"; "His Honorable the Mayor"; cartoon, "Barnyard." Gross: $34,700, a jump of about 11 grand over last week when "One Romantic Night" was on the boards.

"MAMBA" (Tiffany)

ROXY—(6,200), 50c-75c-$1-$1.50, 7 days. Other attractions: Newsreel and personal appearance of Mme. Schuman-Heink. Gross: $81,764, a drop of $16,000 under previous week, although the current gross is not bad considering a general slump; Schuman-Heink did not click as heavily as was expected.

"HOLD EVERYTHING" (Warners)

STRAND—(3,000), 35c-50c-60c-85c-$1, 7 days. Other attractions: Shorts: "Evolution"; Martinelli in "Celeste Aida" from Aida; "And Wife"; "The People Versus." Gross: $27,257, much better than last week, but not too good.

"NUMBERED MEN" (First National)

WINTER GARDEN (1,493), 35c-50c-65c-85c-$1, 7 days, 2nd week. Other attractions: Comedy, "For Sale"; the Potters in "What a Life!"; shorts, "Taxi Talk," "Devil's Parade," Max Schmeling short. Gross: $21,332, lowering previous week's take by at least five grand.

"Journey's End" Socked Down to 35% in Baltimore

Baltimore—Business at a number of big theatres here took a wallop during the week, due principally to the hot spell and many heavy showers. Even at those theatres with refrigeration, business barely held up.

Up on Howard street near Loew's Stanley, the Auditorium and the Little, a miniature golf course has been constructed and while this may help business at those houses rather than hurt due to people wanting to rest after a game, it pulls some attention from the theatres. It is open day and night.

Even though "Florodora Girl," had reams of advertising in the Baltimore "News" and Sunday "American" (Hearst papers), this did not put over that picture strong with the public although shown in the refrigerated Stanley. The gross was $16,300, rating 93%.

Then there was the John Gilbert picture "Redemption," shown at Loew's Valencia which grossed about $3,100 giving it a rating of 89%. It is usual for a Gilbert picture to be shown at the Century which has a normal 100% rating of $21,000.

The worst business of the week was done at the Auditorium with "Journey's End." Gross was estimated at $2,800, rating 35%. Here again is illustrated the fact that running a picture as a road show attraction in Baltimore with two reserved seat shows daily and the top at night $1.50, will not be accepted by the public.

With the elimination of vaudeville at the Hippodrome and the lowering of prices, "Three Sisters," fared rather badly, the gross being figured at $3,500 with a rating of 50%. The high spot for the week was Will Rogers in "So This Is London," at the New Theatre.

Weather: Clear and hot all week with intermittent showers all day and all night Tuesday.

Opposition: "Journey's End," Auditorium; "Hell Harbor," with Loew-Capitol unit ("Japanites," headed by Ted Claire), Loew's Century; "Three Sisters," Hippodrome; "They Learned About Women," Keith's; "This Mad World," Little; "Second Floor Mystery," Metropolitan and Rivoli; "So This Is London," New; "Florodora Girl," Loew's Stanley; "Redemption," Loew's Valencia; "In Gay Madrid," Parkway after one week at Loew's Century. No stage attractions, but Carlin's Amusement Park going full blast.

Just Under the Line

Washington—More than 3,500 filed patent applications in the last week before the rate was advanced to $25, almost doubling the number of average weekly requests for patent rights. An unusually large number of motion picture patents, embodying practically all phases, were in the group.

$7,000 Take Sends "Hold Everything" To Oklahoma Top

Oklahoma City—There was spirited competition among first runs for top honors, with Warners' "Hold Everything" copping the prize by several points. The gross at the Criterion touched $7,000, rating the musical 125%.

"Born Reckless" tied for the percentage honors, taking in $5,000 at the Liberty. Lively streams passed practically all local b.o. windows, a welcome relief from the tough slump with which the downtown stands have been visited in recent days. A stretch of wet weather sent would-be outdoor funsters scurrying to shelter in picture houses.

Weather: Wet for most of the week.

Opposition: "Flirting Widow," Empress; "Born Reckless," Liberty; "He Knew Women," RKO vaude, Orpheum (4 days); "Hold Everything," Criterion; "True to the Navy," Capitol; "Near the Rainbow's End," Fanchon & Marco "Idea," Orpheum (3 days)

"All Quiet" Dents The Tills at K. C. Downtown Houses

Kansas City—"All Quiet on the Western Front" was in line for the blue banner at the close of its sixth day when it had $15,000 in the till. The Shubert, which has been closed for some time, was reopened to house this picture as a road show.

At the Pantages, receipts went up to $17,500, or 175%, on Fox's "So This Is London." The Mainstreet, playing Radio's "Midnight Mystery" with "Up the Congo" as an added attraction, took in $15,000, or 100%. The Midland had normal business with Metro's "In Gay Madrid," grossing $15,000. Warners' "Aviator" at the Uptown brought $6,000, which was normal. The Newman stood at 75% or $7,500, with Paramount's "Safety in Numbers," and the Royal was also 75%, or $3,375, playing "Dumb-bells in Ermine," (Warners).

Weather: Warm.

Opposition: "All Quiet on the Western Front," Shubert; "Midnight Mystery," five acts vaude, Mainstreet; "So This Is London," Pantages; "Safety in Numbers," Newman; "Dumb-bells in Ermine," Royal.

Good Show Sends "Social Lion" to Rating of 170%

Des Moines—"Social Lion," while it scored as good entertainment and won many laughs can not be held entirely responsible for the box office report of 170% at the Paramount for the last half with a gross of $8,000, since the stage show, with a farewell appearance of the band director, Charlie Agnew without a doubt was a great draw. Weather was O. K. for all of the houses except the Strand which has not yet finished its new ventilating system. "Journey's End," showing at the Des Moines received much favorable comment and drew a rating of 150%, grossing $8,500. "Movietone Follies," playing the Orpheum, grossed $5,473, rating 120%.

Talker Western Monthly On Big 4's New Program

At least one talker western a month will be released during 1930-31 by Big Four Film Corp., states its president, John R. Freuler. Two series of six each are planned. National Players, Ltd., another enterprise headed by Freuler, will make a minimum of six of the 12 westerns planned.

One and possibly two series of melodramas also are planned. Freuler is leaving New York in a few days to go to the Coast.

Sunday Show Ban Feared In Drive at Montreal

Montreal—Exhibitors here are fearing the Sunday closing drive recently inaugurated may be extended to theatres. The new civic executive committee recently made a round-up of storekeepers who kept open on the Sabbath and 33 prosecutions resulted.

Writes Finis to Theme Songs

Hollywood—Hugo Riesenfeld sounds the deathknell of the theme song, which he claims has outlived its usefulness because it served merely as an accompaniment to silent pictures. Now in talkers it is replaced by one of several song numbers, either the "hit" number or a selection that has a definite relationship to the main story situation, states Riesenfeld.

Cool Weather Saves Cleveland From a Slump

Cleveland—A fairly cool week, with occasional showers was of material benefit to local theatres, with the result that several of the houses had big weeks, and the others reported better than summer average. "All Quiet on the Western Front" did almost capacity during the first week of its road show engagement at the Hanna, and "Caught Short" was a decided hit at the Stillman. Al Jolson in "Mammy" and Will Rogers in "So This Is London" also pleased.

Weather: Comfortably cool with occasional showers.

Opposition: First Runs: "All Quiet on the Western Front," Hanna; "Caught Short," Stillman; "One Romantic Night," Allen; "Back Pay," State; "So This Is London," Palace; "Mammy," Hip; "The Aviator," E. 105th St.

Warners will maintain a fleet of trucks carrying projection equipment, in connection with its new industrial department. A. Pam Blumenthal heads the new department. The trucks will make the films available on street corners, at fairs and other places where desired.

"Courage" Sends B. O. Barometer Down to $6,100

Minneapolis—The Minnesota, showing "Safety in Numbers," drew the big gross of the week, $35,500, which gave the house a 90% rating. The State ran second in the money by clicking $19,350 to give the house an 80% listing.

The Century, showing "Courage," took just that to show the film. It grossed only $6,100 to a 60% rating. The saddest story of all was unfolded at the R-K-O Orpheum where "Rough Romance" took in only $14,-000 to register the house a rating of 60%.

The Lyric, playing "Those Who Dance," grossed $3,000, which is 90% for that house. The Aster was the only house in the Loop that clicked the bell at 100%. They showed "City Girl" to a gross of $3,000.

Business is unusually bad in this town. The summer slump and the disordered condition of the times makes people pause before shoving their coin through the box office window. This town supposedly has 16,000 men out of work and there seems to be but slight prospects of any improvement before next spring. Therefore, the boys who keep the lights lit in the Minneapolis Loop are going around with a worried look upon their brows.

Weather: Warm.

Opposition: "Rough Romance," "Scooter" Lowry heading variety bill, Hennepin Orpheum; "Safety in Numbers, Publix stage show, "Rivers of Romance," Minnesota; "Golden Calf," State; "Courage," Century; "Those Who Dance," Lyric; "City Girl," Aster.

Providence B. O. Figures Hold As Theatre Opens

Providence—Despite the palpitation incident to a new theatre opening, Publix staging the premiere of its new Paramount Thursday night, exhibitors found last week's business slightly better than average. Beaches called forth mighty attendances during the afternoons but the show houses reaped a golden harvest at night.

Loew's was near average with $19,000 for "Floradora Girl" and near normal business likewise was recorded at the Majestic, which hit $10,200 with "Ladies of Leisure." RKO Victory reports $9,000 with "On the Level" and the RKO Albee a bit over $10,000 with "Not Damaged."

Weather: Clear, warm.

Joe Weil, Universal's exploitation chief, has made a novel tie-up in the creation of "Rhapsody Blue," a new color, inspired by "The Rhapsody in Blue" episode in "King of Jazz." The Textile Color Card Ass'n is introducing the new color.

"Lady of Scandal" Climbs to 160% In 'Frisco Run

San Francisco—The week proved to be much better than the previous one. The Fox did high business with "Lady of Scandal." Here the gross was $39,000 and the rating 160%.

Maurice Chevalier drew thousands to the St. Francis, which reported excellent business all week. The picture grossed $14,000 and rated 125%. His acting was well liked by all. "King of Jazz" drew fairly well at the Warfield, but not as well as contemplated. It grossed $22,000 and rated almost 100%. The Golden Gate reported 100% and a grossing $18,000 with "What a Man."

Other theatres came closer to 100% than they have for some time. The weather was foggy and some days cool and windy. A little cooler than usual this year.

Stage Show Aids Portland Publix To Click $12,000

Portland—[illegible] outside attractions and the return of summer weather, which brought forward the modern refrigeration in the first run houses, grosses stood at normal, with managers increasing their shows, giving all possible value for the customers' half-dollar. Paramount Publix, with their third stage show to back up William Powell in "Shadow of the Law," mounted to the top to $12,000, and 125%. Fox Broadway, showing "Not Damaged," however, was a close second, $11,650 gross and percentage of 115%. "The Big House" at United Artists drew sufficiently well to hold over a second week, with gross of $10,450, 105%. also followed closely by R-K-O Orpheum showing "The Fall Guy" with a gross of $10,000 and 100%. Matinee business was away off.

Theatre Bandits Get Long Prison Terms

Terre Haute, Ind.—Three bandits, specializing in theatre and automobile holdups, were given heavy sentences in the Circuit Court here. Edward Shouse got 25 years and Clarence Hollingsworth and William Bohn 10 years. Shouse was convicted of holding up Zella Tuttle, cashier at the Grand and taking approximately $200. Bohn also was connected with this robbery, but had pleaded guilty to another robbery. Hollingsworth had a part in the theatre holdup with the others, but pleaded guilty to another crime.

Sono Art Signs Tom Moore

Hollywood—Tom Moore has been signed for "Rainbow," which James Cruze is producing for Sono Art-World Wide Pictures. Liola Lane plays opposite.

"Swing High" Flops in L. A. Taking $7,500

Los Angeles—One of the worse performances at local first runs in many weeks was the 47% rating knocked off by Pathe's "Swing High," which grossed only $7,500 for a full seven-day period at the Orpheum. The exploitation was heavy, but not effective, despite the big dough spent on a circus ballyhoo and other stunts.

The high was again hit by "Hell's Angels," the Hughes air epic taking $32,300 for a 202% rating at the Chinese. "So This Is London," in its first week at the Carthay Circle took $20,200, rating 162%. The weather was fine and warm.

Slump Hits Theatres

San Francisco—Reverses suffered by the stock market have an almost immediate effect on theatre attendance here, although generally theatre business is last to be hit by slumps. The paying customers give the preference to seats in brokerage offices, due to their desire to be on the ground for quick action on trading.

"Society Blues" Only Ottawa Run To Reach 100%

Ottawa—Business in Ottawa during the week was inclined to be spotty, both with regard to patronage for individual days and for individual pictures. For instance, at Keith's "The Texan" failed to do more than summer average for three days, but "The Golden Calf" during the last half proved a real magnet. "High Society Blues" at the Avalon attained 100%, but "Hello, Sister" did not have much lure. Wet weather for three days also made a difference. The Sharkey-Schmeling fight pictures at the Centre caused a jump in receipts there.

Weather: Some days hot, others wet.
Opposition: "Return of Dr. Fu Manchu," Regent; "Texan" (3 days), B. F. Keith's, "High Society Blues" (3 days), Avalon, "Awful Truth," Centre, "Double Crossroads," Imperial; "Hello, Sister" (3 days), Avalon; "Golden Calf" (3 days), B. F. Keith's.

Davies Knocks Lid Off Boston House Taking 31 Grand

Boston—Loew's State blew the lid off with a new high mark for the year of $31,000 for 150% with M-G-M's "Florodora Girl." It was the one really bright spot in an otherwise dull week for Boston theatres.

For at least two weeks prior to announcement of "Florodora Girl," Loew's State, with a clever tie-up with Hearst newspapers, conducted contests relative to the merits of musical comedies and styles of a score of years ago with the present. Add to this some clever "buggy rides" about Boston by Floradora girls and full-page newspaper advertising with the arrival of the show, the box office receipts jumped skyward.

"So This Is London" at the Keith Memorial touched $24,000 for 110%, while "Safety in Numbers," helped by Will Rogers in person, for a second week and a midnight show on Monday, kept the Metropolitan on its usual plane of the year with $34,500 for a rating of 120%. "Shadow of the Law" did average business. The rest of the houses fell below average, which is not to be wondered at as the week was generally observed as Commencement Week at Colleges and schools near Boston.

Weather: Fair, warm.
Opposition: "Safety in Numbers," Will Rogers in person, Publix's Metropolitan; "Devil's Holiday," vaudeville, Scollay Square; "Shadow of the Law," playing day and date at Publix's Olympia and Uptown; "South Sea Rose," Keith Albee; "So This Is London," which probably would have grossed better had Will Rogers not been playing in person at the Metropolitan, at Keith-Memorial; "Florodora Girl," Loew's State standing 'em up at every performance; "Caught Short," vaudeville, Loew's Orpheum; "Cock o' the Walk," Park, and "All Quiet on the Western Front," for a third week road show at the Majestic.

Will a Flapper Magnet?

For the first time in the history of the house a flapper following with 30 per cent of the audience made up of the younger set, crowded Fox's Brooklyn to see Will Osborne, radio crooner, who has been making a series of personal appearances.

Night Baseball, Dog Tracks Add To Exhibs' Woes

Indianapolis—The worries of exhibitors keep on mounting. Greyhound racing and night baseball are responsible.

The greyhound racing, as practiced at a Jeffersonville dog track, has been held to be legal by a jury, and night baseball has been tried here by the Indianapolis American Association baseball club with phenomenal results. Judging from the interest of club owners in other cities of the association, which include Toledo, Columbus, O., Louisville, Kansas City, Milwaukee, St. Paul and Minneapolis, the idea is certain to spread to these cities. In fact some of the club owners who were here for the first games said they would try the experiment at once. That it will create competition for the theatres is certain. Paid admissions for the first four games at night showed an increased attendance of about 600 per cent over corresponding games played in the daytime and on the same week days. That increase certainly comes from some place and the theatre is the most logical place.

Dog Auction Dodge

The Jeffersonville jury found the owner of the track and four of his aids not guilty of operating a gaming house at the track. Defense attorneys contended that the racing plant is run in strict accordance with a dog auction plan held legal by Judge George C. Kopp. Under this system, $2, $5 and $10 interests in the racing dogs are sold at auction and the certificates are redeemed after races at value fixed by a board of appraisers. All the certificates have value, the track operators assert.

The prosecutor of the county argued, together with a representative of the state attorney general's office, that the dog auction is a subterfuge and that the defendants were guilty of gambling. Failure of the state to make its case against the operators apparently leaves the kennel club free to continue its race meetings.

Night Baseball New Form Of Competition on Coast

Hollywood—With midget golf courses attracting thousands nightly all over southern California to the detriment of theatre attendance, exhibitors now are confronted with regular night baseball by the Coast league and semi-pro aggregations. Special lighting was installed at the Sacramento ball park, with attendance increasing 400 per cent at the league night ball games. The experiment was so successful that club owners in San Francisco, Oakland and Los Angeles have decided to make similar installations immediately.

Dog Racing Continues

St. Louis—Although indictments have been returned by the Grand Jury at Edwardsville, Ill., dog racing tracks there are continuing operation. The races are a matter of concern for exhibitors there and in nearby towns.

The Fickle Public

"A movie star's career is not one to be envied. Those who live by popularity die by the lack of it. It must be tough to know that one day a nation will wait in line outside of a cinema palace and the next day you couldn't get them in—even if the admission were free.

"Fame in the theatrical world often comes overnight. And disappears just as rapidly. A star is getting a big salary. Some one realizes he has outlived his usefulness and he drops out of the picture. That's all there is to it. In a short time the audience has forgotten his name and is applauding a newcomer."—New York News.

Holdover Warning Sounded for Ohio Unit Membership

Columbus, O.—Warning to exhibitors against holdovers and a lesson in keeping books are contained in P. J. Wood's latest communication to his membership. Holdovers, he warns, violate the copyright law, stressing the importance of having in writing any arrangement made between the exhibitor and exchange.

In his dissertation on bookkeeping, Wood says he is astounded to learn that there still are many exhibitors who do their bookkeeping "on the back of an envelope or the front cover of Motion Picture News."

Wood also points out that Warners and First National are making sound-on-film pictures, and advises members against installation of any disc equipment whatsoever.

R-K-O Planning Big Expansion At Cincinnati?

Cincinnati—Persistent reports, which John L. McCurdy, R-K-O divisional manager here, will neither confirm nor deny, have it that R-K-O is about to launch an extensive building campaign in Cincinnati.

Concurrently with the final and official transfer in New York of the Libson properties, recently acquired by R-K-O, it is reported that the latter will build two theatres, one, a 4,500-seat house to be erected at a cost of around $4,000,000 on a prominent downtown site, the location of which has not been disclosed. This house, it is said, will be known as the R-K-O Ohio. Another house, to be known as the R-K-O Radio theatre, is said to be included in the plan.

The properties of the Libson interests recently taken over represent a purchase price of approximately $8,500,000, according to those in the know. Theatres included in the deal are the Albee, Palace, Lyric, Capitol, Keith, Strand and Family here and the Colonial, Keith, State and Strand at Dayton, Ohio; Keith-Albee-Regent and Keith-Albee-Empress, at Grand Rapids, Mich. and Keith at Columbus, Ohio.

A real estate mortgage executed by R-K-O to secure a bond issue for $4,375,000 has been recorded here, the bonds bearing six per cent interest, payable semi-annually in May and November. The first National Bank of Cincinnati is named as trustee for the bondholders.

The mortgage covers the theatre properties mentioned above, as well as adjacent buildings, in some instances. In addition, it covers 7,948 shares of stock in the Ohio Theatre Company, and 9,000 shares of stock in the B. F. Keith Columbus Co. All of the bonds are subject to redemption on any interest-paying date at the election of the mortgagor.

Educational Lining Up Staff for '30-'31 Films

Hollywood—Following closely on the heels of completion of 1929-30 shorts, Educational is readying its staff for production of 1930-31 material. Nine comedy writers, three directors and 15 players are already under contract for the new group which will be made at the Sennett, Metropolitan and Educational studios.

Earle Rodney and Vernon Smith are in the new scenario department, working for Sennett. Walter Weems and Jack Jevne will also write for the same unit, while Harry McCoy, James Starr and Walter DeLeon are the first to be signed at Metropolitan. John Lockert and George Coogan will work at Educational.

Lyon Signed by W. B.

Hollywood—Upon Ben Lyon's return from his honeymoon with Bebe Daniels he will start with Warner Brothers under a new long-term agreement.

New Trailer Dept. at Warners

Lou Lusty will direct Warners' newly expanded trailer department. Product of the new department will continue to go through Vitaphone exchanges.

With Byrd at the South Pole

(Paramount Publix—Part Talker)

Epochal; Stirring; Box-Office

(Reviewed by Red Kann)

UNIQUE in the history of motion pictures, the pictorial record of Richard E. Byrd's saga of adventure in Antarctica etches itself into the memory with a permanence that time will not erase.

Never staged for drama, it is nevertheless as breath-taking a piece of dramatic realism as has ever been caught on celluloid. It shames the plotted pictures of Hollywood so far into the background that their emergence will merely demonstrate how weak-kneed staged drama can be.

Here is an action record of the greatest exploration venture of the century, shot by the pioneering cameramen of a pioneering band of intrepid adventurers who gave up two years of their lives and associations to discover with and for Byrd the secrets of the South Polar basin.

Drama in the raw and impressive because you know that every foot of the 82 minutes that the Byrd picture takes to run its footage is part of the authenticated document recorded on film by Willard Van der Veer and Joseph Rucker, ace Paramount cameramen who accompanied the expedition to Little America.

"With Byrd at the South Pole" opens with a short address by Rear Admiral Byrd who sketches in highlights some of the conditions and hardships confronted by his men in the ice wastes. Then, a shot of the bark "City of New York" which carried the party South and a series of impressive, danger-filled sea shots which graphically indicate the perils of the southern waters through which the boat plied from New Zealand to the Bay of Whales.

The camera takes you then to the Ross Barrier, guardian of the Antarctica, and picks out the dangers of all unknown—that faced the band of 42 men left on the ice to carry forward the objectives of the exploring party. Shelf ice that crashes without warning into the sea, crevasses that cover blind dangers and terrific storms that sweep up from nobody knew where without a moment's warning.

The construction of the camp, dubbed "Little America," is picturized in a quick, but self-explanatory, series of sequences; the life of the men, the blotting out of the sun for 125 days, the assembling of the aeroplanes, the wireless room via which the party kept in constant touch with civilization—step by step the camera carries you along until the objective of the trip is ready: the flight of the three-motored plane over the South Pole.

Then into the plane, the picture carries the spectator further, showing the mechanics of the flight, scenes of the barren icelands below and a memorable, thrilling insert of Byrd's famous message when his calculations convinced him that he was actually over the Pole. When he takes the American flag, weighed down by a stone from Floyd Bennett's grave, drops it through the floor of the plane and stands stiffly at salute in honor of his dead companion, right then and there enough kick reaches out from the screen to electrify any audience.

For reviewing purposes, space limitations forbid a more detailed description. The safe return to the base is followed in quick order by the return of the "City of New York" and the breaking of camp on a six-hour schedule to permit the expedition's return to civilization before the ice pressure closes in on them for another year.

There are many shots of great charm, such as those in which the dogs and a baby seal figure. There are many that are awesome in their audience reaction, such as the parade of whales in the ice-choked waters and the panorama of majestic, desolate mountains.

Considerable credit must go to Julian Johnson for his titles. His appreciation of the epic qualities of his theme were patently displayed in the execution of his end of the job. During the flight, Floyd Gibbons maintains a running fire of dialogue, tries hard and, in a measure, succeeds in whipping up enthusiasm for the deed. But the simplicity of the drama, it seems to us, is sufficient without injecting the spoken narrative. The pictures tell the story and the lines, therefore, become redundant.

Photographically, Van der Veer and Rucker did a masterful job. Their values are superb and remarkable in view of the atmospheric conditions and the constant battle against unknown odds which was theirs.

Historically, the picture has a worth upon which no valution perhaps can be placed.

Scientifically, the contribution remains to be determined, but that it will be of definite proportions goes without argument.

Commercially, "With Byrd at the South Pole" is an attraction which can't flop. This is the one picture which, in this reviewer's opinion, is clear of the usual trade difficulties involving first run and protection. First, second, third or any run, the picture stands alone and apart from anything the screen has offered to date. That should be enough guarantee for any showman.

Song cartoon or two-reel comedies will make a nice balance.

Produced and distributed by Paramount Publix. Photographed by Willard Van der Veer and Joseph Rucker. Edited by Emanuel Cohen. Music score by Manny Baer. Titles by Julian Johnson. Narrative of flight by Floyd Gibbons. Length, 7,411 feet. Running time, 82 mins. Release date, June 28.

Hot Pups

Hollywood—"The fiery horses of the Ku Klux Klan that pounded the midnight lanes of the South after the Civil War, that leaped to the bit again in the filming of D. W. Griffith's 'Birth of a Nation' sixteen years ago, are loose again."

This is how Heath Cobb press agents the revised edition of "The Birth" which is now being synchronized to sound and music.

Heath, incidentally, pulled another nifty in the same press story when he said that D. W. gets ten thousand smackers per day to supervise synchronization of his old masterpiece.

She's My Weakness

(Radio—All Talker)

Weak

(Reviewed by Robert Hage)

THE silly season has arrived and this picture will help to make it sillier. The indictments against it are many. It has a foolish story that runs around in circles; the direction is lackadaisical; the leads, Arthur Lake and Sue Carol, are about as romantic as dill pickles. But the most glaring of all is the appallingly bad performance given by William Collier, Sr. Not in years has this reviewer seen such amateurish work on the screen, bar none. Collier is camera-conscious every moment; his lines are delivered in a maddening monotone; his gestures are awkward in the extreme; at no moment does he seem aware as to what he is expected to do next.

Lucien Littlefield is the best trouper in the cast, but his specialty can become tiresome if overdone and how he overdoes it! The story concerns a pair of youths seeking the hand of the girl. Collier, as the uncle, tries to help Arthur win the girl. Arthur, in the meantime, becomes so annoying with his eccentric muscularities that you hope he gets the girl and becomes a henpecked husband. It's a sad, sad comedy.

If you've booked it pray for the breaks.

Needs plenty of good support.

Temptation

(Columbia—All Talker)

Ordinary Program

(Reviewed by Don Ashbaugh)

JUST ordinary is the only verdict that can be applied to "Temptation," Columbia's picture featuring Lois Wilson and Lawrence Gray. Its mediocre story is redeemed by capable performances of the principal characters besides many humorous and pathetic touches with the real human quality.

The hero, played by Gray, has served a year in prison on a frame-up when he is paroled. He plans to go straight, but is ordered back to the gang. He is not particularly bad, nor particularly weak, but a drifter. He encounters Julie, the role taken by Miss Wilson, when he comes to New York, instead of going to Syracuse to report to the parole commissioner.

Julie is the cashier in a cafe and a girl set on having all the comforts and luxuries of living—in contrast with her youth of hard work.

She becomes engaged to the likeable Sam, played by Billy Bevan. The director, E. Mason Hopper, and Bevan both deserve credit for making Sam likeable and intelligent in spite of his quarter million dollars—a refreshing change from the usual unpleasant heavy. Bodil Rosing, in a brief appearance as his mother, gives one of the most delightful performances of a mother recently encountered.

Near the finish the picture takes on something of the quality of the usual gangster picture—the cabaret, the plot to rob a bank when the hero, whom Julie refuses to love, knowing what it will mean in poverty and sorrow, determines on that means to buy her things she has declared she wants above all else.

In the end Julie and Larry, hand in hand, go to meet the police she has summoned to keep the hero from gangsters—he will serve his other year and then, strangely enough, one is led to believe there will be a wedding. Completing the cast are Eileen Percy, Gertrude Bennett and W. L. Thorne.

"Temptation" cannot graduate out of regulation program classification, rating for double bills and daily changes.

Dangerous Nan McGrew

(Paramount—All Talker)

Nutty

(Reviewed by Reeve Hare)

IT must have been the heat in Hollywood. Nothing else can explain why this picture was made. It produces a bunch of laughs at the start, but after that the audience is so busy trying to figure out whether it is being kidded or insulted that it forgets to laugh at the funny spots. Looks like a bad case of delirium tremens.

The suspicion that it may have been intended as a burlesque of the "Shooting of Dan McGrew" school of heroics is quickly allayed by the injection of some ham pathos and sappy romance. All in all, it's humanly impossible to classify this production.

Dangerous Nan McGrew (Helen Kane) and Doc Foster (Victor Moore) operate a medicine show, but haven't sold a bottle of the nostrum in five years. Bob Dawes (James Hall), a desperado with a price of $10,000 on his head, joins them against their wishes. They hit a small town where the goofy son (Stuart Erwin) of a rich local family falls for Helen. On Christmas Eve Doc and Dawes get stewed and decide that it would be a great idea if Dawes would surrender himself and they could split the $10,000 reward. They proceed to smash all the windows in town and knock down lamp posts, but no constable shows up and the sequence is abruptly ended.

Next Dawes is depicted as the Santa Claus at a party given the next night by the goof and he pads out his costume with silverware, crockery, alarm clocks and other bric-a-brac, instead of pillows. Eventually he is exposed and Nan and the goof clinch.

This vehicle is Victor Moore's debut in talkers and he grabs the honors. His voice registers perfectly and he is destined to stage a big comeback in comedy roles. Helen Kane makes the best of a freak role and clicks a number of laughs. The others in the cast are so-so.

Don't make any promises for this picture. It is so loose and jerky that it appears to be the work of amateurs throughout and the story itself is a brainstorm. However, it will get by if audiences are not critical.

Sisters

(Columbia—All Talker)

Good Program Fare

(Reviewed by J. P. Cunningham)

FAVORABLE audience reaction bears out our belief that "Sisters" is good entertainment as a program attraction, particularly suitable for neighborhood stands. It might even get by at twice-weekly change houses, stacking up in the same class with "true life story" fiction which has such wide appeal with the masses. The comedy touches are well timed and dramatic sequences splendid.

Sisters play "Sisters" in this, with Sally O'Neil and Molly O'Day effectively portraying the leads, strongly supported by Jason Robards, Morgan Wallace, John Fee and Carl Stockdale. Russell Gleason, as the young chap from a small town who arrives in New York to cash in on the big dough, overacts.

The story, while entertaining, is old, has been given strong twists for the sake of convenience. The action seldom lags, however, and snappy chatter lined up from the first to last reel greatly enhances its value as a piece of popular screen fare.

Young Gleason, while taking the census, meets Molly, a model in a ritzy gown shop, who apparently depends on sugar daddy Wallace for money to maintain her elaborate apartment, although Gleason, being "green," doesn't recognize this situation. Molly's sister, Sally, oppressed with the weight of poverty and domesticity, steals Molly's boy friend, and a stiff tilt follows between the sisters, Molly fighting hard to keep Sally from deserting her baby and husband for the no-good Wallace. Action follows at a fast clip bringing Wallace to the cops as a bad hombre from Chicago. The $5,000 reward on Wallace's head goes to Gleason, giving him sufficient funds to buy a country newspaper and live happily ever after with Molly. The tight jam taught Sally her lesson and she reforms.

Sound cartoon and a two-reel slapstick are jake with this for a nice light summer bill.

Produced by Harry Cohn. Distributed by Columbia Pictures. Directed by James Flood. Story by Ralph Graves. Adaptation and dialogue by Joe Swerling. Film Editor, Gene Havelick. Photography, not credited. Released, June 15. Length, 6,284 ft. Running time, about 70 mins.

Riders of the Rio Grande

(Syndicate—Synchronized)

A Poor Western

(Reviewed by J. P. Cunningham)

NOT the least bit unlike the Western feature of the cut-and-dried cattle rustling variety, suitable for the double feature day when youngsters must be served outdoor adventures. The locale is the most pleasant element of the entire production, with a cast headed by Bob Custer contributing little to its entertainment value, and direction by J. P. McGowan never rising from the depths of mediocrity. Synchronization is only average, and photography very spotty in parts. The story is consistent with the old far-fetched hokum policy of juvenile outlaw yarns.

It concerns a ruse used by a secret service man to round up the outlaws, who, not satisfied with cattle stealing, do a little counterfeiting on the side line. The love interest is brought into play when Custer gallantly aids Edna Austin and young Kip Cooper from the hands of Martin Chici, a tough hombre.

Use this only with a double feature bill, or plenty of very strong shorts.

Produced by J. P. McGowan. Distributed by Syndicate Pictures, via State Rights market. Direction by J. P. McGowan. Photographed by Hap Depew. Story by Sally Winters. Running time, about 58 minutes. Length, 5,223 feet. Released, September, 1929.

The Big House

(M-G-M—All Talker)

Powerful Melodrama

(Reviewed by Red Kann)

WITH a love yarn and a few other embellishments thrown in, "The Big House" is the recent break at Auburn prison corralled and turned into picture form.

As a piece of entertainment it is usually [illegible] continues on its relentless way, but giving way sufficiently to the concessions demanded by box-office to send it over with the mob.

Purely as a piece of dramatic construction, therefore, the picture sometimes falters. From the angle of the crowd that pays to find out what it's all about, the middle course is unquestionably sound. "The Big House," as a consequence, will appeal where they like 'em strong and with much of the saccharine eliminated.

It is entirely possible, of course, for an apparently nice girl like Leila Hyams to fall in love with a shady character like Chester Morris, but it does appear to stretch the credulity. At any rate, that happens. It's important, too, for it determines Morris to go straight and later paves the way for the climax in the prison when the break takes place.

Robert Montgomery, as Miss Hyams' brother, finds himself facing a ten-year sentence for manslaughter; it was a case of killing a pedestrian while drunken brother was driving. In prison, he is quartered with Morris, a gentleman crook, and Wally Beery, who comes through with an impressive performance as Butch, machine gun expert, hired murderer, poison dispenser and all-around bad man.

The unrelenting hardships of prison life are displayed from the overcrowding of cells clear down the line to the rotten food and the brutality of solitary confinement. The director, George Hill, did a very good job in building up to the revolt that brews in the ranks.

Morris manages to escape through the mortuary, taking the place of a convict about to be buried and makes at once for the bookshop run by Montgomery's sister. There the romance between them begins. Later he is caught and returned to prison, where he learns the details of an impending break and attempts to discourage Butch, as ringleader, from going through with it. His efforts unsuccessful, the plan develops as prearranged, but the warden, a small part ably played, as usual, by Lewis Stone, is prepared through Montgomery's double-cross.

The climax, a wow for suspense, comes in the pitched battle between the jailbirds on the run and the prison guards. Tear bombs and tanks finally batter down the resistance, not, however, before Montgomery confesses he stool-pigeoned and Bennett and Butch shoot it out to a finish.

For his services on behalf of order, Morris secures his pardon and returns to the girl.

Beery is superb as Butch, the killer, who cries when he learns his mother is dead. It is unquestionably his finest work since "The Sea Hawk," and will send audiences out talking. Morris is extremely effective as the gentleman crook. Montgomery plays the weak-kneed brother in workmanlike fashion. Others in the cast are satisfactory, with Karl Dane played down to fill an extremely inconspicuous niche in the prison scenes.

Light shorts required. Feature plenty heavy.

Produced and distributed by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer. From story by Frances Marion. Directed by George Hill. Dialogue by Miss Marion with additions by Joe Farnham and Martin Flavin. Drums of Fear

(Pathe—Talker)

Great

TOM TERRISS' "Vagabond Adventure" series grows more interesting, more exciting with each release. It is one of but a few groups of short subjects now on the market which may be always depended upon to hold its audience breathless while the tale of some mysterious country is unfolded colorfully by Terriss with his pleasing English accent.

In "Drums of Fear" the "Vagabond" takes us deep into the land of cannibals, into their innermost hideout, where the camera caught a witch doctor in a death performance, gruesome among the skulls of many dozen subjects who crossed his path. This subject apparently necessitated plenty of nerve, to say nothing of camera skill. Splendid for any type of audience, young and old. Running time, 10 minutes

Ideal for a comedy drama. Do not use it with South Sea or mystery feature stuff.

A Riot

ONE of the funniest and fastest-moving comedies we've seen in many a day and a sure laugh-getter from start to finish, thanks to a good story, a rapid succession of original gags and a dandy cast, including Andy Clyde, Marjorie Beebe, Nick Stuart and Lincoln Stedman. Andy Clyde, as usual, stirs the risibilities the most, but all of the cast have been furnished with opportunities to click laughs—and there's no let-up. Mack Sennett sure knows his comedy. Recommended heartily for all types of theatre-goers. Running time, 21 minutes.

Novel

BELIEVE it or not, Paul Whiteman and Oswald the Rabbit are co-starred in this cartoon and they make an ideal team. The king of jazz and the bunny make melody out of all portions of the scenery, with heavy emphasis on "It Happened in Monterey," one of the songs in "The King of Jazz." The artist has been most kind to Paul, trimming down his figure so that he doesn't crowd out the rest of the landscape, and has made him an attractive actor instead of caricaturing him. Running time, 7 minutes.

Fine for building up any program.

Honk Your Horn

(Educational — Talker)

Satisfactory

LLOYD HAMILTON goes through his paces in the customary manner, getting over a satisfactory number of laughs through the bits of business provided for him. Those not critical about the comedy fare served them on the screen will enjoy it, and it will please generally. Directed by Alf Goulding. Running time, 19 minutes.

Okay wherever comedy is needed.

Kandy Kabaret

(Paramount—Talker)

Extremely Mediocre

LOUIS McDERMOTT wrote the business for this musical sketch and split directorial credit—if any—with Mort Blumenstock. The players are all kids who do their jazz stuff well enough, but appeared so d——d precocious to this reviewer that his first and final inclination was to walk up to the screen and spank them until they acted as regulation youngsters should. For doting parents, this is "in." For all others, out. Time, 10 mins.

Use strong shorts around it. Requires them.

Short Subjects

His Girl's Wedding

(Universal—Silent)

Fair

THERE are some good situations in this 2-reeler, but they have not been developed with any degree of skill and most of them fall flat. Arthur Lake, as usual, is called upon to leap about like a flea and interrupts the progress of the story. The punch scene in this one shows Arthur acting as best man at the wedding of the girl he loves. Innocently he uses muriatic acid to remove stains from the tuxedo of the bridegroom, whose clothes fall off during the course of the ceremoney. The groom then is exposed as a professional bigamist and Arthur gets the girl. Has a number of laughs. Director, H. Edwards. Running time, 19 min.

Will get by on the average program.

Eddie Cantor in Insurance

(Paramount—Talker)

WHICH demonstrates beyond all argument that even the best of them have rough sailing if the material is bad. Exactly that happens to Eddie Cantor in this short. Most of his gags are bearded with age and few of them carry any laughs. The background of the skit takes place in a doctor's office, where Cantor comes for treatment. Running time, 9 minutes.

Bolster with cartoon comedies and two-reelers.

Getting a Break

(Paramount—Talker)

Amusing

BROCK and Sully in a rather clever comedy skit. Pair play part of hick vaudeville performers who get a break in a big New York show. Complications leading up until the "break" form the nucleus for this piece, which has some good laugh lines. Recording is only average. Running time, 10 minutes.

Okay for average bill.

Deep South

(Pathe—Songs)

Well Done

A PICTURESQUE song-tale finely flavored with old Southern melodies, all popular tunes and rendered in a colorful setting with darkies, a plantation, the "colonel" and his pretty daughter. Sound and camera work is commendable. Running time, 10 minutes.

Just the thing on a feature comedy bill. Use a dramatic playlet and you're all set for a well rounded show.

Night

(Silly Symphony—Columbia)

Clever

A LOT of fun in this nonsensical cartoon. Owls performing jazz steps on water lilies; wasps turning collegiate; and even the man in the moon going in for the shimmy. Nicely synchronized and extremely diverting. Fine for any bill and particularly adaptable for hot weather entertainment. Recommended with no reservations. Running time, 7 minutes.

Two-reel comedies suggested and, of course, the newsreel, as usual.

A Romeo Robin

(Pathe—Sound Cartoon)

Okay

CLICKS at par, which means good cartoon comedy and appropriate musical synchronization, with occasional voice. Well done, but not sufficiently different from the general run to lift it out of its class. Running time, about 7 minutes.

Proper with a dramatic feature in need of light musical material.

Big Hearted

(Pathe—Talker)

Funny Domestic Comedy

LAUGHABLE slapstick, with plenty of laughs and no end of slapstick of the house wrecking variety. Ray Hughes makes some real spills while forcefully entertaining his new next-door nervy neighbors. The plot is stale, but Robert DeLacy brushed it up a bit, giving expert directorial twists which bring the story out of the rut. Running time, 15 minutes.

Spot this one after the feature, using it where the latter contains dramatic stuff.

'U' Gets Kaufman as Comedy Supervisor

Hollywood—Setting plans for production of the limited number of short reel comedies to be produced during the coming year, Universal has engaged Eddie Kaufman as editorial supervisor for comedies.

Kaufman was former assistant and title writer for Jack White when the latter was producing head of Educational Studios during the past five years.

Popular Flappers Sought In Oklahoma City Contest

Oklahoma City—The Publix theatres here are conducting a contest for the most popular flapper in town and the girls are all excited. The tie-up is with Max Factor, Hollywood face painter, and the local Crown drug store, where Max's disguises are sold. Ticket stubs are exchanged for ballots at the drug store and the winner gets a free vacation trip to Hollywood.

Seattle Exhibs Combat Daylight With Late Shows

Seattle—With the coming of summer and daylight that lasts "far into the night," picture theatres here are advertising late performances every night in the week. To accomodate local residents who enjoy a game of golf, tennis, a swim or a motor ride during the daylight hours after supper, the theatres have arranged their schedules accordingly.

Jensen & Von Herberg at their Liberty advertise a complete performance beginning nightly at 10 o'clock for those who wish to stay up late. Admission after 10 P. M. is 25 cents, instead of the regular evening charge of 35 cents.

The Paramount and the Fox Fifth Avenue, both offering stage shows in addition to their picture program, present a complete performance beginning about 9:45 and ending about midnight. At the Fox, the feature attraction is never screened for the last show until after 10 o'clock. The RKO New Orpheum this week arranged schedules so that their last complete performance does not begin until 9:30 or shortly after.

These late performances mean added cost to the theatres in overtime, salaries to musicians, operators, stage hands, etc., but the local managers feel that the late shows are the only way to combat the competition of long daylight evenings, and believe that the added operating expense is more than offset by the business received from late attendance.

Plans Mapped for Annual Rochester Exhib Outing

Rochester—With a tug-of-war between downtown and neighborhood men as the chief feature, members of the Rochester exhibitors unit shaped final plans this week for their final outing at Coburg, Ont., July 1. They will be accompanied by delegations of exhibitors from New York, Buffalo and Syracuse.

Jules Greenstone, president of the Rochester group, is in charge of arrangements. He is being assisted by John J. O'Neil, games and transportation; William Tishkoff, prizes and entertainment; Max Cohen, commissary; Alexander Dunbar, sports and reception; Russell Carew, refreshments; Paul Fenyvessy, tickets and arrangements. The exhibitors will take their families for the first time.

Radio Association Hit for Stand on RCA Trust Suit

Chicago—RCA and its associates are engaged in establishing a monopoly in every phase of the radio art, B. J. Grigsby, chairman of the board of the Grigsby-Grunow Co., has announced the company's resignation from the Radio Manufacturers' Ass'n. He says RCA's activities are preventing the association from taking an active stand on issues of importance to the radio industry. The resignation is the result of the association's stand on the anti-trust action brought by the government against RCA, General Electric and Westinghouse.

"Douglas Fairbanks is an ardent 'Mickey Mouse' fan. He believes that these Disney creations released by Columbia are the last word in cleverness, skill and amusement. In a recent interview given to the Los Angeles Times, Fairbanks is quoted as saying that Mickey Mouse gags are the talk of the cartoon profession.

"The name of Charles Ruggles has been officially changed by Paramount to Charlie Ruggles. This change in the nomenclature of the busy comedian, who has made a reputation for himself with his screen drunks, was effected virtually by popular request. It was noted by Paramount executives that filmgoers invariably refer to Ruggles with the friendly name of "Charlie," s oit was decided to denote him thus in the billing.

"Ruggles, who is now in Hollywood preparing to appear in a screen musical with Jeanette MacDonald after having completed his new role in 'Queen High,' wired his approval of the change. He's known as 'Charlie' to all his friends, as well as everyone around the studio, where he is one of the most popular players. So the name was nothing new to him."

Meyer Gets Quarters In Metropolitan Studio

Hollywood—Abe Meyer, head of the Meyer Synchronizing Service, has established headquarters at Metropolitan Sound Studios. Meyer's service includes publication and exploitation of original music, sound effect department, research and reference library; together with complete synchronization of productions.

Meyer's accounts include Christies, Lloyd Hamilton productions, Metropolitan Studios' Industrial Department, Rogell productions, Halperin productions, Brown-Nagel productions, Phil Ryan productions and Robert C. Bruce.

D. W. Handling Addition Of Sound to "The Birth"

Hollywood—D. W. Griffith has decided to supervise the sound effects, music, synchronization and added dialogue for the silent version of "Birth of a Nation," which is being handled by Triangle Film Corp.

Present plans provide for both a prologue and epilogue to be staged with Griffith and others talking for the necessary scenes. Regulation scenes of the picture will not be voice-dubbed, as was expected.

A synchronized version was completed several weeks ago, but this was discarded when Griffith consented to supervise the remake.

Court Ruling in Censorship Fight Kills Injunction

Attorneys here are arguing over the interpretation of the State Supreme Court's most recent ruling in regard to "Alibi," the United Artists picture which was denied a permit by the local censor board but played Chicago theatres under a writ of injunction restraining police from interfering with its showing. This injunction was later dissolved in an action brought by the corporation counsel's office which, at the same time, sought to show that mandamus and not injunction was the proper legal procedure to distributors whose pictures have been denied a permit. At that time, the Supreme Court upheld the distributors; approving the injunction procedure. Later, however, the Circuit Court in a similar case brought on by "Party Girl" (Tiffany) ruled that mandamus is the proper procedure.

Loopholes in Decision?

Following the later ruling of the lower court, the corporation counsel's office filed a petition with the Supreme Court for a rehearing of the "Alibi" case. This petition was denied, but the Supreme Court last week modified its earlier decision in several particulars. The modification is interpreted by some attorneys to mean that injunction proceedings will be supplanted by mandamus in the future. Others, however, believe that the modification leaves plenty of loopholes by which injunction may still be in order.

James V. Kearns of the corporation counsel's office here states that he has not received a copy of the modified ruling from the Supreme Court and does not know what it implies. Kearns instituted both actions against "Alibi" and "Party Girl" but said he had no knowledge in advance that the Supreme Court would give reconsideration to the "Alibi" ruling which resulted in the modification.

Accurate interpretation of the modified ruling, he said, will not be possible before receipt of the report containing the new decision later this week.

Distributors here are anxious to maintain the injunction procedure as it is operative immediately. Mandamus, on the other hand, requires lengthy court actions which sometimes take months before they are even placed on court calendars.

Work Stopped on Exchange Bldg., Lessees Worried

Work on the Film Exchange building at 13th St. and Wabash Ave. has been discontinued with only the first floor foundation completed. No explanation has been forthcoming from the backers of the project on the inactivity at the site, though workmen have not been in evidence at the building for more than two weeks nor have the heavy tarpaulins covering the construction equipment been removed during that time. Leaseholders who were to go into the building October 1 are beginning to worry about what will become of the deposits they put up at the time of signing their leases, with the prospect that new leases and new deposits with another holding company may be the outcome in the event the halt in work is due to financial difficulties, as has been rumored.

Crack C. & N. W. Trains Equipped for Talkers

The Chicago & Northwestern Railroad will inaugurate talking picture entertainment in specially equipped theatre coaches on four of its crack Pacific Coast trains as a result of successful tests conducted by the railroad this week.

The theatre coach test was made this week on the Northwestern's California Limited, with railroad officials and Chicago film men comprising the audience. With the train traveling at 55 miles per hour between Chicago and Milwaukee sound reproduction was distinct and projection successful, it was reported. A full, all-talking program comprised the test. "Second Wife" (Radio) was the feature, with Educational furnishing a variety of short subjects. R.C.A. Photophone equipment was used.

Warner Invasion Of South Side Spurs on B. & K.

Announcement of Warners' south side theatre buy is believed to have hastened the closing of the deal last week which formally gave B. & K. its Englewood theatre site. Plans for acquisition of the site had been progressing leisurely up to the time of the Warner buy. Immediately thereafter the preliminary dickering over terms of the transaction came to an abrupt halt, the deal was made and B. & K.'s architects instructed to rush completion of their plans for the theatre. The house will be a 3,200-seater and will be named the Paramount.

The site of the theatre is at 63d St. and Union Ave., and comprises only a part of the property involved in the transaction. The Chicago & Western Indiana railroad, owners, specified that the parcel of land had to be sold in total or not at all. It was this pronouncement, according to report, at which B. & K. balked. The abrupt closing of the deal, however, gave B. & K. title to four acres of property, the entire parcel.

The deal involved purchase of the unexpired portion of a 999 year lease held by the Wabash railroad. The unexpired term is 971 years, and is believed to set a Chicago realty record for the purchase of long term leases. The consideration is said to be far in excess of the $340,000 specified in the deed.

In the same block is the Stratford, recently acquired by Warners, and the RKO Englewood. Warners, Capitol and Jeffery, likewise, are not far removed from this location.

Spanuth Heads New Bell & Howell Unit

H. A. Spanuth, well-known Chicago film man, has been placed in charge of a new production department at Bell & Howell here. No public information of the character of the new department is available yet, but it is understood that it will have to do with the production of coin-operated picture machines for home and public sale.

Windy City Showmen Use Co-ops as School to Learn Buying

Buying combines are serving as a training school in film booking, at least as far as a number of Chicago exhibitors are concerned.

The exhibitors subscribe to a booking service for a year or more and then drop out, feeling that they have learned enough and acquired enough confidence to profit by their knowledge. The odd part of it is, most of them have. For instance, an indie who has been paying $50 for a picture joins a booking service and gets his pictures for $35. After a year or so, he withdraws from the service and begins once more to buy his own film.

"$50," is the salesman's pronouncement.

"You're crazy," the exhibitor retorts. "I've been getting pictures for $35 for the last year and $35 is all I'll pay. Take it or leave it."

His proposition usually is taken.

Chicago Warner Club Forms Buying Combine

Wholesale purchasing of all and sundry merchandise will be made available to members of the Chicago Warner Club if a proposal to be made at a meeting of the club this week carries. The proposal provides for the establishment of purchasing rights with various merchandising houses which would give members of the club the benefit of wholesale prices when bought through the club.

At the same meeting permanent club quarters will be chosen. In all probability these will be on the sixth floor of the new Warner exchange building here. Part of this floor will be occupied by the Brunswick offices, while the remainder, and the roof where a garden and solarium may be installed, will go to the Warner Club, it is expected.

Laskers Develop New Chi Chain; Acquire Their 5th

The Laskers added a fifth theatre to their local chain this week with acquisition of Lubliner & Trinz's Ellantee, a 1,500-seat house at Clark and Devon. After alterations and installation of sound equipment the house will be re-opened about September 1 as the Roxy.

A 10-year lease dating from October 1 at a term rental of $135,500 has been signed. It provides for an annual rental of $11,000 the first year; $12,000 annually for the next two years; $13,000 annually for the next two years, and $14,500 annually for the next five years. Provision is also made for extending the lease an additional five years at an annual rental of $15,000.

The operating company will be known as the Devon Amusement Co. Jacob Lasker is president, and Benjamin Lasker secretary of the company, which now controls, in addition to the Roxy, the Music Box and Bertha in Chicago; Ritz in Berwyn and the Villa in Cicero.

War Is Hell

Lloyd Lewis, B. & K.'s literary advertising man, is now working on a biography of General Sherman, in pursuance of which most of his time outside of office hours is spent in research and accumulation of data on the Union leader's life and times.

"I," June Provines reports Mrs. Lewis as saying, "am going to demand a pension of the government for a husband lost in the Civil War."

Publix Scrapping Historic House In Aurora, Ill.

Paramount-Publix will scrap the largest theatre in Aurora, Ill., the Fox, to make way for a new $1,000,000 house on the site. Razing of the building will begin at once and will deprive Aurora of one of its most historically interesting structures.

The theatre building originally was the Temple of Music at the Buffalo Exposition in which President William McKinley was fatally wounded on September 6, 1901 by Leon Czolgosz, the anarchist. Following the Buffalo Exposition, a group of Aurora business men planning the erection of a Coliseum journeyed to Buffalo to purchase one of the fair buildings. They chose the roof and framework of the Temple of Music and shipped it to Aurora, where it became a municipal auditorium. It was later replaced by a larger municipal structure and the old building converted into a show house and named the Fox theatre, after the Fox River on which the Illinois city is situated. It was taken over by Publix several years ago.

Committees Appointed by Chicago S.M.P.E. Chapter

New committees named by the Chicago chapter, S.M.P.E., at the regular monthly meeting here were: membership and subscription committee: E. J. Couer, chairman; M. W. La Rue, Robert Matson, Detroit; E. A. Bertram and Michael Ellison.

Progress committee: L. P. Langford, chairman; D. F. Tattenham, R. H. Ray (St. Paul), Robert Matson (Detroit), and E. J. Couer.

These, with the committees previously announced, complete the organization of the Chicago chapter. The local society's next meeting is scheduled to take place at the Adler Planetarium in Grant Park at an early July date, to be announced later.

Hollywood Cast Numbers 153,294 Counting Extras

Hollywood — Population of Hollywood now totals 153,294, according to new census figures. This compares with 19,996 in 1910 and 50,000 in 1920. This is divided as follows: Beverly Hills, 17,421; Beverly Hills township, 35,927; Santa Monica, 37,-190; Culver City, 5,669; Venice township, 8,819.

New Omaha Chain Has Six Theatres in Line-Up

Omaha—The North Star, acquired by the Popuar Amusement Co., is the sixth theatre to be added to this string since spring. J. Earl Kirk has been named manager of the theatre, which was renovated and redecorated. RCA Photophone equipment has been installed.

Theatres now operated by this organization include the Moon, Princess, Muse, Hamilton, Lothrop and North Star. It is understood the company, organizers of which were formerly executives of the World Realty Co., are negotiating for the purchase of five houses they sold before reorganization of the new company.

Inventor of Time Lapse Camera Dies at Capital

Washington—Howard Greene, 55, technical research engineer of the Dept. of Agriculture and inventor of the "time lapse" camera used in photographing the development of plant life, died at his home here, Sunday, following a sudden illness.

Greene was widely known in the film industry through his work in the office of motion pictures of the department. His "time lapse" camera was so constructed that a growing plant could be placed before it; at specific intervals, a bright light would flash on, a motor would start and the camera would take a picture. Usually these pictures were taken at intervals of a few minutes, and when the work was completed the full life history of the plant could be witnessed.

Stench Bombs Thrown In Three Texas Houses

San Antonio, Tex.—Police here are having a hard time rounding up stench bomb vandals. While they have been working spasmodically for months, the vandals Sunday night threw bombs in the Highland Park, Harlandale and Sam Houston Theatres, community houses.

The bombs were hurled through the front entrances of the theatres unknown to the managers until they were repelled by obnoxious odors Monday morning as they opened their houses.

"Ingagi" Panned, Toledo Theatre Jerks Out Ads

Toledo — Advertising on "Ingagi" was jerked summarily from the Toledo News-Bee when the picture was rapped by the newspaper as a phoney. The newspaper replied with a box, headed "Concerning Theatre Reviews," prominently placed on its theatre page a few days later and reading as follows:

"The Pantheon theatre has canceled all advertising copy in The News-Bee, giving as the reason an unfavorable review of the current film attraction "Ingagi."

"The News-Bee offers no apology for the review of the picture carried in all editions last Monday in which Ernest R. Moorefield, motion picture editor, branded "Ingagi" as a fake.

"'Ingagi,' under scrutiny of better business bureaus throughout the nation, has been banned by Will Hays to all members of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors' association.

"The News-Bee told the truth about 'Ingagi' and will continue to tell the truth about other pictures playing at the Pantheon and other first-run Toledo theatres, regardless of advertising contracts.

"The theatregoing public is entitled to know what to expect in a film before paying money at the box office and it falls within the province of any news paper to prevent infringement upon that right."

The Blade reviewer gave the film a kidding, but apparently without drawing blood. The Toledo Times notice was in serious vein, even remarking of one episode in Sir Hubert Winstead's extravaganza: "It's so real it hurts."

Local wisecracker discussing the jungle opera was heard to say: "I can't see why anyone should get steamed up over seeing women consort with gorillas. That's part of the free entertainment in any night club." Nevertheless "Ingagi" stayed two weeks.

Langan Finds Sound Ab'd Lags Behind U. S. Studios

Hollywood—John Langan, former Paramount director, has returned to the Coast after a three months' trip to Europe. He reports that Ufa, under the supervision of Erich Pommer, has developed a high standard of sound reproduction, but the other countries of the Continent have not yet approached the average sound results being obtained by American producers.

CONDUCTED BY AN EXHIBITOR FOR EXHIBITORS

"Swivel Chair Managers"

"DON'T be a 'swivel chair manager'", shout several of the large chains. "You should not permit yourself to be tied up with detail and office work if you know your job." "A good manager is a man who gets out around the town, meets people, makes friends, interests himself in all sorts of community enterprises." "At night he should be right on the floor and around the theatre. Etc. . . . Etc. . . . Etc. . . .!

Which is pretty good copy for any circuit house organ or a meeting of the managers. And, no doubt, those who create these slogans, flowery phrases and lots of other baloney, really believe it will work out.

BUT. . . .!

We know of a manager on one of those large chains who received five separate letters from five different men in the home office, all dealing with the same subject, but covering individual viewpoints.

Each one of those letters had to be answered. And promptly. And each required a little thought before writing so that the manager would not be contradicting himself by saying something to one man and reversing his answer to another.

And then there are those half a hundred reports on everything going on in the theatre, from hiring and firing of help, to how many lines of free space he was able to promote. Reports of shows. Letters pertaining to revamping of certain programs booked into the house. And, — well if you work for one of the big chains you know all the rest of the details which must be sent in regularly.

The riddle, as we see it, is, — how the devil is a manager going to avoid being a "swivel chair" man with all the mass of stuff he must answer from every conceivable department in the organization, to the gross of reports called for by home office orders?

Of course one way out for the manager would be to work twenty-four hours a day. But then, he might fall asleep on the floor and that would be a violation of Rule 126,449. Then again, he might try hiring a flock of assistants for the sole purpose of answering home office puzzles, but again he would find that such a procedure was an infraction of Article 365, paragraph 178B, year 1929-30.

Efficiency men seem to grow on every hat tree in chain home offices, so maybe they will discover one efficient enough to dope out ways and means of curtailing fool letters, and duplication of orders from home office "chiefs."

Shorn of its thousand and one unnecessary details, a manager's job is by no means too much for any competent man to handle. But if you load him down with red tape it will tie him up into knots when he should be out and around the community with a free and clear-thinking mind.

MANAGERS' ROUND TABLE CLUB

"LOTS OF LUCK TO SHERIDAN"

If you've heard rumblings and mysterious noises from over Jersey way, we'll relieve your mind of all misgivings and let you in on the good news and glad tidings that Hal Sheridan, popular District Supervisor of that portion of the Fox Theatre chain, was just appointed by Harry Arthur to the office of Division Manager for Jersey.

Among the visitors to Club headquarters are many men from the Fox Jersey division, and for months we have listened to them sing the praises of Sheridan and his method of giving the boys every possible encouragement and help. In these days of over-efficient chain management (not a pun, either), it's music to our ears just to sit back and hear those boys rave over someone, instead of eternally kicking about this, that or the other thing.

We know of mighty few men enjoying the popularity among the house managers as does Sheridan and with that kind of a foundation we can only see the greatest success for both Hal and the division now under his command.

If we may lift a well-known slogan, we would say, "Such popularity must be deserved," and in this case we say it in spades. Here's wishing Hal Sheridan and his entire division a trainload of good luck.

R. Mason Hall Of Norton, Va. Joins Our Organization

Pass out a fist-full of fingers and meet R. Mason Hall, manager of the Lyric Theatre in Norton, Virginia.

This new member states that he had been following our pages with interest for a long time now and he decided that in order to start the month of June off aright he would have to shoot in his application. So much for that. We want to say that it was certainly a bright June day when he became a member of the most alert group of life-wire showmen in the country. Hall has been in the show game for thirteen years and boasts the record of having worked for only four corporations in that time. For seven years he handled five houses for a southern amusement company, two years he was in business for himself operating theatres, three years were spent in Bristol, W. Va., with another corporation, and a year with the Publix organization, where he decided to resign in order to accept his present position, which affords him an opportunity to be out in the open and getting plenty of fresh air.

His present house is located right along "The Trail of the Lonesome Pine," and from what he tells us the air twenty-four hundred feet up can't be beat, the fishing is the best you can ever want, and the scenery is all that the pen of John Fox depicts it to be. As we are unacquainted with this showman's town we do not know what the possibilities are for exploitation but we do feel that whatever they are he makes the best of them and that he will prove an active member. We want to welcome him into the Club and hope to hear more from him in a little while. And if we ever hit that trail towards your region Mason, we're going to find out for ourselves just how good that fishing and scenery is. Oak?

Sound Installation At Oscar's House Is Now Completed

The reason that Earle Oscar hasn't been mentioned on our pages for the past few weeks has been due to the fact that he was very busy supervising the installation of sound at the Ritz Theatre in Athens, Ala., but now with that over with and his new policy well under way, he promises to be more active than ever.

Though we haven't his complete campaign on hand showing what he did to plug the opening, we managed to get hold of one of the double truck ads he promoted and we are reproducing it here. Bear in mind the fact that Athens is not a city; it's just a town, and you'll appreciate the work Earle put in to get this ad up. He hasn't everything to draw from that the bigger houses have and consequently must do the best he can with the material on hand, and you can take it from us that this special ad went over big in the town.

Another fine piece of showmanship was evidenced in the picture that he landed on the front pages of the local newspaper when the equipment arrived at the theatre. He called up the paper and had them send over a photographer to take a picture of the cases. The photo met with a lot of approval and persons were seen walking over to the front of the theatre to look at the boxes. This caused word-of-mouth comment and gave Earle a break even before he started in to work.

Now that he has this all set, and with so many fine productions scheduled for next season, it leads us to believe that he is going to furnish us with some corking slants on merchandising. Keep us posted, Earle, so that we can tell how things are going with you.

MANAGERS' ROUND TABLE CLUB

Matt Press Gives Us Some Dope On Show Experiences

Here at last is the first authorized version of the show career of Matt Press, manager of the Saenger Theatre in Hope, Arkansas, whose exploits have been recorded many times on these pages.

A hurry call to Matt netted us his photo and a load of dope on his life, and since we know that our members are always anxious to learn when the other fellow broke in and what he did in the years leading up to his immediate position, we hasten to present it as a guide to Matt's advancement.

At the age of twelve, Matt made his debut into the show business when he was engaged to make balloon jumps at Home-Coming and Fair Celebrations, with the poster paper proclaiming in screaming red type that the "Boy Marvel Would Make A Death Defying Leap From An Upheld Balloon Afternoon and Evening." After a number of years around the "lot," and when he had grown to manhood he was installed as agent and manager of the carnival. The off-months, during which the crew was in winter quarters found him employed in various theatres working in the capacity of bill-poster and on up.

His labor in the theatre enabled him to acquire a knowledge of projection and realizing the value of the movie, he deserted the carnival with which he had spent many years and entered into association with the Brownie Amusement Company who in 1912 were acclaimed as the pioneers of the "movie under canvas" shows and one of the first outfits to carry electrical equipment on the road for projection and lighting.

The advent of the embroglio of 1917 necessitated his resignation from the Brownie company and his entry into Uncle Sam's service as a buyer of hay to be used for export purposes. After the melee he rejoined the Brownie forces and was put to work establishing store-room picture houses in the smaller Louisiana towns, where he operated a string of eight of these theatres until his association with Publix the first of this year.

From what Matt has been doing with Publix it seems to us that his service with them is going to be both pleasant and profitable. We want to thank him for the active interest he is taking in the Club and we know he will continue because his fellow members as well as ourselves are plenty interested in hearing about his work at Hope.

After a rainstorm, one finds no footprints on the sands of Time. Good deeds, alone are indestructible monuments. The foundation is laid and construction goes on forever.

Louis Levine Moves From Worcester To Capitol In Athol

It is certainly an item of interest to learn that Louis Levine, former manager of the Regent Theatre in Worcester, Mass., has been offered the opportunity to handle the new Capitol Theatre in Athol.

We know that many of our members are personally acquainted with Louis and there's a good many more who know him through the Club pages. He went to Worcester from Boston where for more than fifteen years he was prominently identified in many branches of the show business, handling straight picture and combination houses. He acquired a host of friends during his two-year stay in Worcester and they, as well as we, know what a successful job he made of handling the theatre.

His new house, the Capitol, was rebuilt, after it was destroyed by fire last year and since its reopening has been conducted by the G. B. Theatres Corp. With Louis stepping in and taking over the reins it's safe to remark that he will no doubt have that house hitting on all six cylinders and in the smoothest possible manner. Incidentally, he continues working for the same men who owned the Regent Theatres, which were sold to another corporation.

We want to extend our congratulations to him and wish him continued success on this new venture and with him displaying the same brand of showmanship that has marked his many years in show business it makes it definite that he will chalk up another success to his credit.

MANAGERS' ROUND TABLE CLUB

Bill Levey Joins The Ranks Of The "Flying Showmen"

Showmen are taking daily to the air. The reason is obvious. Being good showmen they believe in keeping abreast of the times, and where formerly a bucket of paste and a lot of colored paper were the sole mediums (outside of curiosity, of course), that were used to bring them in, today these have been replaced by the most compact and concentrated form of show merchandising ever displayed.

All over the country, showmen continue to apply high power methods to their merchandising. Small towns and big cities are applying alike, whenever possible, the same form of showmanship. Though located in a small town, Bill Levey, big town showman, who handles the Beacon Theatre in Port Washington, Long Island, decided, long, long ago that when he set out to sell his shows they would be sold in a manner befitting the merchandiser of today. Past issues of the Motion Picture News Managers' Round Table Club section have proven the possibilities of his determined resolution.

With the booking in of "Young Eagles," he felt that the picture deserved to be sold in a manner that would have them talking about it long before it opened. Working on the principle that an interested person would ultimately mean a satisfied patron, he tied-up with one of the local newspapers and prevailed upon the editor to grant him a headline on the special edition, to be devoted solely to the Beacon.

. He then went out and tied-up with the Curtiss-Wright Flying School, a branch of which is located in Port Washington. From the airport heads he secured a plane which, together with a pilot, was placed at his disposal. This much done, he secured the co-operation of the newspaper editor and obtained thousands of copies of the special edition. The cut will show you what the paper looked like and from it you will be able to estimate the tremendous publicity value of a stunt of this sort.

In order to present properly the large amount of publicity he received we deemed it necessary to make over the front page and place Bill's publicity stories on it. The page originally contained the "scare head," a picture of Lindbergh, the story of the theatre manager's flight and a picture of Bill, himself.

The papers were carried aloft in the plane. A number of copies were signed by the pilot. Persons securing the signed copies were entitled to free tickets to witness "Young Eagles" at the theatre. In order to supervise distribution Bill himself went up in the plane, earning by his action the sobriquet of a "Flying Manager," and joining the fast growing ranks of other showmen who have become "Flying Managers." The papers were dropped about Port Washington and the surrounding towns and plenty of attention was drawn to the attraction being merchandised.

To further his friendly relations with the flying school, Bill showed them the value of imprinting a plug for his house and picture on the stock circulars that the air school uses. We are showing one of these circulars with this article in order that you may see how it is done, and if the occasion presents itself to you, your showmanship will be called into play and you'll come through with another win; or perhaps you can do it right now.

Bill got a corking break (one of those things that happens once out of a million times), by having "Buddy" Rogers, star of "Young Eagles," drop into the house to see his pal, Gary Cooper, perform in "Only the Brave." This served to get him a little more publicity in the local papers and the "made-over" page will show you what he received. Flying high as he did, is it any wonder that the picture received merchandising of the sort that couldn't be equalled in any of the metropolitan "de-luxers," and we feel that Bill is one more deserving of honorable mention in the ranks of showmen who are always doing something, and we know the future doings of the Century Circuit's first "Flying Manager" will be productive of many showman slants.

MANAGERS' ROUND TABLE CLUB

CIVIC CONTACTS

(From Fox West Coast "Now")
By GERALD BAKER
Manager Charleston (Ill.) Theatres

When I first took up the duties in Charleston last October, my first thought and objective was to establish only the most pleasant relations with the newspaper. In the newspaper lies a power that makes or breaks you! Through this medium only is one able to immediately place himself into the proper limelight. After that it is solely up to this man to prove all that the newspaper says about him.

My first encouragement came through the Chamber of Commerce. Accepting an invitation to join, I attended a meeting soon after I came. During this meeting I was given the privilege of saying a few words about the Fox Theatres policy. Naturally, to a small town, the word Fox meant much. It seemed as though they were then going to enjoy a source of amusement never before even dreamed of, and with the assurance that the Fox Theatres not only meant a better and bigger entertainment to the city, but an organization that desired a fitting place with the progress of Charleston, made quite favorable impressions on the boys.

My first contact was in advertising. Here I had the chance to meet my friends in business. A trip pass here and there assured me that I would see them at the theatre soon. Next came the opportunity to give Charleston its first midnight show, incidentally falling on Hallowe'en.

The entertainment policy of Fox West Coast theatres was established first, followed by the express aim to reach into the schools. I'll admit the school superintendent received a season pass, and it didn't do any harm. Then, at regular intervals the teachers of the several schools were invited as my guests to attend pictures I was certain would meet with approval. This gave me an entrance not only to the schools but into the school room. My teacher-friends then advocated and even advised their pupils and students to attend the school kiddies' Saturday morning matinee which followed.

Here probably is an example of Mohammed and the mountain. It's two to one that the churches will not come to you. Therefore one must go to them. Before entering the managerial field my profession was theatre organist. I knew how the organists in the churches longed to feel the pulse of a high-wind-pressure organ. I contacted the organists, inviting them down to try the organ. This automatically invited me to try their organs. The chance to play a solo in their churches rolled around, and anyone can vouch for the thrill a "movie-organist" can give some of the old sisters when they hear a professional touch on the old groan-box.

Neighboring towns: Here again I have been able to publicize the Fox theatres through "musical contact." The little city of Oakland, Ill., just 14 miles distant, was staging a home-talent play for the benefit of a citizen, crippled and in need of money to submit to several operations. Hearing of this, I offered my services in presenting this play for them. I secured five musicians and we supplied all the necessary music.

My first contact with the P. T. Associations organization was in connection with a benefit show for the high school. Tickets were sold by the students. They received 50 per cent of the amount of tickets sold. I then discussed pictures with the president of the local district. She gave me the names of all the pictures that were endorsed by the National Congress, mention of which I carried in my advertising. As soon as I received new bookings I would call her and get her endorsements. This resulted in the exhaustion of much valuable time but it paid big dividends.

A move to build a Kiddies' Wading Pool has just come about. Applying to Mr. Reid, my division manager, for a donation, he suggested, with permission to donate a cash amount if desired, that we give another benefit show and donate 75 per cent of the receipts to this cause. I got a front page break in the leading newspaper which also carried propaganda "that the show was always willing to enter into any civic project," etc. Along with this show we have installed a small pool outside for contributions from the grown-up passersby. One merchant unsolicitedly donated his regular display advertising space of three columns 15 inches for our copy.

Charleston Progressive Citizens Association: This is an association organized recently to quietly but effectively stage the Sunday movie fight. I contacted with a few of the live business men of the town—influential citizens—to fight for me.

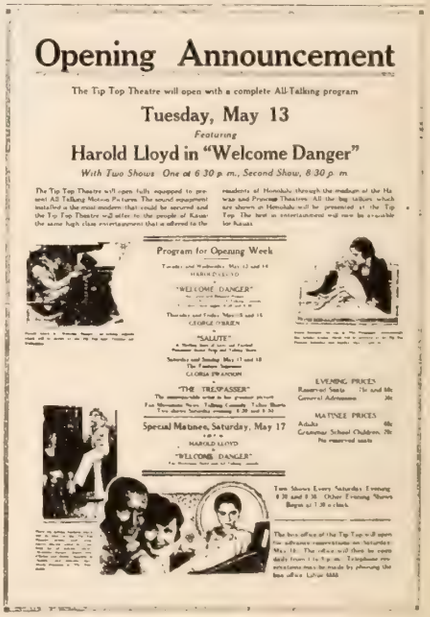
Urban J. Schwartz Composes Songs In Addition To Work

Meet a versatile Assistant Manager, Urban J. Schwartz, of the Abowd Theatre in Findlay, Ohio. In addition to learning the show game he seems to be headed for a spot in the song writing firmament for we are in receipt of one of his songs entitled "Just Let Me Call You Sweetheart," which, according to what we have heard about it has become a favorite with the residents of Findlay.



On the back page of the song copy, Urban's showmanship was displayed in the way he sold advertising space to the local merchants, and it is interesting to note that the theatre's ad was placed in a prominent spot. Distribution, we believe, is effected at the stores of the advertisers and at the theatre, and if they are using the organ at the Abowd another valuable plug is received.

If we checked up on our rolls we'd probably find a lot of showmen who are skilled in a great deal of other lines as well as the show business, as witness the number of artists, piano players, organists, ex-circus performers, actors and writers we have. With Urban's contribution we now have what seems to us to be an organization of the world's most versatile craftsmen. What do you think about it fellers?

Have you ever noticed that the man who has always extended a helping hand, never had occasion to complain about the other one being empty?

Here's How a Showman From Hawaii Boosts Business

Knowing that Henry G. Santos, manager of the Tip Top Theatre in Lihue, Kauai, Hawaii, was pretty busy installing sound in his house we did not expect to hear from him for a little while, but now that he is all set and has the house running along like a million dollar or so de luxer we feel that he is going to show his Club spirit and jump back again into the active fold.

In order that you might see that he is stepping on the gas out in his neighborhood we are showing you a full page ad he used to plug his first sound and talking pictures, and we guess that after careful examination you will agree with us that it is a pretty nice example of show merchandising.

Another slant that proves how he is entrenched in good-will with his local paper is seen in the front page space that his house rated on the talkie opening. The paper came through with a whole column on it and gave the programs for the week as well as describing the inner workings of the sound system. We want to compliment him on the excellent way in which he handled the campaign on the opening of the sound policy at his house and we hope that since a more fertile exploitation field is now open for him that he will keep us posted on what he is doing to bring them into his house. What do you say Henry, can we count on you to pass along what you and the rest of the showmen in your part of the country are doing?

MANAGERS' ROUND TABLE CLUB

Was This Showman Wide-Awake? Read This And Answer

Excavation work in front of their houses has often been cause for a lot of showmen to wear a harassed look, but it remained for Richard Boice, manager of the State Theatre in Mankato, Minn., to put the work of the "ditch diggers" to use as an aid to his house.

When they dug up the street in front of the theatre they dug deep. As a result there was a gaping hole that looked as though it reached to Australia, and as an illustration of it we'd like you to know that the pile of dirt heaped alongside the excavation reached as high as the marquee. It looked like a "dirty" trick to Boice—But.

He called showmanship into play. Since it was practically impossible to feature any sort of a front display, due to the dirt, he hit upon the idea of planting a huge banner on top of the baby mountain. And what he lettered on the banner has the whole town laughing yet. The copy read: "BEHIND THIS MOUNTAIN THE STATE THEATRE IS SHOWING JOAN CRAWFORD IN 'MONTANA MOON'."

How's that for sowmanship? It sold so well in the town that the picture seemed to do more business than would ordinarily have been done had the street been in prime condition. We want to hand Boice a little compliment for his alertness and we know that this stunt that we are passing along will more than meet with a hearty reception from the rest of the Club and consequently they'll want to hear more about him. So how about it, Richard? Keep us posted on your work, will you?

I don't care to fool any man; when he discovers I have fooled him he will do me more harm than my cunning did me.
—E. W. Howe.

And They Looked More Than Once At Ken Hoel's Gag

When we made a declaration that Findlay, Ohio, was in for a lot of fine showmanship due to the alertness of Ken Hoel it was no surprise to hear that Ken pulled a stunt recently that had every factory worker in town looking twice.

It happened this way. Feeling that "Paramount on Parade" deserved a boost, and knowing that a lot of his patronage was secured from the workers in the many factories around and in the city, he created the card that we are showing in conjunction with this story. The card measured eight by three and one-half inches.

Through an arrangement he made with the factory superintendents, Ken was enabled to put this in the racks where the time cards are placed. When inserted, all that could be seen were the words printed in red, "TO ALL EMPLOYEES A THREE-DAY NOTICE." And maybe the factory hands didn't leap over to the time rack to see what the meaning of the notice was. Many sighs of relief were breathed when the purpose of the gag was found out, and though we're sure we don't know, but since Ken says the time-keeping department expressed no unwillingness to have the cards put in the rack, there may be a moral in it some place and some fellows who had been "slowing up" may have looked upon the gag as not so hot. However, that's neither here nor there. This stunt went over very well and a good many of the factory employees were seen to smile when they entered the theatre.

Perhaps there happens to be a couple of factories near you. If so, here's your opportunity to secure some publicity that is really the equivalent of a personal contact and, handled right, will bring you in some extra box office business. Thanks, Ken, for this latest gag of yours and remember to keep us posted on the rest.

MANAGERS' ROUND TABLE CLUB

WHAT ABOUT GIFT NITES?

Now we're stumped. We've always had an aversion for "giving" things away in order that theatres do business. We were not unlike many others in adopting the slogan: "Good pictures—good business."

But we are fooled. Apparently we're wrong. At any rate, in justice to those who place stock in what we have to say, we must tell the truth—even if it hurts. And in this case it don't hurt at all.

We are official adviser to a friend in the business of running some theatres who pestered us until we could not get rid of him without saying O.K. for a certain type of "nite." We will admit it was a little different than the old China or Silver Nite gags; but when we finally consented, we felt like the kid who had been trusted to look after the candy store for a few moments and then ate some of the sweets.

We were not even interested in finding out what the results were on the night they started the gag. And we had mighty little faith in what the result would be.

Imagine our surprise when the "cluck" house of the little outfit doubled their receipts the first night. But we withheld comment. The second week they stood them in the lobby. The third week they had them out to the curb. What the succeeding weeks will bring we don't know. But, despite our prejudices against this sort of thing, it is really responsible for the "cluck" coming out of the red, and right during the time when everybody else seems to be crying about "bum" business.

This may sound like "backing water" to those who knew our previous opinion of such stuff, but facts are facts and we don't mind telling the world about it.

Campaign For The Price-Slash At Fox Detroit A Corker

The recent shake-up at the Fox Theatre in Detroit, Mich., seems to have some marked effect on the new men in stalled. The managing director and publicity man in the short time they have been in the city have been burning up the town at breakneck speed. Special shows, previews, stage shows and knockout publicity have featured the work of the reigning showmen to date. The latest to come out of the city is an eight-page model of a tabloid (pink color and all) to plug the new edition of the Fox Movietone Follies and the price slash.

Competition in the city has been keen, with all of the ace houses digging deep and throwing up dough. Anything to drag in the biz. and cut out the next guy. We are showing a page of the tabloid turned out by the enterprising press agent of the house and also a sample of one of the ads showing the price slash. They engineered a campaign on the price slash that had Detroit going ga-ga.

250 stands, 500 car cards, 1000 two sheet snipes, 250 three sheets and 150,000 of the eight page tabloids. The local dailies ran eight stories of the theatre with pictures of the special decorations. The tabs were handed out at all the big auto factories as well as at the theatre. On the opening night of the price slash, batteries of Kliegs played upon the persons entering the house. The hokum clicked from the start and the house has been packing them in ever since.

Competition looks so hot around there that we expect to pass along some revolutionary stunts in showmanship as it's a sure thing that the rest of the houses are going to hit back and from the live-wire members we have on our rolls, who operate de luxers in the Auto City all that we have to say now is to watch our pages for the latest results of the showman battle in Detroit.

Wilbur Werthner Engineered A Stunt That Clicked Well

Canada is represented again this week along the new member line with the enrollment of Wilbur Werthner, manager of the Crown Theatre in Toronto, Ont.

Having been in the show game for a good many years, Werthner is fully equipped for the position he now holds. He started a long time ago as an usher and gradually worked his way up until he was given a house of his own to handle. The first house he managed was the Classic Theatre and since then he has handled the Gerrard and another house in Toronto. The house at which he is now located has been open but a short time and consequently he has been very busy making contacts for future use, but in order to show us that he is going to be a very active member, he shoots along a stunt he used in connection with "Flight."

A number of cards were inserted in the heralds that plugged the picture. The cards informed the reader that on the following Saturday a plane would fly over the city at a certain altitude. Patrons were invited to write down on the card the altitude at which they thought the aviator had reached. Space was left for the name, address, and estimate of the height, and the persons coming closest to the right amount were rewarded. The results were announced from the stage of the theatre, and since all of the cards had to be given in to the box office a special mailing list was secured that was sure to prove very valuable.

Well, Wilbur, from the way you have started out it appears that you intend to keep right in front with the rest of the live-wires who make up our Canadian enrollment and you know the best way to do that is to keep us posted on how you are merchandising your attractions.

Live Ballyhoo On Marquee Sold Show For "Sig" Solomon

From all indications, at least to a showman's way of thinking, one of Ohio's leading cities, Youngstown, boasts some showmanship that ranks with the best being turned out in the largest cities in the country. When we start to talk about Youngstown, you'll no doubt get an idea that we are going to say something about S. S. Solomon, city manager of the Publix houses, with headquarters at the State Theatre. You'll have the right idea.

Solomon's activities have always furnished us with something that would be of value to Round Table members, and whenever we receive accounts of his work we hasten to pass them along. We are reproducing a photo here of the ballyhoo he arranged for "Devil's Holiday," and if it wasn't one of the most effective pieces of showmanship ever turned out in Youngstown we'll wear last year's straw hat next year. The large calendar in the center of the marquee was illuminated so as to show the play dates. On each side of the marquee five-foot-cut-out heads of Nancy Carroll were placed six inches away from the circular backgrounds. On each end of the marquee, two men dressed in devil costumes were posted. The men remained on the marquee from opening to closing with half-hour periods off for relief. What a stunt this proved to be, and it was all done at a total cost of forty-five dollars.

The State Theatre is so situated in the city that it can be seen from either end of the main street and the star gazing and jay walking indulged in by the residents when they had their eyes focused on the unusual display afforded ample proof that they were being sold on the picture. The newspapers picked up the stunt and gave it a free play in their columns, with one feature writer going to the extent of devoting his daily column to a description of it.

We also had on hand a layout of newspaper ads that were used to plug the picture, but lack of space would not permit our using them in this article; however, we hope that it won't stop him from shooting in another batch to us.

With "S. S." numbered among our active contributors, we know that the future issues of the Round Table Club are going to hold some more of his showmanship de luxe and all we can say now is to keep your eyes open for them because there's bound to be an angle or two that will be made to order for you.

S. H. HINMAN Says:

"I have just lately become a member of the best darn thing that ever happened in the picture racket . . . the membership certificate is right by me and the button is on the lapel. I'm proud of them both."

WE'RE ON OUR WAY!

Just about the time the ink will dry on this week's edition, your Chairman will be enroute for the Pacific Coast, with a few stops in between, where he will gather at first hand many interesting and important angles as applied to show business out in the West and Northwest.

As mentioned in last week's issue, we wish we were able to meet everyone of the thousands of boys who have made our job so pleasant by reason of their many fine letters and contributions for the Club pages. But we will take advantage of every spot we hit to say "Hello!" and hope that in the not too distant future we will be able to cover the entire country.

Between July 7th and 24th, those wishing to communicate direct with me on matters other than Club stories can address their mail to Hotel Roosevelt, Los Angeles, Calif. Regular material for the Club pages should be sent to Club headquarters same as usual, where it will be handled in the usual way and with as much speed as is possible to get the stories into print. Everything else pertaining to regular Club routine will continue during my absence and prompt attention will be given to all communications.

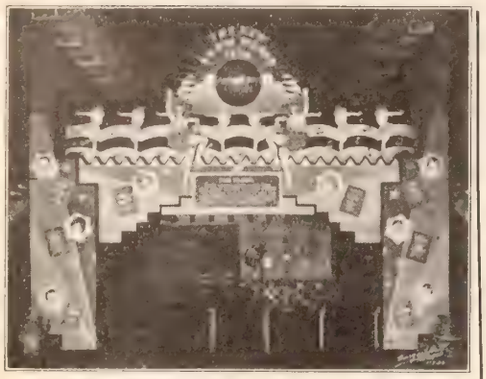
Moss Passes Along A Couple Of Hints That May Help You

There's two things that Richard L. Moss, manager of the Raymond Theatre in Pasadena, Calif., raves about. One is his job and the other the California sunshine. We'd like to inform him that when a showman does his work well, there's bound to be sunshine in any part of the country, and, especially so, if he loves to do it, as does Moss. Anyway, we didn't set out to start a discussion of the relative merits of sunshine as applied to the showman principle; what we want to relate is what Dick is doing to keep business rosy.

When he booked in "The Case of Sergeant Grischa," he decided that what the film needed more than anything was a good advance campaign. To that end he started his teaser ads running. The teasers stated: "Grischa is Coming," "Grischa is Powerful," "Grischa had no fluff or frills," etc. Cards of like nature were placed about the lobby. A day or so after the first teaser appeared people began to get inquisitive and ask themselves what it was all about. As a result, when play date arrived business went up way higher than usual. As a "Showman Tip" Moss advises that "MOST OF THE SCENES IN THE TRAILER SHOULD BE CUT OUT AS THEY ARE DEPRESSIVE AND GIVE THE IMPRESSION OF A WAR PICTURE. THE MORE MYSTERY THAT SURROUNDS THIS PICTURE THE BETTER IT WILL SELL."

In addition to this bit of ace show merchandising he also pulled a couple of other stunts that went over very well. One of these was in conjunction with "The Sky Hawk," when he announced that any Pasadena boy appearing with his mother at the theatre would be admitted free by paying his mother's admission. The newspapers picked up this stunt and arranged to have a photographer take a few pictures of it, which were later inserted in the paper. Another stunt that met with immediate favor was promoted with one of the newspapers and consisted of offering free tickets to the persons submitting the best reviews on "Anna Christie."



Moss reports that he is working on a couple of new stunts and as fast as the mails can carry them through to Club headquarters we will present them to you. We would like Dick to know that we intend to get some of that California sunshine soon, and we hope to drop in and see him.

BEAUTIFUL ART DISPLAYS!

—TO CATCH AND HOLD THE PATRON'S EYE—

The displays pictured on this page were created by Louis Sylvester, artist for the Tampa Theatre, Tampa, Fla. A complete description accompanies each display and should prove immensely valuable to other theatre artists anxious to improve their work or seeking new ideas. We are grateful to Paul Short, manager of the theatre, for furnishing us with this fine material.

Sunburst in red and gold metallics and clouds in blue tones outlined in silver. Revolving globe in green and blue with green and silver metallic letters. Background in silver and black with figures in metallic costumes. Side panels and top panel in brilliant colors outlined in silver. Silver metallic star heads and contrasting panels.

Background—dark blue with illuminated orange moon.
Foreground—Veranda and house in stucco effect, made realistic by fountains and pathway.

Rod. Degener Is Making Good On Latest Assignment

Upon taking over his new position at the Palace Theatre in San Leandro, Calif., Rod Degener, who formerly managed the Golden State in San Pablo, Oakland, set to work to introduce the town to his showmanship.

As he is now located in a place where the drawing power is much greater than his previous position, he was enabled to arrange a tie-up with a local school of aeronautics that helped him to put "Flight" across to bigger and better box-office receipts.

The building wherein the aeronautical school is located, being adjacent to the theatre, he arranged to have their street window plug the display that we are showing in the accompanying photo. This display comprised such parts as the strut, rudder, casing for Wasp engine, crank shaft, testing compass, altameter, tecrometer, speed indicator and the many other things comprising the "entrails" of the big mechanical birds.

He also arranged to have heralds placed on the Western Air Expresses operating through the town and also at the local airport at Oakland. With this stunt to his credit already, and him just starting, it seems to us that Degener is going to pass along some interesting accounts of his work. What do you say, Rod? You know that you've got a million more opportunities now to pull some corking stunts and we know you can do it.

Earle Holden Has One That May Also Help Your Business

Angle after angle comes to Club headquarters on the new stunts that Earle Holden puts over at the Fairfax Theatre in Miami, Fla., and the only thing we can do is to look at them and pass them along to the Club members because we feel that they are bound to fit in some place. Where Earle finds all the time to dope these out is still a mystery to us, but then when we stop to figure out that showmen always work along these lines it's not so mystifying.

This latest of Earle's was used in connection with "The Cuckoos," but as we have been stating for a long time that no stunt must necessarily be used with a certain picture, you can use it on any. He secured a number of cards measuring eight by six inches and printed in black and white. The cards carried copy on the top reading: "FREE ADMISSION TO SCHOOL CHILDREN!" The Publix Fairfax will admit free to any performance from Friday, May 30, to Friday, June 6 (after school) any boy or girl of school age who secured the written signature, address, and phone number below of twenty adults who promise to see the year's comedy sensation, "The Cuckoos," with Robert Woolsey and Bert Wheeler at the Fairfax Theatre (Playdate).

Underneath the heading, space was left for the names, address and phone numbers of twenty adults. The bottom of the card carried a note, "SCHOOL CHILDREN!" When completely filled out, present this form at the FAIRFAX THEATRE Friday, May 30, to Friday, June 6 (after school), and see the comedians of "Rio Rita," Bert Wheeler and Robert Woolsey, in "The Cuckoos," absolutely free.

The stunt went over like wildfire. The kids were chasing all over town getting names, and the wisdom of Earle's showmanship is seen in the way this stunt helped to boost up his mailing list to a few thousand or so more names. The kids also had their interest in the house pepped up. There are many slants that can be worked in connection with this idea that Earle has so kindly passed along and we are sure that if you give them a little thought you will find that a good many angles will be seen. Oak, Earle; we know that this one is going to be just as welcome as the many others you have furnished us within the past and will be filed away with the others that the showmen are waiting for the opportunity to use.

A HELPFUL HINT!

Emergency calls have long been a problem with showmen. One of the forms of the "emergency calls" is the lady who wants to know why you can't flash a notice on the screen that she wants her boy to come home to eat because he's been in the theatre for five hours. And so they run. But a necessary emergency call and one that no real showman ever ignores is for a doctor. The medicos like to see shows as well as most people, but unfortunately, while they are in the midst of the performance, a hurry call comes in for them, and they're forced to leave.

In the old days a manager didn't mind going up on the stage inquiring whether a doctor was in the theatre. A nod to the organist, or a wave to the orchestra leader, and the house would be silent; but with talking pictures, not so good. A manager can't very well stop the picture, especially on a disk show—so there he was. He could either make a Joe Humphries out of himself or ask every person seated whether they happened to be a doctor. Joe Campbell, assistant manager of the Capitol Theatre in Miami, Fla., has solved the problem.

WHEN A DOCTOR IS REQUESTED AT THE CAPITOL HIS NAME IS TYPED ON A RADIO MAT AS: "DR. DOE WANTED AT THE BOX OFFICE." THE SMALL SLIDE IS FLASHED FOR A FEW SECONDS AT THE LOWER RIGHT HAND CORNER OF THE SCREEN IN FULL VIEW OF THE AUDIENCE AND WHILE THE PICTURE IS ON. Thus no noise is made and the man paged cannot help but see the call.

Letters were sent to all of the doctors in the community advising them of the Capitol's innovation and the doctors' cards that later reposed in the box office proved the power of the stunt. PERHAPS YOU'VE BEEN LOOKING FOR SOMETHING LIKE THIS AND HERE IT IS; WITH JOE CAMPBELL'S COMPLIMENTS.

Civic Contacts Are Regular Features Of Creamer's Work

The special story that we are showing in conjunction with this article is one that we had intended to use in our recent Anniversary edition but through some oversight it was placed in the wrong department and as a result we were out of luck so far as using it was concerned. As generally happens, somebody brought it in and threw it on our desk a week or so ago and we felt that we'd better rush it through.

In the March 8th edition of the Club we ran a story about the advertising turned out by John W. Creamer, manager of the Palace Theatre in Muscatine, Ia., and mentioned the fact that the composing room of the local paper showed they knew something about make-up by following Creamer's directions to the least little dot. The paper got hold of our story and as a result Creamer landed this break absolutely free. It is certainly a pleasure to see the whole-hearted co-operation that he receives from every one in Muscatine and we know that it's the things like this that make him work all the harder to keep his theatre one that the town can well be proud of. And to give you another example, we'll cite the case of one of the local clergymen whom Creamer assisted.

Motion Picture Ad in Journal is Praised by Managers Organizaton

Manager John W. Creamer of the Palace theatre has received high praise from the Managers' Round Table of the Motion Picture News for his advertising work in connection with local motion picture attractions, an article in that publication on March 8 reproducing one of his ads which appeared in the Journal and commenting favorably upon it. The Journal's composing room is also praised for its ability in making up an attractive ad.

Concerning the advertisement, the article says:

"Creamer laid out an attractive ad, which we are reproducing below, which entirely dominated the page it was on and assured attention being given it. As you can see, the ad is made out neatly and carries all the selling features necessary in addition to getting in a couple of extra plugs for the Riddle serial and the coming attraction. Taken all in all, it sells, which is just what we've been stressing for a long time."

In a covering letter, Charles E. Lewis, chairman of the Round Table club, wrote Mr. Creamer, as follows:

"To the writer's opinion, the ad itself is as neat and clean-cut a piece of work as has ever come to our attention, and to yourself as the creator, and the newspaper's composing room for making it up the way you wanted it, should go a lot of credit."

It seems that Creamer was invited to give a talk at one of the church meetings and he chose for his topic, "The Movies and Religion." To drive home our point more clearly we will quote a paragraph or so from the letter of appreciation the clergyman sent to Creamer: "Just a line," the letter read "to thank you on behalf of the Men's Class of the 1st Congregational Church, Muscatine and in my own behalf for the interesting and helpful talk you gave use recently on "The Movies and Religion." We were all pleased to have you with us, and I'm sure we shall all appreciate a return visit.

". . . I feel sure that you personally would prefer to show more pictures of a wholesome, elevating type, and if the church people will support such pictures, we shall have more of them and less of the other sort."

The letter then went on to express thanks for Creamer's efforts in trying to keep the house running on a high levevl. And when you can get letters like this one in your town then it's a sure think that you are going to do business. Though we have never had the pleasure of being in Muscatine, we are sure that if we should go there we would hear everybody in the town handing out a word of praise for Creamer and the work he is doing.

Not only does he go about town and deliver addresses on the movies but he is always on the watch to pick up good-will in every way possible. When he played "Song of the West", he invited a good many of Muscatine's oldest residents to witness the picture. The local paper sponsored the event and he found himself with some front page publicity in the form of stories and pictures.

This showman has long been an active member of the Managers' Round Table Club and those of you who have followed his work during the time he has been located in Muscatine have noticed how he has steadily gained the good-will of the town and as a result has been seeing business boom at the house. As we know he will continue his active interest we look forward to seeing some more of his work in the very near future.

Anniversary Time Gave Lake a Chance To Tie-Up Dealers

When Clinton E. Lake, manager of the Tivoli Theatre, Chattanooga, Tenn., celebrated his theatre's anniversary recently, he used as the outstanding promotional work a tie-up with eight of the leading merchants of the city which resulted in the distribution of 10,000 contest cards and eight special window displays. The contest was so arranged that contestants had to guess the correct list of articles donated to the Tivoli theatre by the contributing merchants, each merchant having signs and leading information in his window which made the contest fairly easy and compelled contestants to visit each of the windows.

A handsome cedar chest was offered as first prize and a dozen other varied articles were also awarded. The 10,000 cards were distributed by the co-operating dealers.

A large cake, donated by a friendly bakery and other stunts were used to put the Tivoli's anniversary over to excellent receipts for the week.

The anniversary also gave Lake an opportunity to prove how good a "drag" he had in the town and the marvelous co-operation he received from the local merchants established him as one of the most popular showmen to ever merchandise a theatre's attractions in Chattanooga.

Arrangement With Local Bank Netted Brown Publicity

The many bank tie-ups promoted by our members are a source of interest to us at all times because of the fact that when you try to promote a tie-up with a bank, you'll find them always ready to co-operate providing your plan will benefit both.

When he played "Street of Chance," Gilbert C. Brown, manager of the Paramount Theatre in Wheaton, Ill., saw in the picture an opportunity for a bank tie-up and he hastened to take advantage of it.

In keeping with the idea of the picture, he suggested to one of the local banks that they "give" away two hundred safety deposit box spaces to winners of a contest he was going to conduct at the Paramount in connection with "Street of Chance."

The bank agreed, and one hundred boxes were awarded to holders of winning numbers at the theatre each night during the engagement. Besides giving the space, the bank put in a window display and paid for a large newspaper advertisement describing the tie-up.

According to Brown, there was much interest in the contest and fine comment was general, which statements are borne out by the fact that the picture had an excellent attendance.

BATHING SUIT GAGS!

Just a thought, but maybe you can work it up to something interesting and profitable for your theatre.

Tie up with a local dealer to give away bathing suits—either for youngsters, adults or both. You can make your own arrangements, but with a little showmanship it should not be hard to help boost a poor night or an off-picture.

What do you think of it?

Graduation Gags? Here's One Used By L. W. Carroll

The raft of stuff that has been pouring into Club headquarters lately leads us to believe that our men in the field are certainly determined to cash in with their Commencement Week stunts that have been featured for the past few weeks on these pages. From Maine to California we have had examples of the way ingenious showmen put this slant across and our latest one comes for L. W. Carroll, manager of the Majestic Theatre in Burlington, Vt.

Carroll printed an invitation card that was a corker. In fact, the cut doesn't do it justice, because you would have to have one in your hand to see the simple make-up that makes it an outstanding card. It is plainly printed in black and white and its beauty lies in the layout and quality of the stationery used. The cards were sent to the local schools and high schools and created a good deal of comment from every student and graduate.

Included in the envelope, which measured the regular size for formal invitations, was the letter that we are reprinting below. The copy on this is exceptionally well written, and for that reason we are passing it along, in the hope that it reaches you just about Commencement Time in your town. If you find that you are unable to use it this year grab your tickler file and put it away until next year.

Dear Graduate:

Next week is "Commencement Week," and the Majestic Theatre extends to you, as a member of the class of 1930, hearty congratulations upon the successful completion of your High School studies, and invites you to be their guest.

During the week you will review, with a great deal of satisfaction, the many happy days of your school life and although secretly thrilling at the thought that you have completed your school studies, will leave reluctantly your Alma Mater. The old study hall, the class rooms and your instructors you must leave behind; yet in the years to come you will fondly cherish these memories.

However, there is one institution in your school life that will continue—the MAJESTIC. Here, too, you have spent many happy hours with school pals and the theatre will in the future revive many school-day memories.

In addition to extending our congratulations, we wish to present you with the enclosed graduation gift as an expression of our sincerity. This card will be honored as an admission to the Majestic any day during "Commencement Week."

Most sincerely,
L. W. CARROLL, Manager,
MAJESTIC THEATRE.

At this time we want to thank all of our members for the splendid spirit of co-operation they have shown in the passing along of the various ideas they adopted to secure good-will for their houses via the Commencement Week angle. We want also to thank Carroll for shooting this one into us as we feel it is going to meet with an open armed reception. Now listen "L. W." from what we hear of your work up there we know that we should hear from you more often. How about it? Let's have some of these live-wire stunts so that we can pass them along and at the same time we'll be keeping tabs on what you are doing.

ALWAYS WEAR YOUR CLUB PIN

BRING BACK THE KIDDIES?

Kiddies can be brought back to any theatre that has lost this profitable trade. There should be no cause to worry about getting them, providing you want them back in your house.

The kids liked westerns? They "ate up" serials? Slapstick comedy and cartoons brought forth roars of laughter? And for the life of me I can't see why you should be losing out with the kids.

Are kiddie angles so difficult to create? Is it impossible to secure any westerns at all? You know they don't have to be talkies. Silent cowboy stories with musical synchronization will answer the purpose. Slapstick comedies are available, and always have been. Serials, both synchronized and talkie, are yours for the buying. Cartoons are a thousand per cent better from the kiddie point of view than ever before.

And how about those Kiddie Klub gags? Candy Matinees? Novelty Shows? Rainy Afternoon Clubs? Ice Cream Matinees? Good Lord, all you need do is read our own Club pages regularly and you'll find dozens of kiddie business stunts and suggestion. Not made up out of thin air or imagination, but actual stuff that has been successfully put across by live-wire managers all over the country.

If you will pardon our saying so, we think that the matter of kiddie business is solely a problem of management and showmanship. If you want to go out after it, you will succeed, but letting cobwebs form in your brain mechanism won't help the situation one bit. GET AFTER THE KID BUSINESS NOW.

Bakery Distributed Heralds In Bread For Robert Frost

We have presented many examples of special tie-ups arranged with local bakeries by showmen throughout the country and this time the tie-up has a new angle to it that was engineered by Robert C. Frost, manager of the Alabama Theatre in Birmingham, Ala.

The bakery agreed to enclose slips of paper with each loaf of bread sold. The slips carried the names of twenty-five of the stars appearing in "Paramount on Parade." The customers of the bakery were entitled to compete in a plan to decide how well known the various stars were.

The slip of paper carried copy reading: "Opposite the name of each star is a space into which you are to fill in the title of a recent picture in which this star has been featured. After your list is completed present it to the doorman at the Alabama Theatre and to the first 25 that are correct each day during the week's run of the picture will be extended a guest privilege, compliments of the American Bakeries Company and the Alabama Theatre."

TRAILERS AGAIN!

Visiting theatres during the past few weeks impressed upon us, more than ever, the importance of attention to your institutional trailers.

More care MUST be brought into play if you want those house announcements to get across in keeping with the dignity of the theatre.

No matter how well made a trailer is, if the wording is bad, the impression it leaves on the patrons will be equally bad.

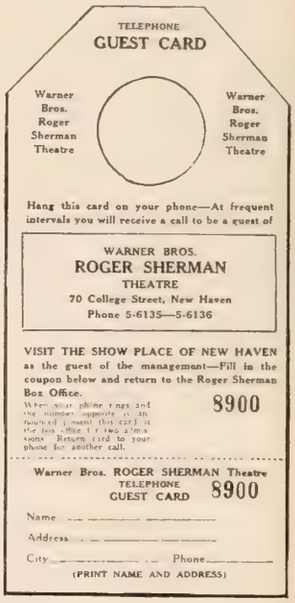
All the trailer companies have specialists on the job whose time is at your service. Tell them what you want and let them, if necessary, suggest the wording as well as the way it should be made up.

Morris Makes His Display Do Double Duty At Theatre

Once more, Walter Morris is responsible for some fine outside display stuff suitable for any kind of a good theatre. Walter, in the event you don't happen to know it, is the high-pressured manager of the Publix-Florida Theatre in St. Petersburg, Fla., and if you follow your Club pages with some semblance of regularity, then you ought to know him 'most personally. His various suggestions and contributions have been a source of great interest and value to other showmen the world over.

In the two photos we are reproducing with this story, you will note first the top one and focus your attention on the marvelous centerpiece which tops off the entire front. Incidentally, this same centerpiece was used as an advance lobby display for two weeks prior to the opening date. (Good idea that.) You will also note from the photo, the various other advertising pieces standing in front of the house which will give you some idea of the variety of material used by Morris in plugging a coming and current attraction.

The lower photo is a close-up of a beauty on the new "Dr. Fu Manchu" picture. Note carefully every detail of this display and how effectively Walter assembled the various portions that go to make up this piece. This type of stuff, invariably, attracts considerable attention from theatre-goers and regular patrons of a theatre. There is something unusual and eye-arresting about it and creates a certain amount of interest among the patrons, in that they are always looking to see what the latest creation of the house manager is going to be.



We well recall a certain theatre up in New England that was blessed with a large lounge room off the main lobby. They made it a practice of setting up some sort of an unusual display for every big attraction and after a month or two of this it was quite a habit for the customers to walk the sixty odd feet through the lobby just to see what the latest display was. Think it over boys. The idea is not so bad after all. Select a spot or corner in your lobby or foyer and try the same gag. It's not at all expensive if you handle it right.

Oak, Walter, shoot along more stuff and we'll gladly pass it on to the other boys who are anxious to grab good ideas.

Telephone Hanger Idea Is Working Great For Latta

Even the bees in the New Haven suburbs are buzzing with accounts of the work turned out by C. J. Latta, manager of the Roger Sherman Theatre in the Connecticut city.

One of the most active showmen in this part of the country, Latta, by reason of his showmanship has been represented on the Round Table pages many times. He, like the rest of his fellow members, doesn't claim that all his work is original. He gives the Club pages full credit for any stunt he gets from them and to-day he passes credit along to John Scanlon and his assistant at the Warner Theatre in Lynn, Mass., for this gag that we are reproducing.

The stunt was worked in the form of a telephone guest card. Patrons were given a card measuring six by three with a hole in the top to hang it over the telephone mouthpiece. The copy on the card stated that at some distant date the theatre would call and announce the number on the card. This would then entitle the holder to bring the coupon on the bottom of the card to the theatre and receive free tickets. The best part of the gag was the fact that the name of the theatre would always be before the patron, as the card was supposed to be returned to the phone again in the event that another call might be made. The gag met with great success in the city and the suburbs and Latta secured a corking institutional publicity plug for his house.

For a teaser herald on "Courage" he made up a novelty in the form of a card and placed it in a pay envelope labeled "What I Know About Women." Upon opening the envelope the card was found to contain the plug, in capital letters "IT TAKES COURAGE" (then in small type, the players, playdate, etc.) and in big type on the bottom (TO TELL—small type—"How A Mother Braved The World's Scorn For Her Children"!) At first glance the card would seem to state the answer to "What I Know About Women," as all that would hit the eye would be "IT TAKES 'COURAGE' TO TELL." This stunt went over with a big bang in the town and the picture received a lot of valuable word-of-mouth comment.

We have yet to hear of an instance where Latta's showmanship wasn't equal to putting any picture across and we are very glad to represent his work at the Roger Sherman on our pages.

Dave Borland Gave Roadhouse Nights A Good Send-Off

As we have stated many times in the past, when a showman knows his patrons' likes and dislikes he is helped tremendously in his newspaper advertising and exploitation campaigns. To illustrate this point, we are going to tell you a little bit about the way Dave Borland, manager of the Metropolitan Theatre in Regina, Sask., Canada, sold "Roadhouse Nights" to his patrons.

Feeling that it was time for a new star to be introduced to the patrons, he decided that he would plug Jimmy Durante, the Broadway comic, and to do this he made up a bunch of teaser ads, some of which we are reproducing below. Unfortunately the first ad of the series was lost in transit, but it was a duplicate of the second, with the exception that the bottom line read: "Wait and See."

When the playdate arrived Dave made up a cut-out of Durante and placed it on the wall of the theatre. As the side wall runs along the main car line and a great deal of traffic is run by daily, it is to be seen that this stunt is very valuable. In the photo that we are showing you will see how he uses the wall and also the cut-out letters that plugged the picture.

From what we have heard, Dave's campaign on Durante went over very big and when "Schnozzle" was introduced to his Canadian audiences he was given as cordial a reception as is generally accorded him in the States. We would like to ask at this time that you bear in mind the fact that, as Dave says, a side-wall is sometimes a pretty good spot to plug a picture on. Perhaps you too have a space that faces a lot of traffic and can use it; so note the way he uses his and go to it. Thanks Dave for shooting these along to us. Keep up the good work, and remember to keep us posted.

And while we are about it we would like to tell you how Dave grabbed off some more free publicity. It seems that the City Editor of the Regina Daily Star happened into Dave's office and noticing a copy of the News on the desk ran through it and came across a story we had written on the advertising at the Met., and in which we also mentioned the fact that the paper's composing room staff and make-up men knew their "stuff."

The editor was so pleased that he ran a special story about it and used it as an advertising plug . In this manner the house secured some excellent publicity absolutely free of charge.

FOR A RAINY DAY

Chalk this one up for the showmen who handle the Fairmont and Virginia theatres in Fairmont, West Virginia. In order to secure some free publicity and goodwill for the house, the theatres announced that a "Rainy Day Matinee" would be held at the houses on the first rainy afternoon in the month of June.

The special stunt was engineered for the benefit of the Boy and Girl Scouts in the town as well as the 1,500 members of the Saturday Matinee Kiddie Club. The newspaper picked up the gag and played it on their movie page. The idea of the plan, according to announcement, was that so long as it rained all of the kids and Scouts would be admitted to the theatre absolutely free but as soon as the rain stopped so did the admission.

If you haven't tried a plan of this sort in your town, here's an opportunity for you to get some free publicity. Lay the plan before the editor of your newspaper and we think he'll more than cooperate with you. It might also be a good plan, if you go into the stunt on a big scale, to run a little contest in the paper requesting estimates as to how long the shower would last. Nearest correct answers could be rewarded with free tickets.

If you'll pardon our pride, we would like to state that this all goes to prove that plenty of people outside of the industry also get a kick out of the News and the Managers' Round Table Club.

Mumford Had Eye On Female Trade When He Used This

If awards were being given for new angles in show business that were being hit upon by showmen, you could count on Leon O. Mumford, managing director of the Roth-Strand Theatre in Summit, N. J., to receive one.

Being very popular out around Summit, Mumford is able to procure almost anything from the merchants in order to help sell his shows. He gets window displays, merchandise, etc. So when he decided to pull a May Festival Week it was only natural that he tie up with one of the local merchants on a stunt that would be of mutual benefit.

In order to secure the good-will of the ladies of the town, he arranged a tie-up with a local milliner that was a corker. The milliner arranged to print cards entitling the holder to a cash discount of thirty cents on every hat purchased. The cards were distributed at the theatre and carried a credit line for the house. As an added measure of good-will, Mumford arranged to give away free tickets to the matinee to every woman who bought a hat at the millinery store. A notice of this was put in the program, and from the number of cards presented at the milliner's, it was seen that plenty of people paid attention as to what was going on at the theatre.

Here's a stunt that will probably be just what you are looking for. Why not take a run around to the millinery shop in your town and see what can be done along this line, for as any showman knows, getting and holding the good-will of the ladies means a lot? There's a number of other angles may also be used in connection with this stunt and a little concentration on the subject will show them to you. You might be able to work something in that will fit every member of the family. Or perhaps get in a plug for kiddie business. At any rate give it a little thought and see what you can do with it.

GOOD MYSTERY GAG!

A prologue stunt that had the whole town talking was used recently by Rudy Born, manager of the Coronado Theatre as a plug for his showing of "The Benson Murder Case."

In advance and during the engagement of the picture he supplied his ushers and doormen with black masks. Upon being questioned as to the hiding of their identities, the staff, in hushed tones, would answer to the effect that at present nothing could be disclosed as the entire theatre staff was under suspicion for the murder of Anthony Benson. It was further added that William Powell as Philo Vance was due to arrive shortly at the theatre and the mystery would be solved.

Besides giving their brief talk, the staff also passed out special heralds which carried a brief sales talk on the picture. The stunt proved to be one of the best ever used by Born and from indications it will be repeated again at some future date. Here's one that ought to inject pep juice into any box office, and if you feel that it will fit with your campaign we would say—use it. And remember, you don't have to be playing a "Benson Murder Case" to do it, either.

The words, "I forgot," have made many a man remember the day he uttered them.

Dummy Horse And Rider Were Used By Theresa Nibler

Manager Theresa Nibler gave her lobby a corral effect to exploit "Light of Western Stars" playing at the Electric Theatre, Springfield, Mo.

Some old rails were secured which were used in building a corral. The floor was covered with straw and a dummy horse and a dummy man were placed inside.

The dummy horse had a real saddle and blanket and the dummy man was dressed in togs to represent a cowboy.

To serve as a background to the corral display, was a banner cut out of the 3-sheet which showed principal characters and gave name of author, title of picture and leading man.

The display was really quite lifelike and attracted lots of attention. It undoubtedly helped to sell the picture to splendid receipts. And lest you forget or overlook the fact, don't forget boys, Theresa is one peppy show-woman. Watch her dust, and how!

She also worked out a neat little stunt with the boys who distribute and sell Liberty Magazines that reacted very favorably for the Electric Theatre.

The boys carried on their sacks, the name of theatre, title of picture and playdates. And to make certain that everybody knew about the picture, the boys would tell each of their customers about the picture, theatre and playdates—urging them to be sure to attend.

This little stunt on the part of the boys helped to advertise the picture in a way that was totally different from anything that had ever been done before. It also seemed to make quite an impression on many of the people to have these kids selling the picture.

Sherred Putting Plenty Of Pep In His Newspaper Ads

Since he has been located at the Mishler Theatre in Altoona, Pa., Carl B. Sherred has been turning out some good work along the lines of newspaper advertising and tie-ups that have done a lot towards selling his shows down there in Altoona.

Through his connections with one of the local papers he was enabled to arrange with the editor to run a serialization of "Ladies of Leisure," which picture he had booked in for a future date. The paper agreed to run the story in seven installments, using a cut with it each day. This gave the picture a valuable plug and at the close of the week, Sherred who had been plugging the film in his daily ad "gave it the works."

To give you an idea of how he injected originality in his newspaper ads we are reproducing one of the many which made up his fine campaign. You will note that by the judicious use of mats he has arranged a layout that seems to be very effective from any kind of a selling angle. The stars are all represented in it and by using a black and white tone he had an ad that would steal the page on any paper the way it did in this.

Another angle that made a hit with the townspeople was the special note he inserted in the ad to the effect that he would not invite the patronage of children under sixteen. When the residents of the town read this they felt that Sherred had their youngsters' interest at heart and besides they decided that they wanted to see the picture. And from what we know about it, the picture clicked with more than usual success at the box-office.

This is but one of the many activities that Sherred uses to put his pictures across and since we know him of old and know his reputation for showmanship, it seems to us that he is going to be presented a lot more times on our pages.

And besides this, we have further proof of his showmanship in the send-off that Larry Jacobs, publicity demon of Pittsburgh gives him when he (Larry) was out there working in advance of "Ladies of Leisure." Incidentally Carl, we want to thank you for the help you gave Howard Barnes in planning his Kiwanis Week, thus proving that we are "ALL FOR ONE AND ONE FOR ALL."

'RAY FOR RANDALL!!!

Shhh—it's a secret, so don't let on that we passed it along.

BUT—

Not realizing what he let himself in for, Randall J. Jerabek took the marriage vows on June 10th, out in Chula Vista, California.

Seriously, we want to extend our bestest to the couple and wish them lots of luck and happiness, in which Randall's many friends and members will surely join us.

Originality Always A Feature Of Sid Lawrence's Work

Showmen who keep up with the times are the fellows who are right up on top when it comes to bringing in additional business to their houses. The successful merchandiser of clothes must be up on the styles or he will not be in a position to dispose of his goods. Last year's automobile doesn't look half as attractive, to some, as this year's model; but when a sale of a used car is to be made, the dealer will generally try to add a couple of "new touches" to the old boat for the purpose of selling it. That's the way it is with showmen and their advertising.

In advertising, the fundamental principle is the same, but it often becomes necessary, in fact very necessary, to dress up the old stuff with new trimmings. Sid Lawrence, manager of Schine's Ohio Theatre in Lima, Ohio, has been in the show racket a good many years, and when it comes to laying out newspaper ads he is right there with the old pen and pencil. But then, does the ad of yesterday compare with the ad of today? Not by a long shot; at least, judging by appearances it doesn't. To-day's ads express more pep, life, pack a selling punch, and drive home a message. But the principle or the theory is the same. The eye must be attracted and an appeal made to the senses. This can only be done by keeping up with the times. And that is why Sid was able to make up the ad for "King of Jazz" that we are showing here.

In the ad you will notice that he has put in everything that he believes will be read by the readers of the local papers. He knows his patrons and that gives him one of the best breaks he can ever have along the merchandising line. All of his copy carries something that will appeal to the readers. Looking closely you will notice that he has even inserted his plug for the cooling system and, you might even notice that he is using a Round Table Club idea, in the Jack Frost cut.

"IT'S A GREAT LIFE"!

(Extracts from a Showman's Letter)

. . . I don't mean job, I mean position because when you have a position you explain how it should be done but when you have a job you go out and do it yourself. I HAVE A JOB!

. . . I can do and have done everything in a theatre except play piano and sing illustrated songs.

. . . sit down at the old square table that you clipped off the corners and made round so that all of the boys could get their feet under it.

. . . there isn't a secret in the world nowadays except the place where I get my beer.

To SUCCEED in business you must learn how to deal with human beings. It is not only that which is within you that gives success, but that which is in others—and you must learn to understand it and, so far as you need it, you must learn to get it.

Business success is the art of persuasion, the art of making friends, the art of producing a good impression.

These arts you must learn.

Movies Were In Infancy When Max Farbish Started

Today's magnificent movie palaces are a far cry from the store room nickelette of yesterday. "The king is dead! Long live the king!" might well apply to the rise of the motion picture. The old days are passed. Today, instead of the silent picture, we have the talking picture. In the old days silent figures moved across the sheet. Today they talk and sing. The old days are fast being forgotten, but to one showman they will live forever, for Max Farbish has been in the game since the movies first started.

His career began when the city's theatre district throbbed and pulsed below Thirtieth Street, in the days when the Casino Theatre was considered pretty far north. The first position that Farbish held was that of advertising agent in the old Fifth Avenue Theatre, located at Twenty-eighth Street. It was in this house that Madame Duse, De Wolf Hopper, Fanny Davenport, Joseph Jefferson, Mrs. Fiske and Maurice Barrymore made their phenomenal successes and gathered the large following they held in those days.

While at the old theatre he found himself with a job on his hands that, while it was perfectly legitimate, was anything but an advertising agent's job. It seems that Maurice Barrymore was wont to stroll over to the bar, between cues, and at times it also seemed as though Mr. Barrymore was inclined to forget all about the show as, foot on rail, he quaffed of the now-prohibitive brew, and, arrayed in full costume, he would discourse on the merits of the pugilists of the day.

Farbish was well read up on sports and to him fell the job of keeping the great Barrymore in the wings and ready for his cue. For five weeks they discussed fistic abilities of the season's K. O. Kaisers and Mr. Barrymore never missed his cue during that time.

Farbish stayed with the theatre for some time after it was turned into a vaudeville house by Proctor. Among the stars he advertised on the first week's vaudeville bill was Little Elsie, now the well known Elsie Janis. In fact, he remembers being raked over the coals by Elsie's mother for not putting enough pictures of her daughter in the lobby of the theatre.

During the years that followed he saw the complexion and character of the theatre district change. He saw the Manhattan and other old theatres come down in the Thirty-fourth Street district and vast department store go up in their place. He saw the new theatre steadily carrying the gay white way northward and leaving such famous houses as Tony Pastor's and the Academy of Music isolated relics of former grandeur. He worked as advertising agent for theatres in Brooklyn and Philadelphia and then took to acting as advance agent for road shows and ten, twenty and thirty-cent melodramas. Among these were the shows of Charles D. Blaney, who was the only rival of Al Woods in the production of melodramas. Later he managed shows on the road and became what was known in theatre parlance as "the head and back of shows." He managed actors who since have become famous screen stars. Two of the actors he managed are now in the millionaire class of screen directors, James Cruze and Robert Vignola.

Today he is handling the Granada Theatre in Corona, L. I., N. Y., for the Fox outfit and we know is making quite a success of it.

Adams Turned Out A Novelty Herald As Advance Plug

A neat little card that created a lot of comment was turned out by K. L. Adams, manager of the Liberty Theatre in Sunnyside, Washington as a plug for "Hot for Paris."

He tied up with a local auto service company and for space on the card they agreed to cooperate with him on the printing and distribution of the cards. As the service station does a great deal of business, a good many of the trick cards were given away.

The card measured 3¾ by 2½ inches and was printed in black on brown. The copy read: Licensed Operator! State By Way Department. This Certifies That The Countersigned Has Been Licensed As A BACK SEAT DRIVER Of All Motor Vehicles Subject To Rules Regulating Rear Seat Operation NOT TRANSFERABLE—Carry This Card With You And Present Same When Authority Is Requested. 1930.

The other side of the card carried a plug for "Hot for Paris," and the local dealer. We would like to bring to your attention again, the fact that this stunt can be used on any picture at all. The only thing necessary is to see that your copy ties in well with the picture and the dealer who co-operates with you. We want to thank Adams for passing this one along to us as we feel sure that it will be put to use by some members of the Club. As he is located with the Senior and Junior Mercy group of live-wire showmen we know that the future will bring us a lot more ideas from his vicinity. Give our regards to the rest of the boys on the circuit "K. L." and let's hear from you again.

Prendergast Talks On Merchandising In Br. West Indies

This is the way E. N. Prendergast, manager of the Lyric Theatre in Port Maria, Jamaica, British West Indies, opens his house nightly. Feeling that the rest of the Club would be interested in learning how showmen from other countries do this, we inquired of Mr. Prendergast the methods he uses. So in answer to our query he states:

"In my present case, the procedure is very simple. I use two Box Offices which serve three sections of seating. The highest grade of tickets are sold from one Box Office located at the eastern section of the Lobby, and the other Box Office serves the two lower sections. The Patrons, after purchasing their tickets, proceed unaided to the respective entrances attended by the Gateman, who in some cases may advise the Patrons respecting their comfort, etc., and then on to their seats.

"The Theatre doors are opened at 7.30 p.m. and tickets are sold from that moment. The lights are cut off at 8 o'clock sharp, when our Orchestra plays suitable preludes, while at the same time our Commercial Advertising Slides and picture advertising slides are screened. Immediately after the last slide is projected we screen a News Reel or two Comedy Reels, followed in quick succession by the main event, the Picture.

"In another letter which I hope to forward you soon I shall inform you of some methods which I employ in my publicity work, also screen competitors, etc."

Thanks, Mr. Prendergast, for your kindness in letting us pass along the above, and we want you to know that we, as well as the rest of the Club, are looking forward to your next letter, because if there's anything we like to look over it's the publicity methods displayed by other showmen.

Special Program Made Up By Ralph Noble Is A Winner

A program that has them sitting up and taking notice is distributed by the Arkansas Amusement Corporation in Little Rock, Arkansas, and through the kindness of Ralph Noble, advertising manager of the circuit we are enabled to tell you about it.

The house organ is called "The Talkee" and contains sixteen pages. The make-up of it would do credit to any house in the country. The cover designed by Fay Coy and Wardell Jukes, staff artists, is a knockout and shows a parrot, in color, perched upon a futuristic or modernistic setting. The interior of the program contains ads from the local merchants that are made up in the most approved style. This no doubt helps to defray expenses in printing the program.

From the news angles, the book is chock full of breezy bits concerning the coming attractions and the fads and foibles of the stars. Special space is given to explain the making of sound pictures. Then there's a little column entitled "talkie dictionary." Another very nice arrangement is the lay-out of the page devoted to "Paramount on Parade." On the page every scene is set down, together with a brief synopsis.

We regret that we cannot do sufficient justice to the program in this article and we are unable to reproduce a picture of it due to the coloring on the front cover. However, if you would like to get a look at it we are sure that if you'll drop a line to Mr. Noble at the address given above, he'll be more than glad to send you a copy.

LATEST NEW MEMBERS

LESLIE F. LARSEN is the manager of the Screenland Theatre in Wilson, Kansas, out where the wide-open spaces allow ample opportunity for showmanship. We have been in a number of cities and towns in Kansas, but at the moment don't recall passing near Wilson, but we have a hunch that Leslie is going to put the town on the map via the pages of the Managers' Round Table Club through his stunts. Right, Leslie?

———Wear Your Club Pin! ! !———

ALTON B. ANDERSON manages the Pontiac Theatre in Saranac Lake, N. Y. In the Upstate Division of Fox, we know there is a large number of up-to-the-minute showmen, and now that Mr. Anderson has signed his name to one of our membership blanks he no doubt will set to with a vengeance to keep right up among the leaders both in business getting and exploitation stunts.

———Wear Your Club Pin! ! !———

L. W. ORLOVE is the manager of the Uptown Theatre in Milwaukee, Wis., and as he has been represented on our pages before, this introduction is really not necessary, but in order that our later members may know who he is, we would like them to know that he is one of the most active showmen in Milwaukee and his future work will prove this more and more.

———Wear Your Club Pin! ! !———

CHARLES R. ORR is the assistant manager of the Strand Theatre in Waterloo, Ia. As a good many showmen know, the Strand is managed by Walter D. Fleck, himself an active Club member, and such being the case, it seems to us that Orr is going to pick up enough knowledge of the game to be running a house by himself in a little while. Keep us posted on your activities, Charles, so that we can keep tabs on your progress.

———Wear Your Club Pin! ! !———

D. MERRITT manages the Strand Theatre in Birmingham, Ala. In the past, our pages have carried a number of accounts of the doings of the Alabama live-wires, and while we can't recall off-hand, we think that Mr. Merritt's name has been mentioned in connection with some of the stunts that were called to our attention. Why don't you drop us a line or two, Mr. Merritt, and let's know more about you?

———Wear Your Club Pin! ! !———

JACK JACKSON is the Publicity Director of the Saenger Theatre in New Orleans, La., and whoever isn't aware of the rep that this theatre has made for itself by the live-wire stunts that have come from there doesn't know his show business. We are unacquainted, in a way, with Mr. Jackson, but we know that he will remedy this by shooting in a batch of his stuff so that we can tell the rest of the bunch more about him.

———Wear Your Club Pin! ! !———

MARSH A. FOWLER is the assistant manager of the Allerton Theatre in the Bronx, N. Y., and he needs no other recommendation, for he is working at the house managed by Syd Oshrin, who as a veteran member of the Round Table has been represented on our pages ever since we started. In fact, Marsh, you're going to learn a lot about the business working with a showman like Syd and we hope that you'll keep right on going ahead.

WALTER M. POWERS is the manager of the LaRoy Theatre in Portsmouth, Ohio. He has been in the show business a number of years and, from what he is doing out in his town now, we know that he will prove a very active member of the Club, and if you'll keep your eye on future issues you'll see how he packs them in. Oak, Walter; glad to note that you are getting the real Club spirit right off the bat. Keep it up.

———Wear Your Club Pin! ! !———

LOUIS SAIDENBERG manages the Lyric Theatre in Jackson, Tenn. Mr. Saidenberg's membership boosts our Tennessee enrollment up another notch and if he keeps right in line with the rest of the group of showmen who make up the amusement sellers of the state, we will know that we have added another active and up-to-date merchandiser. By the way, Louis, why not send us in a photo of yourself?

———Wear Your Club Pin! ! !———

LOUIS LAMM manages the Mirth Theatre in Milwaukee, Wis., and as Louis is probably aware we have a number of live-wire showmen from his territory on our rolls. We would like to see him step right in with the group of hustlers and we feel that by shooting us in some accounts of his stuff we'll find that he is stepping along with them. What do you think Louis?

———Wear Your Club Pin! ! !———

MITCHELL SMITH is the manager of the Paramount Theatre in Youngstown, Ohio and now that he is a full fledged member of the Club we hope he is going to continue the record breaking stunts that have featured the merchandising of the Paramount's attractions in the past. When you send us in your first contribution, Mitchell, we'd like you to enclose your photo so that we can give you a regular send-off.

———Wear Your Club Pin! ! !———

GILBERT C. BROWN manages the Paramount Theatre in Wheaton, Ill., and since he has been represented on our pages before we felt that his work was sufficient introduction. However, Gilbert, just in case there's some of your fellow members haven't as yet gotten a line on your work. How about some more?

———Wear Your Club Pin! ! !———

JOHN M. LEVITT is the manager of the Palace Theatre in New Britain, Conn. We learn from him that Bill Evans is located in his town and that leads us to conclude that a spirit of friendly rivalry is sure to be aroused that will be productive of some good angles. And by the way, John, we think your application makes New Britain 100% Round Table. However, if we are a little wrong, why not tell us about it.

THE Club is anxious to publish photographs of every member and would, therefore, appreciate receiving as many as possible for use in future issues of the Club columns. If you have not already done so, PLEASE send us your own photo at once. Thank you.

COMPLETE RELEASE CHART

Productions are listed according to the names of distributors in order that the exhibitor may have a short-cut toward such information as he may need, as well as information on pictures that are coming. Features which are finished or are in work, but to which release dates have not been assigned, are listed in "Coming Attractions." Running times on features and shorts are being added as rapidly as the information becomes available.

TO obtain that "Snap" and "Pep" so necessary to a perfectly projected "Sound," "Silent" or a "Magnafilm" picture, it is absolutely necessary to deliver to the screen the utmost in "LPA" (Light Per Ampere).

From an economy standpoint the utmost in "LPA" is also vital.

Peerless High Intensity Reflector Arc Lamps are a necessity for the perfect projection of Sound Pictures. Its distinctive features are many, their ability to deliver uncomplainingly is an inbuilt quality.

Correct engineering principles and precision standards employed in their manufacture have personified in the name "PEERLESS" unapproachable leadership in its field.

The first cost of Peerless High Intensity Reflector Arc Lamps is no more than what can be paid for less and as for maintenance expense?—far less than any.

Only a few more patrons a day needed to pay for it.

The smallest theatre can equip profitably with Western Electric.

New equipment — new plan — new prices — starting as low as $2950, no down payment, average weekly rental $42.28, including service — bring the highest quality sound within the reach of every theatre.

Western Electric's new equipment upholds the same standard for quality and uninterrupted programs, set in theatres now giving 150,000 performances weekly.

Prices now in effect cannot be lowered unless quality is sacrificed — and this will not be done.

Don't be misled into waiting. Get your share now of the increased attendance Western Electric Sound Equipment brings — as proved day after day in 5500 theatres.

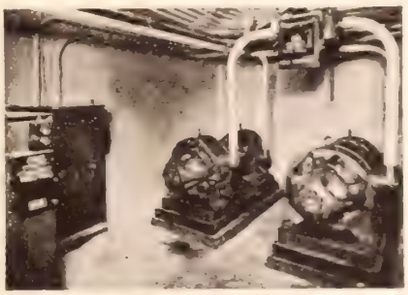
a Specialized Art

IN the projection room, the costly achievements of experts—star performers, directors and photographers—are at the tender mercy of the projectionist and his equipment. To present the carefully planned endeavors of the producers, it is essential that exacting scientific treatment be given the film in its showing.



That every detail may be faithfully shown and every scene clearly and distinctly reproduced, the projectionist requires a steady, reliable flow of electric power.

Westinghouse motor-generator equipment, designed and built by specialists in the art of electrical equipment manufacturing, gives the projectionist complete assurance of a source of direct current making for the satisfactory presentation of pictures. Its ample capacity permits changeovers without interrupting the run of the picture.

This equipment is supplied complete with all necessary accessories, including starters, control panels and ballast rheostats.

Look to the Future Behind Your Dimmerboard

C-H "Simplicity" Dimmer Plates are supplied by leading switchboard manufacturers with the board they install. Fig. 1 shows the front of a typical board, Fig. 2 the rear view showing C-H plates and Fig. 3 the complete plate. Dimmer plates are the heart of any lighting control board. Make sure the C-H trade-mark is on your plates for long life, smooth lighting control and low maintenance.

THE dimmer plates behind the dimmerboard are the heart of your lighting control. When you buy a board today be sure they meet your requirements and operate with unchanged efficiency through the years.

Cutler-Hammer "Simplicity" Dimmers, famous for their "velvet-smooth" control of all lighting effects, are extremely compact, permit double the number of circuits to be handled in a given space and are easily adapted to every new requirement. They meet the needs of a small show house as well as the largest.

C-H "Simplicity" Dimmers have many refinements not to be found in the ordinary dimmer plate. The many contacts spaced in very gradual steps assure smooth, flickerless control of all lighting effects from full brilliancy to black out. Direct rack and pinion operation removes play or backlash.

For over thirty years—in show houses in every part of the country—Cutler-Hammer Dimmers have been known and asked for by particular theater owners. Their installation on your new dimmerboard will insure long, trouble-free life from your dimmer plates—that important mechanism that is the heart of your switchboard.

Your architect or electrician knows the best dimmer plates you can buy. Ask them about Cutler-Hammer "Simplicity" Dimmers! Identify them by the C-H trademark.

Paramount Theatre and Office Building, New York. Theatre equipped throughout with comfortable, acoustically correct American Seating Company Chairs. C. W. & Geo. L. Rapp, Architects.

So your patrons may enjoy the play or movie infinitely more ...Reseat!

Illustrating Theatre Chair No. 7860

A chair of this type was installed in the famous Chicago Civic Opera House. Full upholstered back, spring edge seat and Moderne Standards. A triumph in building into theatre chairs maximum absorption values. Only one of the many American Seating Company types and styles of theatre seating.

"CAME THE TALKIES"... sound reproduction to synchronize with photography. Theatres dressed up... another era dawned. Beauty, harmony, comfort and acoustical perfection. That is what the public asked of theatres.

Electricity had wrought another miracle. Architects made contribution. Sound to be understood, must carry without reverberation, without echo.

So, American Seating Company saw a modern problem. They undertook acoustical research. They found that chairs of certain types have greatest sound absorption. That seats could aid the ear—as well as make for comfort and beauty.

And soon the motion picture industry found that chairs meant more than physical comfort—more than beauty to harmonize with the design and decorative charm of interiors. That to attract patrons—to keep them coming to the theatre, new sound equipment was not enough. New chairs were needed . . . chairs whose acoustical properties brought to their audiences the speaking or singing voice—clearly and undistorted.

To many, reseating—the replacing of old chairs with new—corrected sound distortions, and brought the bigger box office receipts that new sound equipment failed to bring. New, acoustically correct chairs paid for themselves in attracting capacity crowds.

COOLING that matches the UPS and DOWNS of temperature

ADDED dividends in actual dollars are rewarding the users of Arctic Nu-Air. From far and near folks come to enjoy it. Regardless of the outside heat, Arctic Nu-Air keeps your audience refreshed and contented.

With this system you get perfect results—avoiding both the drafty discomforts of overcooling and the meager results from insufficient cooling. It matches the daily ups and downs of temperature. With its amazing flexibility of control you can get exactly the results you require.

Remote Hydraulic Control

Only the exclusive remote hydraulic control of the Arctic Nu-Air blower and its multi-speed pulley could give such flexibility and perfect results. With its infinite number of speeds and with our exclusive Duo-Deflector you can increase or decrease the speed and volume of cooling air currents in any part of the auditorium to just the correct extent.

Why pay more? The right size for your theatre, with generously ample capacity, costs a great deal less than you probably expect. Find out! Write us today for this book and complete information.

Theatre Design Breaks With The Past

ARCHITECTS MUST FORMULATE NEW IDEAS TO REFLECT NEW INFLUENCES OF INVENTION AND TREND OF PUBLIC TASTE

By ARTHUR FREDERICK ADAMS

It is a far cry from the nickelodeon of yesterday to the palatial motion picture theatre of today—and yet the period of transition covers relatively a short span of years.

Remarkable progress has been made in the last few years in the architectural and decorative treatment of theatres planned wholly for the exhibition of films and allied entertainments presented at our successful motion picture playhouses.

It is the belief of the author that the same progress which has been made in the last few years in the building of mammoth theatres will continue. And that it is but a short time when an entirely different problem will present itself due to the desire of owners and architects to search for a different and novel treatment of the theatres which are yet to come.

No type of building has advanced more than the theatre building. No building other than the theatre presents to the architect such complex problems. As, for example, the arrangement of horizontal and vertical circulation, provision for the handling of great crowds and the handling of treatments of form and color that will keep the theatre-going public interested and entertained.

It was but a comparatively few years ago that practically all theatres throughout this country were of a mediocre type—small, dingy, and rather make-shift buildings devoted to a form of entertainment still in the experimental stage.

Progress in Theatre Design

Even our best legitimate theatres were far from being well-planned buildings, and the designing of interiors and decorative treatments was at a very low ebb.

The motion picture industry is today considered one of the foremost enterprises of the country. At the start this industry had an uphill grind in order to achieve a reasonable recognition, but through its vast amount of research work it has been enabled to do the most outstanding, seemingly impossible things in the way of building up this vast enterprise.

The problem of designing theatres of tomorrow—those which are to be built in the immediate future—is one which is now confronting the theatre architect. Inasmuch as the motion picture industry will continue to advance and make new improvements, the designing of theatres must advance to keep up with the industry and carry forward on an even greater scale that which has been done in the past.

The firm with which I am associated, specialists in theatre design, has been making a most extensive survey of conditions throughout the country, and now is engaged in formulating a program which in its final development will bring forth new ideas, new arrangements, and unforeseen treatment for the type of motion picture theatre that is to establish itself in the immediate future.

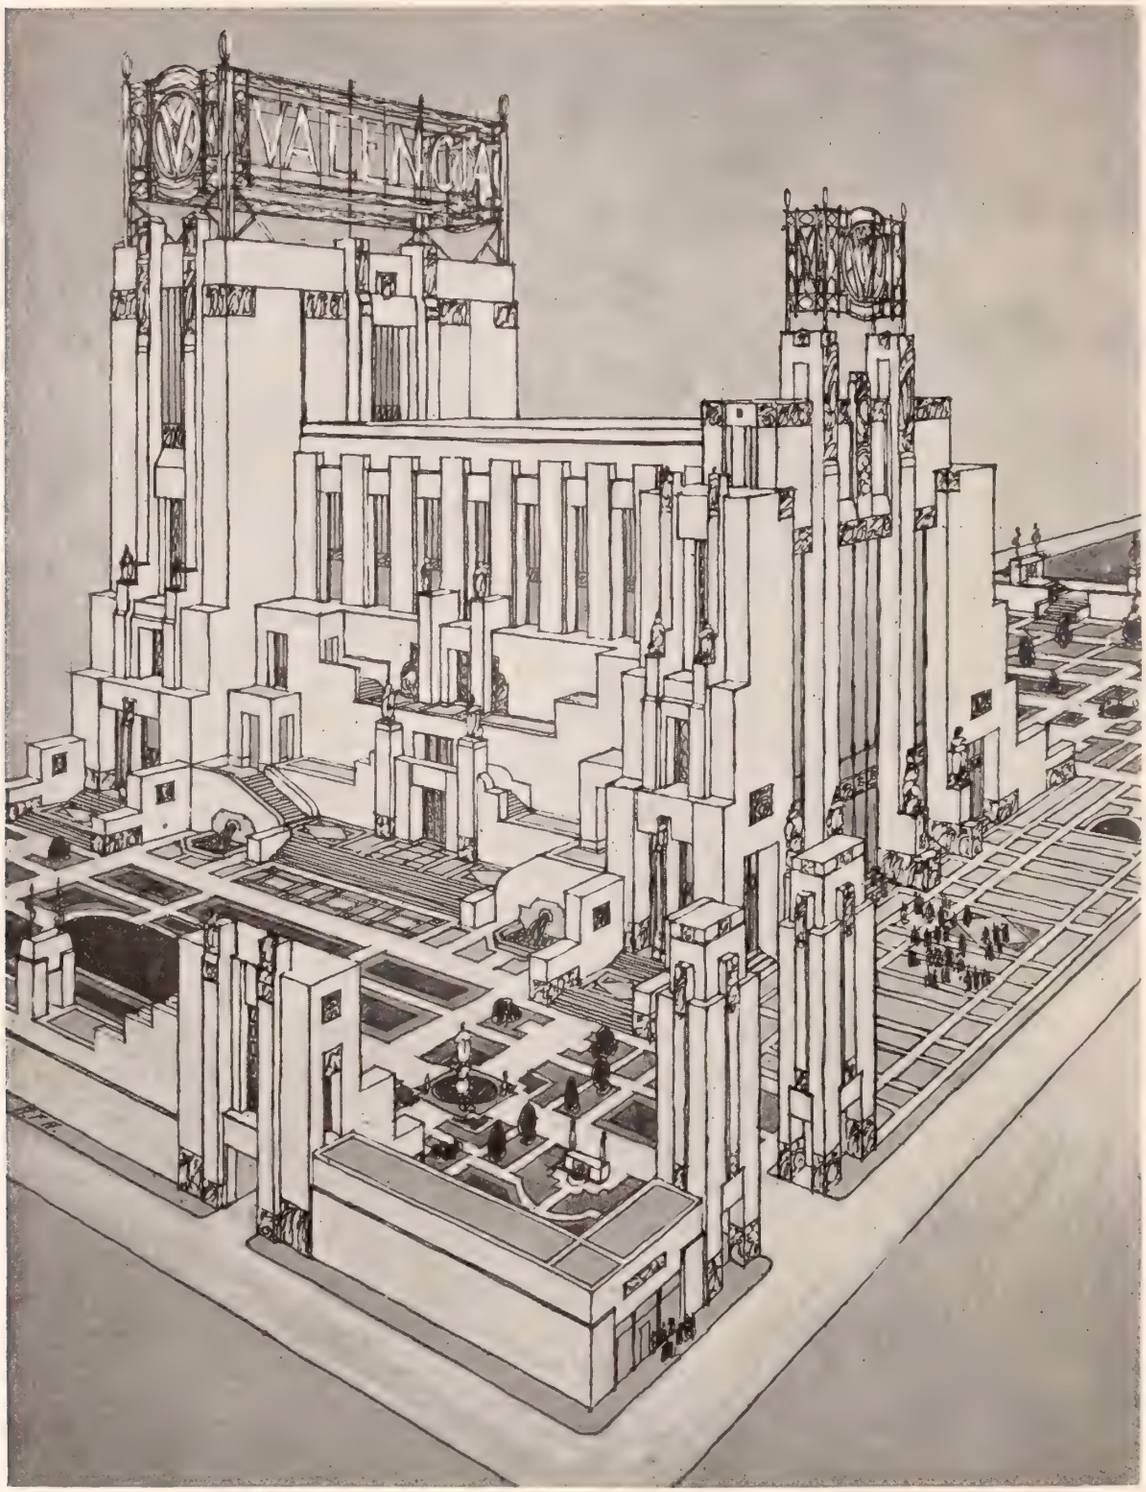
For with the introduction of sound or talking pictures, together with the increased size of the picture screen, two new and important extensions of the motion picture art are developing at a rapid rate, and it will not be long before these new features will be brought to a degree which is certain to influence vastly the design of auditoriums—particularly the stage and proscenium portions.

Audiences Theatre Conscious

We have noted that the introduction of the talking picture has made patrons more theatre-conscious than they were in the days of the silent form of screen drama.

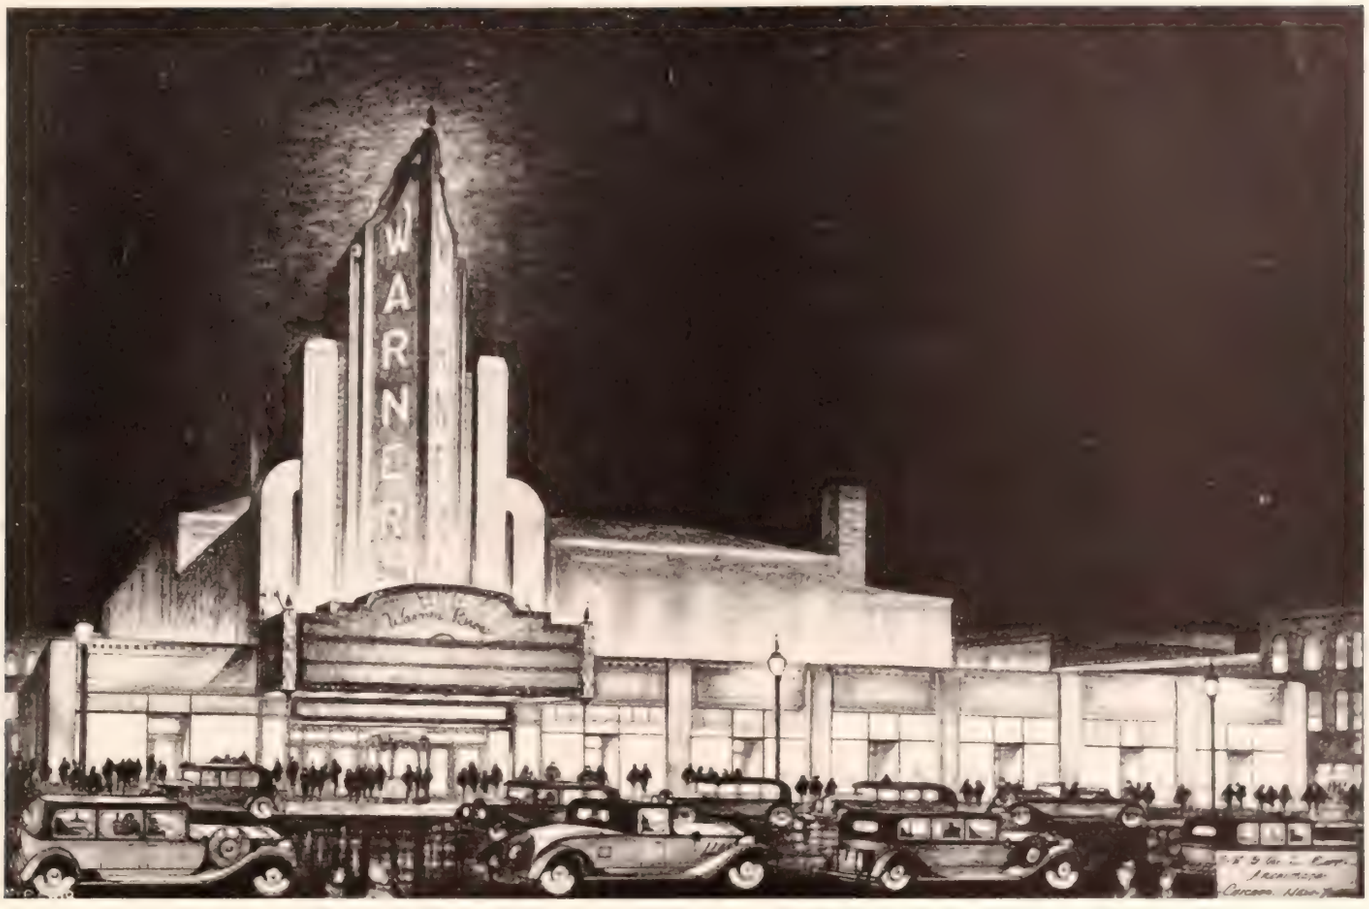
The large screen with its many improvements in projection, together with the sound pictures and other improvements which are developing, cannot do other than open up wide fields for many ideas and novel inventions for artistic arrangements of the proscenium arch.

C. W. & Geo. L. Rapp, in their forthcoming designs for theatres, are developing the stage in such a way as to bring forward the screen in order to have the presentation of the talking picture and its actors in more intimate touch with the audience.



A great many changes are to be made to accommodate these new inventions and theatres which have been built but a short time ago will undergo vast changes in order to be made suitable for changed methods of motion picture presentation.

Many important refinements are now being made in the projection rooms in order to give sufficient space and efficient operating conditions for new mechanism. Developments, these, which will necessitate increased size and changed design of these particular units of the theatre.



The acoustical problem, the source of much trouble in many houses built only a short time since, now is being overcome, and with the introduction to the market of many acoustical materials and the rearrangement and changing of forms in the auditorium, this somewhat embarrassing problem is now being solved.

Many theatres that have been designed and constructed during the past few years have been successful as regards acoustical conditions, but, aided by additional research and experience in this particular matter, the newer houses will have many new features to accommodate and to improve the transmission of sound waves.

Plans have been made and many are now under construction, for the small type houses, ranging from 1,500 to 2,200 seats. These smaller houses, equipped with sound and designed to accommodate the large screens, are under construction in small towns and community centers. They promise to stimulate a new interest and enthusiasm for motion pictures in these particular locations.

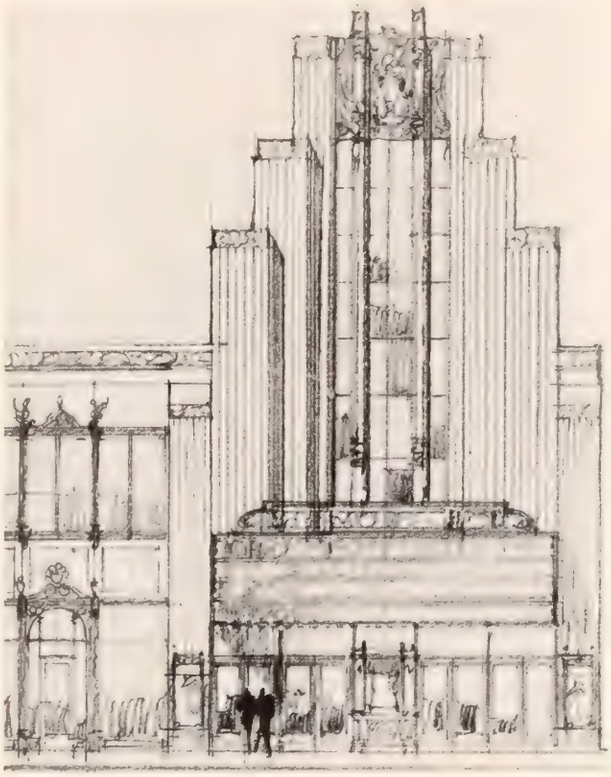
The color plates illustrating this article have been specially prepared to show the variations and the scope of thought the architects are bringing to the design of different types of mammoth picture theatres, and they clearly indicate the styles of architecture which C. W. & Geo. L. Rapp will incorporate in a great many of their future work in the theatre field.

New Influences Affecting Design

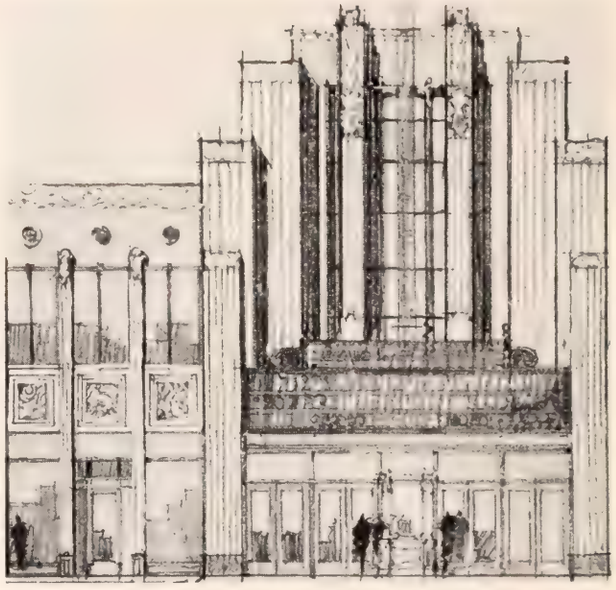
It is the belief of this organization that styles of architecture in this day will change just as have customs and living conditions which influence them. Indeed, with the rapidly changing scene characteristic of the mechanical age, bringing a rapid procession of new and startling inventions, one must conclude that theatre building of the near future will be entirely and totally different from that of the immediate past.

While much of the past work of architects who have won prominence as specialists in theatre design has been very meritorious and undoubtedly has accomplished a great deal toward uplifting and beautifying this particular class of architecture, there is no doubt that work which now is being planned is of a much different type—a type which will meet the requirements of modern conditions and the changed tendencies in the art of picture presentations.

Here are problems which involve not only the mechanics of showmanship but as well the changing tastes of the picture-going public.



Borrowing Features from Past



While the break with the past will be emphatic, nevertheless this reality of the present was not unforeseen during late years, and it is only natural that the new will adapt to its needs the best features of the old. Indeed, provisions have been made in several notable instances where a flexibility of design lends itself to seemingly radical alteration of style by means of changes relatively simple to accomplish. It is not to say that this is by any means the rule, but several theatres of fairly recent date incorporate features which clearly reflect that the changing present was not unforeseen in the comparatively near past.

One of the most interesting theatres in this country, and one which the author believes is paving the way for something quite new in theatre architecture, is the Brooklyn Paramount Theatre in Brooklyn, N. Y. This mammoth house, situated on a prominent corner in the heart of the downtown district of the city, and seating 4,000, is an admirable treatment of both the atmospheric type and also of the typical style of theatre design.

A vast auditorium has been designed in monumental architecture, and lighting effects have been gained by perforated detail ornament, surfaces and forms, which produce the effect of a vast composite scene. The different motifs piercing the sky, and the atmospheric effects have been admirably designed. This is the only house of its kind so far produced and the architects regard it as quite a departure from stylized notions, and one which will find its influence exerted on many of the larger theatres that are to come.

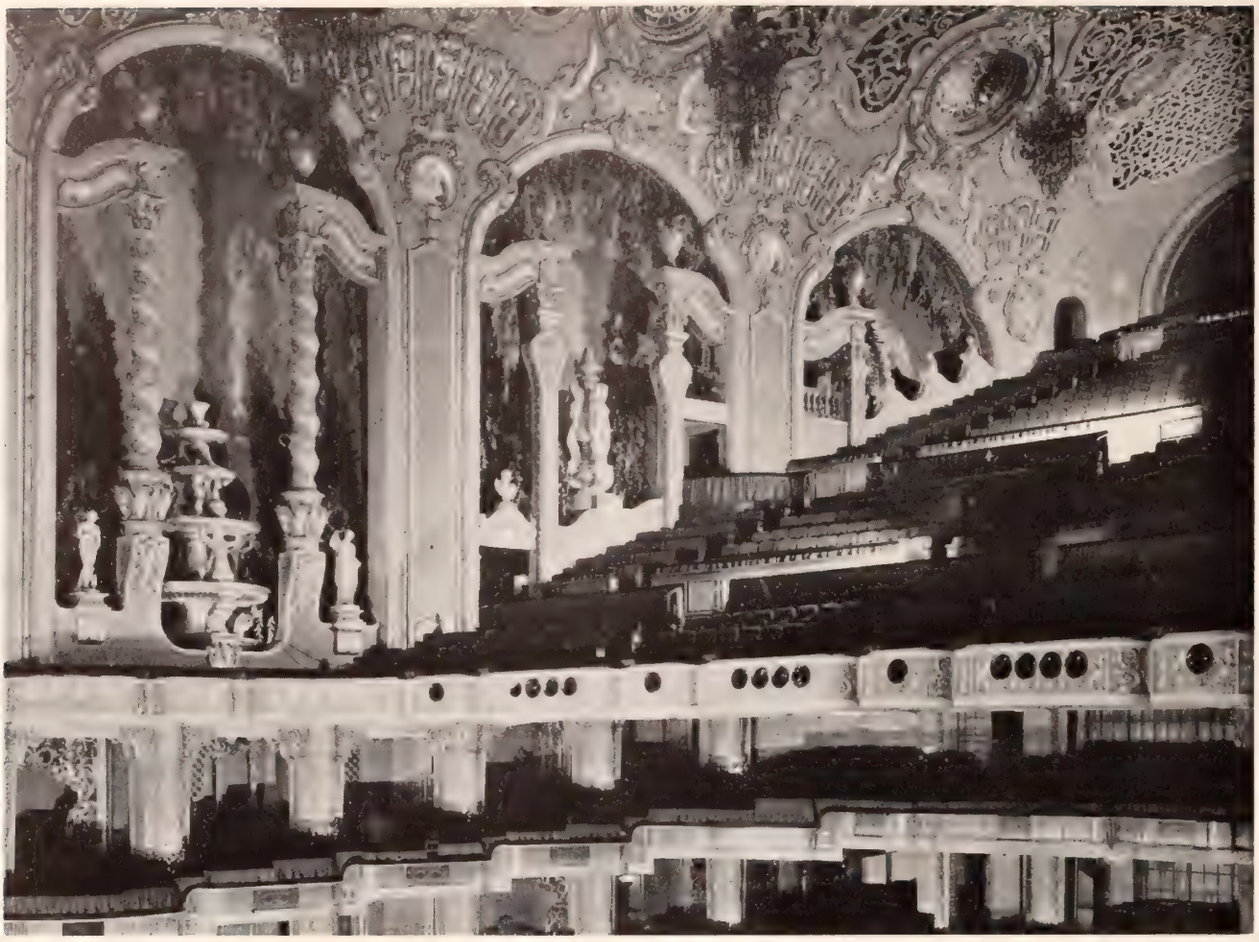
Atmospheric effect has been obtained by the installation of two ceilings, one of which is used as a reflecting surface for the sky effect and the other, which is a lower ceiling, has been beautifully designed in interesting motifs.

Modern art has found its place in several of the minor rooms, which have been executed beautifully in decorations of silver, gold and brilliant colors.

The Paramount Theatre, Toledo, Ohio, one of the outstanding purely atmospheric theatres, offered an unusual problem on account of the steep balcony which was absolutely necessary, making it somewhat unpleasing for this type of auditorium. But the architects have combined two types in one. The atmospheric type which is now in use later can be changed to produce an auditorium with a semi-atmospheric effect, or one which will feature the typical auditorium treatment with sky effect eliminated. Since the auditorium is very high, the vast ceiling has been so planned that a very pleasing decorative treatment of the new art can be applied, and given unusual effect through flood lighting—all of which promises to achieve something strikingly original.

Use of Decorative Features

The Grand Lobby of this particular theatre is very interesting, inasmuch as its decorative treatment to a great extent has been gained by the adroit use of mural paintings, decorative treatment of colors and glass.



Loew's Jersey City Theatre, Jersey City, N. J., is another type of theatre of the period treatment and one which has been so popular with the theatre-going public.

Loew's Kings Theatre, Brooklyn, N. Y., seating 4,200, is a house of particular merit. Practically all seats are on the main floor, with the exception of a certain number located on a small mezzanine at the rear of the house. This makes a vast area both in width and length, and enables the architect to keep a comparatively low ceiling height.

With these conditions the architects were able to design an auditorium of mammoth scale, introducing monumental motifs to support a very large decorative dome, all of which has been brilliantly lighted by a series of light coves from which different tones can be played upon the decorative treatment of this vast ceiling.

Although this particular house has been designed in the style of Louis XIV, yet it has many features of modern design, and the effort was made to bring into the design of this particular theatre the modernized treatment of a period style.

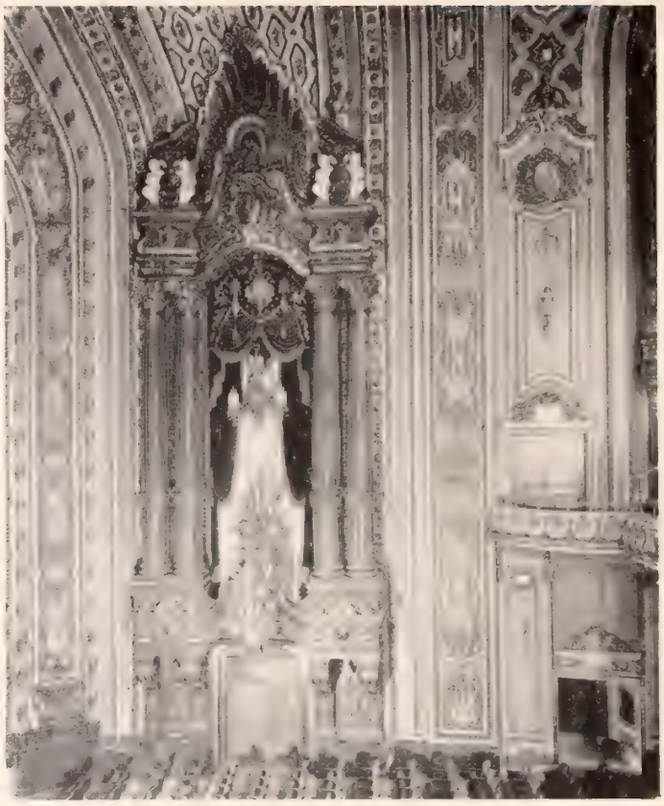
Its grand lobbies and foyers, which have been admirably designed in walnut mirrors and marbles, can be classed as among the finest examples executed in this country.

Large Auditorium Treatments

The theatres built for Paramount-Publix at Portland, Oregon, and Seattle, Washington, also offer excellent examples of the treatment of large auditoriums. The scale has been increased in order to give the effect of close contact and to offset the feeling of large empty spaces which is so common where large motifs have not been taken into consideration.

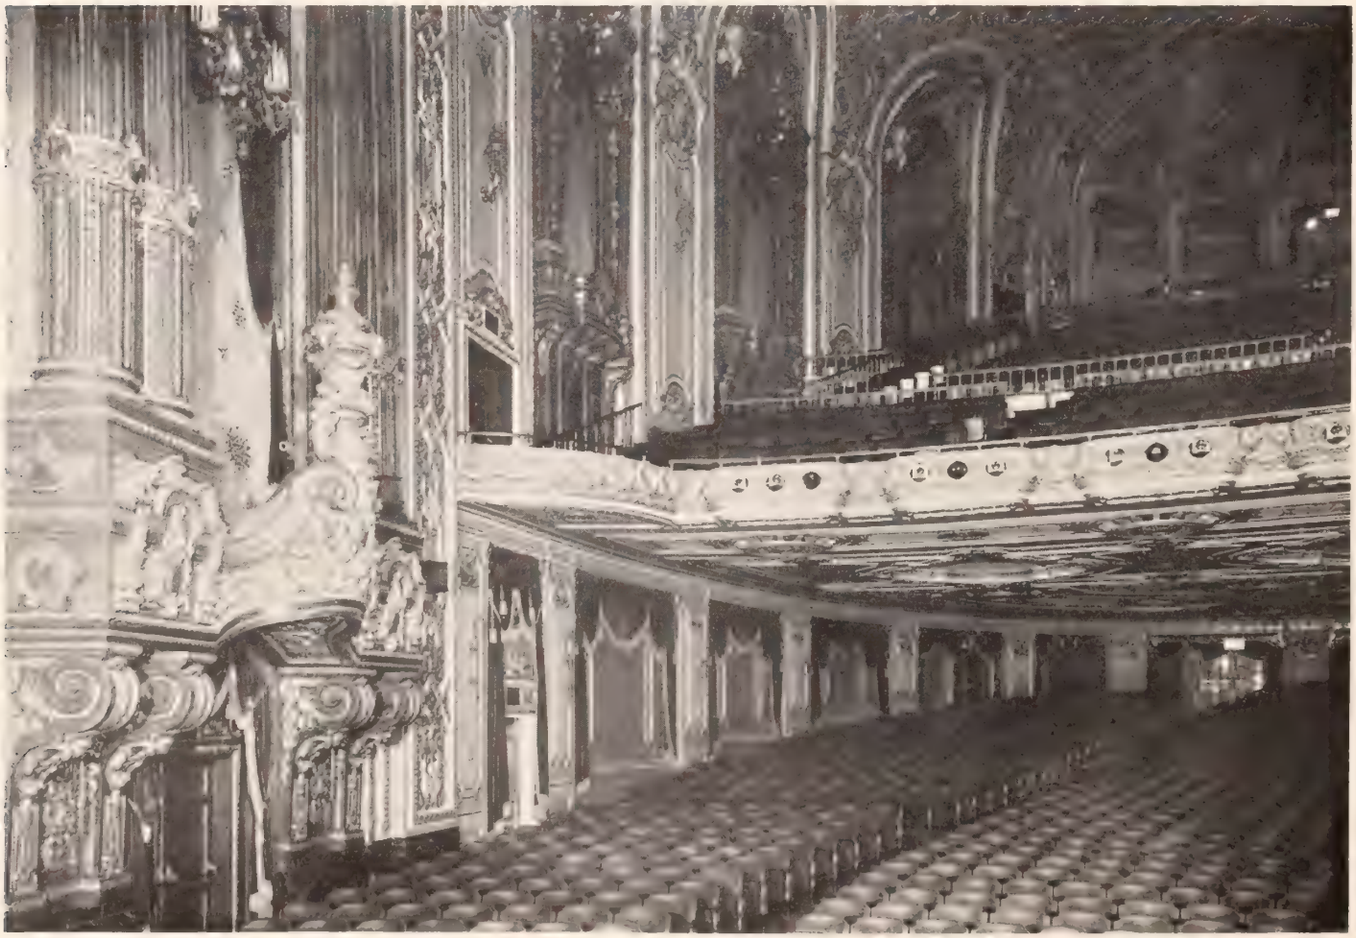
It is the architects' belief that although an auditorium may be very large in order to accommodate a given number of seats, the motifs, detail, etc., should be used in such a way as not to accentuate or to make the spectator conscious of the effect of its actual size, but rather to reduce its size in order to produce a feeling of more intimacy.

Some years ago the building of a theatre in a suburban section frequently met with a great deal of objection and criticism from the more influential people of the particular community. This presented a problem for the builder which the architects have been very careful to take into account in the effort to overcome resistance to the building of modern picture theatres. Architects have made it a point to initiate a comprehensive survey of the particular community in which a small house is to be built, and so design their production as to make it harmonize as much as possible with the architecture of the residential or business buildings of the community.



Inasmuch as the theatre for a residential community becomes more or less a community institution, care must be taken to have certain features and personnel meet with the approval and the satisfaction of the public to which it is to cater.

One must bear in mind that a community house draws practically the same crowd every week, and becomes more or less a resort of the people of the community.



Likewise the theatre becomes a meeting place and a place of entertainment for children. Parents becoming acquainted with the personnel and management of a small community theatre feel safe in sending their children to a house of this type, knowing that they will receive every courtesy as well as every safeguard and comfort.

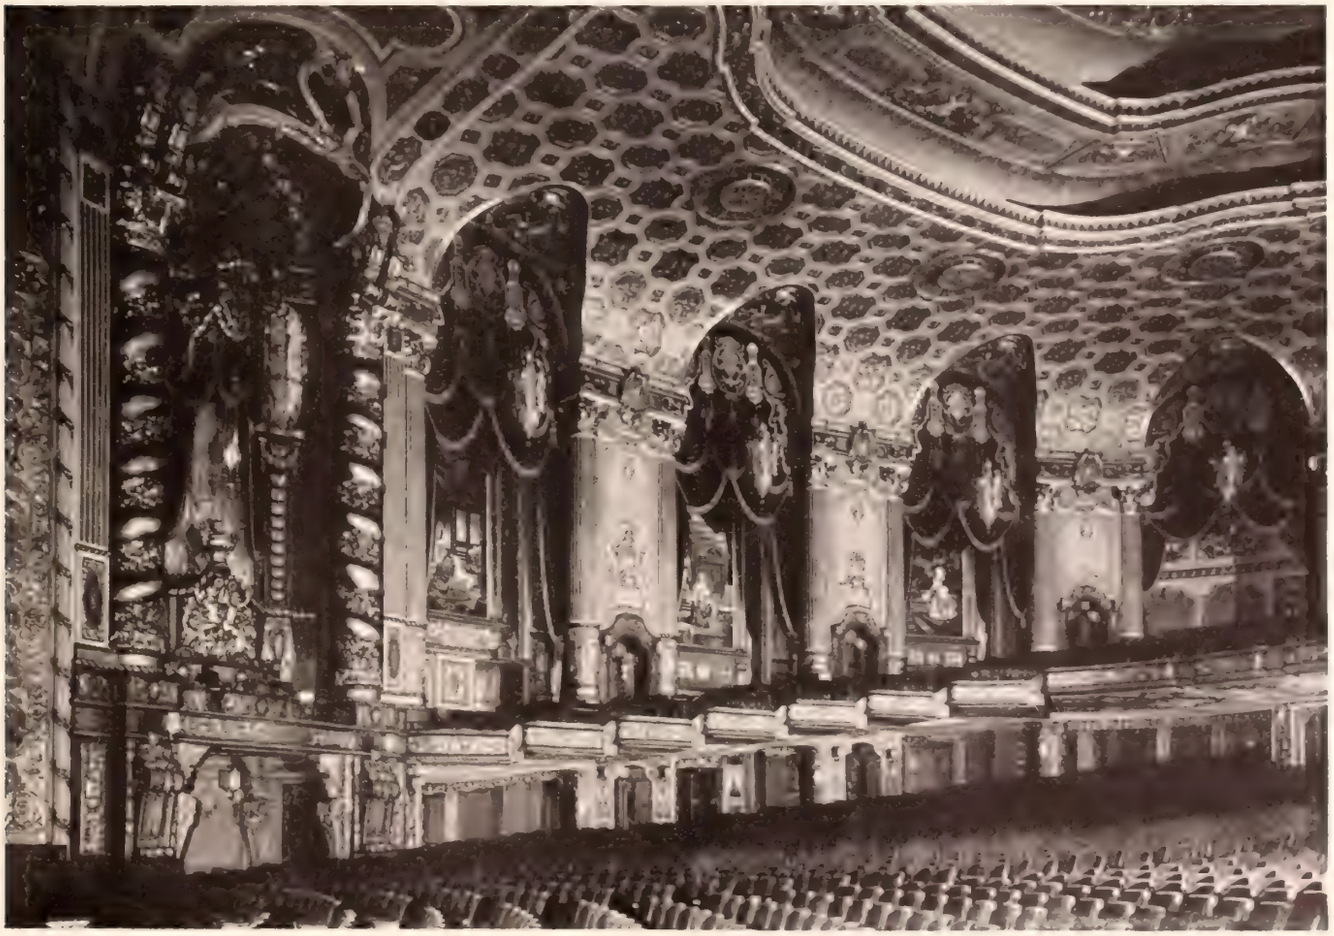
The author has noticed that in many of the small community houses special performances are arranged for children only, and the whole event becomes a gala day about which children talk and to which they look forward with great eagerness. At such performances children are received by the management and ushers who act as hosts to them and see that they are all properly cared for. This is one of the important items which has made the picture theatre very popular in residential sections, and together with refined architecture and decorative features has been responsible for overcoming much of the objection that was raised against theatres of the community type years ago.

The Era of Color

Although it is said that we now are living in an age in which mechanical inventions increasingly are absorbing the public interest, it is at the same time true that this same age finds the American public very much interested in the so-called era of color. For today we find color dominating many different types of buildings and also very much apparent in wearing apparel, costumes, as well as in stage effects and poster art. It is also most prominently identified with the appliances produced by the mechanical age, such as automobiles, pleasure boats, etc.



This same desire for color is also meeting with favor in the modern treatment of theatre interiors as well as exteriors. Architects find that the mechanical age is offering many opportunities and conveniences for furthering this desire for color, and that its inventions and refinements of materials and apparatus are vastly aiding them to obtain very unusual color effects.

Colored lighting has been arranged very successfully in some of the larger theatres, and experience and research have brought forward other ideas in the combination of colors which will be strikingly evident in architectural work forthcoming in the theatre field.

The changing of tones and the placement of electrical units, under a system of design and decorative motifs, will be governed solely by light effects. This will mean the elimination of a great deal of expensive plastic ornament and other features which before the development of modern lighting facilities was commonly used, though somewhat costly, due to its necessity in the scheme of making a complete or unified architectural design.

In theatres designed for large cities where life is more or less congested and only the few have opportunity of seeing the great outdoors, the architects find that the introduction of foliage, trees, fountains, water displays and the like, have particular value in attracting the attention and winning the interest of its patrons. Also, the introduction of wild life in the way of birds of unusual plumage attracts much attention and affords a great deal of enjoyment to this theatre-going public.

Decorative furniture, carpets and draperies always will find an appropriate place and an extreme value in theatres, both large and small, and too much thought in regard to the design of pleasing forms cannot be exercised on these particular items. Furniture for theatres should be unusual and should bring forth new ideas or styles. In other words it should function as a model or forerunner of innovations that are to come into general use in modified forms in the future.

It is most noticeable that the furnishings and the color schemes of theatres are influencing greatly the taste for good surroundings in the homes of the masses, and the author frequently has been told by officials of firms specializing in decorative arts that a particular piece of furniture, or a particular color scheme of an interior of a particular theatre, has served as the inspiration and the model of furnishings in demand by customers.

However, the architect must bear in mind that the furnishings of a theatre should be different than that generally used in domestic work. It should, for one important item, be larger in scale. It should be more floridly decorative and should be somewhat unusual.

Lighting fixtures are likewise changing with the modern trend of decorative art, which is bringing into use the many variations of colored glass. Forms are being made which combine very successfully different designs which now are playing a more important part in lighting fixtures than heretofore.

Many fixtures designed a few years ago were of the period type, which involved a great deal of beaded work, pendeloques, hangings, etc., but with the modern trend and with the wish for color paramount, the desire is for simplified lighting fixtures of varied designs of pressed glass with the introduction of different tones.

An ever-increasing number of improvements are being made for stage equipment, such as movable stage rigging and adjustable mechanical equipment for stage floors. Many clever inventions have been brought forward in the last few years by the desire for something new and novel with which to regale the theatre-goers. This desire by the public is ever-increasing and one cannot help but feel that there are still greater improvements and even more astonishing novelties awaiting sudden realization as a result of newly designed stage apparatus.

The same can be said for the mechanical stage lighting effects and also the different mechanical equipment which is used throughout an entire theatre for the governing and the manipulating of lighting units.

No theatre owner today would think of building a theatre, regardless of size, without a modern ventilation plant. Many theatre owners years ago did not provide this prime necessity, only later to find that the inclusion of apparatus as original equipment would have been an economy and a means to increased box office returns. Then the ventilation plant was not considered necessary. Today it is, and for the reason that it has been proved that the properly ventilated theatre, providing heated air in winter and cooling in summer, is the theatre that continues to show profits in the face of such opposing forces as the diseases common in winter, and the discomforts of heat in summer.

Theatre builders can well afford to install a very modern system, for the increased patronage, proportional to the quality of the atmospheric conditions provided patrons, soon reduces the original costs involved in making the installation.

Future of Wide Film and Large Screen To Be Determined by Public Reaction

ADDED EXPENSE, DOUBLING OF SPACE REQUIREMENTS AND HEAVY CURRENT LOAD REQUIRED ARE AMONG OBSTACLES WHICH MUST BE HURDLED BY NEW DEVELOPMENT

By J. H. KURLANDER

IT has been remarked often that the ultimate in realism in the Motion Picture art will have been reached when success has crowned the efforts to incorporate perfectly within each picture the elements of:

1. Sound
2. Color
3. Stereoscopy

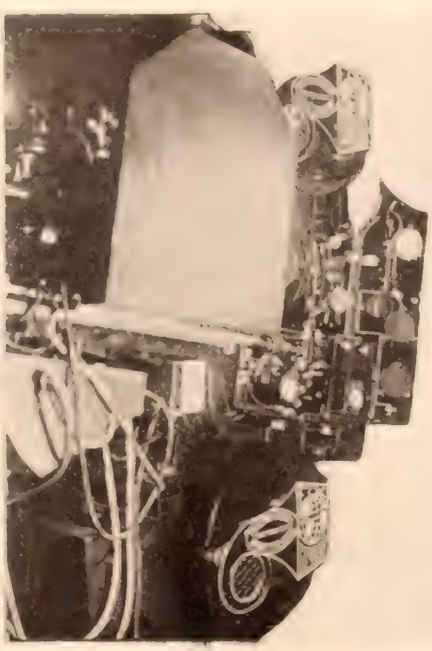
Sound pictures today are an accepted fact and are rapidly coming to be considered as commonplace in the general scheme of things associated with the theatre. Whether or not they have attained a state of practical perfection is a matter of individual opinion, but it is sufficient to remark that the research facilities now devoted to this branch of the business are so tremendous as to insure marked improvements should such be at all possible.

The element of color, also has achieved a measurable degree of success by virtue of the many years of effort which have been devoted to this end of the work, so that motion picture art is in a fair way toward realizing two-thirds of the requirements for a realistic duplication of the scenes occurring in life.

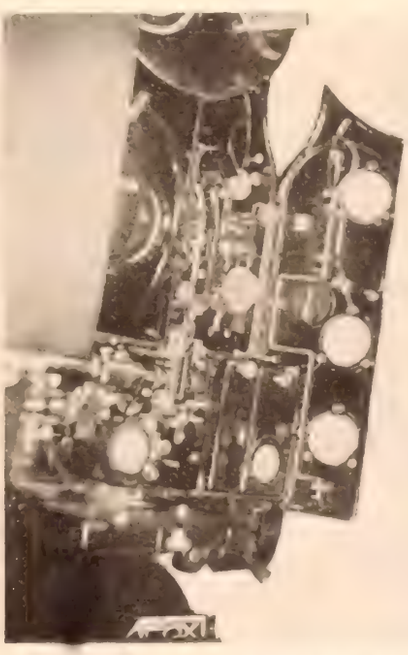
The bugaboo of stereoscopy, however, arises to confound even the most optimistic protagonists of the motion picture's millenium. Largely by reason of the exaggerated claims which were advanced in the early experimental days of the wide film, stereoscopy, in the minds of most persons, became almost inseparably associated with the showing of large pictures through the medium of wide, or double width film.

Whether or not wide film will later prove to be the doorway through which the three dimensional picture will be brought into use or whether stereoscopy will forever remain an impractical dream under the conditions which now obtain in the presentation of pictures need not be considered at this time.

It is sufficient to know that the search for stereoscopic pictures has focused attention on the possibilities of wide film to such an extent that it is being most seriously considered for general use in the motion picture theatres.



Aside from any claims for stereoscopic value, which to date have not been definitely established, the use of wide film may lead to certain advantages which may entirely justify the huge expense involved in "re-tooling" the entire industry.



It is rather generally agreed among sound specialists, for example, that the 80 mil. sound track presently used on 35 mm. film places certain obstacles in the way of obtaining automatic sound control, besides preventing a more efficient generation of volume.

At present much talk centers around the use of a 250 mil. sound track should wide film come into general use, and it is claimed that this provides ample leeway to permit of the adoption of automatic volume control methods as well as making it possible to obtain greater volume for the same transmission. The latter factor, carried to its logical conclusion might eventually lead to a reduction in the amount of equipment required to produce the same sound levels as those used at present.

Overshadowing such relatively unimportant improvements in sound reproduction, however, are the wide angle views which naturally follow a widening of the film. This factor more than anything else, is responsible for the present agitation in the new field of wide film.

A broader field of action in many cases seems desirable and often leads to effects which can be obtained in no other manner. Some attempts have been made to simulate these effects by extreme magnification of the scenes photographed on standard 35 mm. film, and while the results, if not repeated too frequently, offer startling contrasts, the achievement represents merely an expansion in the original scene of limited angular dimensions.

A certain element of novelty is certain to attach to at least the first showings of wide angle picture. It is beyond the perception of anyone to say whether this novelness will crystalize into a general acceptance of the wide picture if it is presented as a permanent innovation, or whether it will languish to the point of mere toleration for lack of a better offering.

It is not outside the realm of conjecture to assume that wide film, under certain conditions, may be used to show pictures of present standard size; that is, on screens from 18 to 24 feet in width. If this is done, a general improvement in picture quality will certainly result, because it will not be necessary to press this wider film to such extremes of magnification as reveal the imperfections of graininess and faulty definition.

The adoption of wide film generally will not be without certain serious difficulties. In the first place, the cost of the raw stock will be practically doubled. Shipment of films to studios, to laboratories, to exchanges, and then to theatres necessarily will involve more effort with attendant increased costs. Transportation charges will be greater and on top of all these items we find the matter of storage. Twice as much space will be required than that for the 35 mm. films.

Need for New Technic

Indeed, it is easy to imagine how under unskilled handling and direction a wide film presentation might appear like a three-ring circus where viewers must forego two-thirds of the action in order to concentrate their attention upon the remaining third.

A certain lack of skill in this new art is to be detected in the scenes of certain wide film pictures shown to date, although it is safe to assume that the necessary experience will be rapidly acquired once this new tool is put to use.

It seems to be generally accepted that the proper method of screening wide film pictures is to have them fill the entire proscenium opening. This is directly in line with the new thought of making the pictures exactly simulate the legitimate stage show in all of its essential characteristics, which include vision, sound, color, and wide field of action.

Considered in this light, the use of wide pictures for all types of scenes does not seem to be at all unreasonable, as it will merely entail a duplication of productions which heretofore have been presented by characters in the life. There are no close-ups on the legitimate stage, nor, indeed, any degree of magnification whatsoever.

This magnification, which is so easily obtained in the projection of motion pictures, need not be altogether dispensed with, although there seems to be no good reason why it cannot be held constant at a fixed level instead of causing it to vary between the wide limits as was so frequently done in the past.

The introduction of sound has done much to restrict these wide limits of magnification and it is not entirely unlikely that wide-pictures will be the final means whereby a fixed degree of magnification will be maintained throughout the entire picture.

Further Magnification

Under extreme magnification such as is today commonly encountered in theatres, imperfections in the film such as graininess and surface scratches are all too clearly revealed and the effect is, in general, that observed when a printed photograph is viewed at close range under a high-power lens.

If the projected picture were maintained at its present size, the use of wide-film would result in a much more clearly defined picture, superior in quality to those now shown. This consideration alone, however, would hardly justify the expense of changing to wide film.

It goes without saying that a general change in equipment will be required throughout the entire industry if wide film finds a broad and general application. Probably for the reason that the theatre always has been the final testing ground for new ideas in the motion picture art, more publicity has been given, for the present at least, to the technicalities of projection of wide pictures than to any other equally important branch of the work.

It still is too early to specify exactly what changes the adoption of wide film will bring to theatres which for long years have been equipped to project a uniform standard size of film. Quite obviously, the first change is that of projectors.

Aside from mechanical devices for handling such film there is the matter of screen illumination, always a problem in the large de luxe theatres. It seems certain that currents ranging from 150 to 250 amperes will be required to satisfactorily project the new pictures. High intensity carbon electrodes of the type commonly used for high power searchlight work are available for taking these high currents so that as far as screen illumination is concerned no special difficulty is expected to develop in connection with the adoption of wide film projection.

It is doubtful whether the general run of theatres have sufficient reserve capacity in their generating equipment to satisfactorily supply projection currents of the magnitude mentioned without seriously overloading the power plants, wiring systems and switching equipment. Those large theatres in which duplicate installations of emergency generators were wisely made may possible get by with relatively minor changes in their electrical systems, but the smaller houses occupy the not enviable position of being required to wholly reconstruct their projection rooms and thereafter re-equip them throughout with new apparatus.

Reconstruction changes will not be exactly easy for these small houses where a short-sighted policy of skimping was followed at the time of planning and later in building them. In such theatres space for the housing of the necessary additional equipment is at a premium. In many cases the installation of sound apparatus has utilized every square inch of space which could be rendered available by extensions so that elaborate alterations will be needed should additional space be required.

On the stage the principal changes involved are those of larger screen surfaces and additional, or larger, horns to maintain the directional effects which many persons seem to think are so important in sound pictures.

Large screens, covering the entire stage opening already are in common use in many theatres and the matter of additional horns, should such be requisite, appears to offer no serious obstacle.

As frequently happens in the early development stages of a new work, independent research by several companies has resulted in the establishment of private standards each designed to meet the convenience of the particular company.

In the field of wide film, for example, we find three widths of film which have been experimentally used. These are 56 mm., 65 mm. and 70 mm. The first of these appears to have been abandoned so far as concerns the possibility of its being proposed as a universal standard.

Propose Compromise Standard

There is some difficulty in reconciling the various proponents of the remaining two sizes, so it has been suggested to arbitrarily create a neutral size in order to satisfy by means of the ancient practice of compromise the parties now at odds over the standard ultimately to be adopted by all. Some persons even propose that both the 65 mm. and 70 mm. sizes be retained by the respective companies whose experimental work has temporarily at least committed them to their respective film width and then take up the difference in the two sizes by constructing a so-called "flexible" projector which would project both films with equal ease.

For the present, the establishment of wide film standards is probably the most important work yet to be achieved in this new field of motion picture endeavor.

CONSOLIDATED CATALOGUE

THE following listing of sound apparatus and accessories has been revised to date. Specific information given in connection with the listing is based on statements of the manufacturers or authorized distributors thereof. The approximate delivery time noted for the various sound systems is as of July 1, 1930. All equipment on which the required information was available up to the time of going to press is included. Manufacturers and distributors of the products listed in this department invite thorough investigation of their equipment by theatre owners.

No Method of Making Friends Equals the Method of Making Good

There is often a wide difference between the opinion which a manufacturer entertains of his product and that which is entertained of it by its users.

Most purchasers prefer the latter particularly those who desire to better their own product or who are choosing a commodity for the first time.

Consequently we reproduce from time to time, voluntary letters received from users of

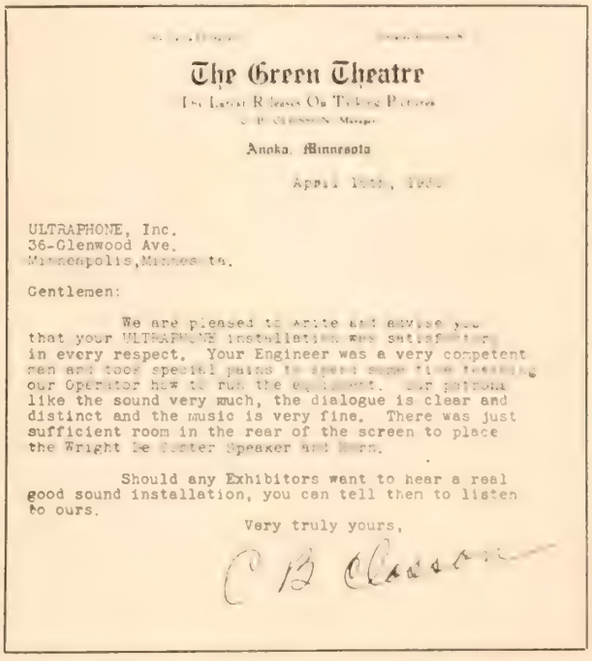
Gentlemen:



It was just a year ago today that the first ULTRAPHONE installation was completed and inasmuch as every installation since that time included the Wright DeCoster Reproducers we felt duty bound to write and let you know how well satisfied we were with your product.

In going over our records, we find that your speakers and No. 9 Horns were used in every one of our 132 installations in theatres throughout this northwest territory and in addition, we have placed 42 of your speakers with theatres having other equipments than ours, but who decided to improve the reproduction of their equipment by installing Wright DeCoster Speakers.

We might also add that during the past year we have experimented with and tried out approximately 10 or 12 other makes of speakers, some of them selling for two or three times your price, but after each test we found your Model 107 Speaker superior in every way.

We take this means of thanking you for your splendid co-operation and sincerely trust that the use of your Reproducers will always continue to give us the same satisfactory results.

Yours very truly,

Gentlemen:

We are pleased to write and advise you that your ULTRAPHONE installation was satisfactory in every respect. Your Engineer was a very competent man and took special pains to spend some time teaching our Operator how to run the equipment. Our patrons like the sound very much, the dialogue is clear and distinct and the music is very fine. There was just sufficient room in the rear of the screen to place the Wright De Coster Speaker and Horn.

Should any Exhibitors want to hear a real good sound installation, you can tell them to listen to ours.

Very truly yours,

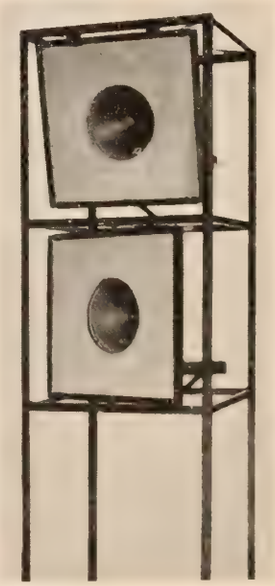
HORN TOWERS FOR ANY SIZE THEATRE

TYPE D-3



NOW MADE AVAILABLE BY GATES

These two-horn towers are designed especially for well known cone speakers such as Jensen, Wright-DeCoster, Best, Rola, etc. Every modern theatre demands that perfect distribution of sound that can only be obtained with a correctly constructed tower. Type C-2 is adjustable for any type cone speaker and is easily masked. Baffles are of 1½" Celotex. The top baffle is for horizontal throw, and the bottom baffle for vertical throw. Its narrow width makes it very satisfactory for a side screen installation as well as sound screen. Type D-3 is for Wright-DeCoster No. 7 or 9 Horns. They are swung by chains and adjustable to any horizontal or vertical angle. It is constructed of heavy iron and finished in black. It is exceptionally easy to mask.

Carbon Contact Jaw for Peerless High Amperage Lamp

Designed expressly for use with the Peerless High Amperage Reflector Arc Lamp — composed of but two castings making no break from the wire terminal to the point of carbon contact.

Because of the upper "V" type contact the carbon jaw is compelled to ride parallel with carbon thereby helping to keep positive crater at focal point. Constant carbon contact reduces pitting to a minimum.

A profitable item for dealers everywhere. Write for details.

New Development
for
Theatre Ventilation and Air Conditioning

These new Clarage Type HSV Fans, built in sizes to meet all requirements, are ideal for all types of ventilation and air conditioning work.

Operating at higher speeds, the new HSV Fans can be driven by standard, high speed motors, saving a good share of the usual motor cost. Also, having a full self-limiting horsepower characteristic, they can often be driven by motors one size smaller than customary practice, thus another substantial saving in first cost. And they run absolutely quiet.

Before you make any decision in regard to ventilation or air conditioning, write for complete information on this new development. Clarage equipment is endorsed by leading architects and engineers, used by leading contractors. A great many theatres designed by Rapp & Rapp are equipped with Clarage systems.

Send for our new Catalog 57.

"UP" IN FRONT

Are the Lighting Fixtures in your Theatre, keeping pace with Magnafilm — Talkies — Technicolor? Many a house has been given a fresh start and taken its place in front of the procession by bringing its Lighting Fixtures up to date. While you are remodeling, keep in mind that your Lighting Fixtures are an important factor—seen at least once by every patron at every performance.

We will be pleased to consult with you and to submit preliminary sketches of Distinctive Lighting Equipment for your Theatre — entirely without obligation on your part.

Among the outstanding Theatres for which we have furnished Lighting Fixtures are:

Hollywood—New York
Loew's 175th St.—New York
Warner Bros. Strand—New York
Paradise—Chicago
Marbro—Chicago
Granada—Chicago
Tivoli—Chicago
Uptown—Chicago
Midland—Kansas City
UnitedArtists—Chicago
United Artists—Detroit

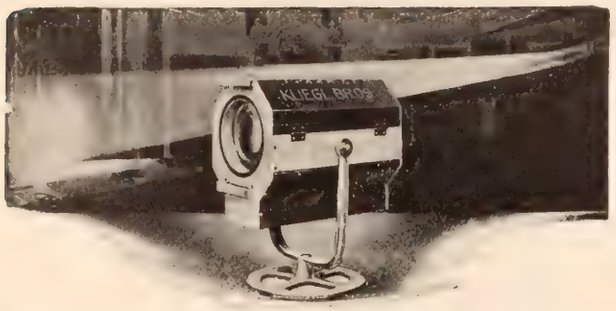
Pioneers—Both in theatre cooling

Wittenmeier Machinery Company equipment, installed in the first theatres in the country to adopt this modern means of patron comfort, are still giving satisfaction and drawing crowds at the Riviera and Central Park theatres, Chicago. It is no coincidence that Rapp & Rapp, pioneer designers of many of the country's most beautiful and successful playhouses chose Wittenmeier equipment in those pioneer days of theatre cooling.

We are proud of our continued association with Rapp & Rapp in many of their theatres in all parts of the country.



Here are only a few of the many Wittenmeier air cooling installations—totalling over 100—that point the value of continuous satisfaction over a period of many years:
